EASTER DAWNS ON RUHR RIOT

FEAR DEATH OF 11 WILL BRING MORE CLASHES

Krupp Men Slain by French.

BERLIN, March 31.—The situation in the Ruhr became highly dangerous tonight, as Essen counted its dead and the wounded—the toll of a riot about the vast Krupp factories. Machine gun bullets of French troops killed eleven and wounded thirty-five severely, according to a report received in the German foreign office from one of the officials who is gathering evidence among the Krupp workers.

Three more of the wounded are reported dying. Many other workers received minor wounds.

The situation is aggravated by the fact that tomorrow and Monday the Krupp factories will be closed for the Easter holidays. It is feared that there will be clashes between the civilians and French troops. The German officials are attempting to quiet the population but are handicapped because the police force has been disbanded.

Workers' Envoy Slain.

One of the six who fell with the first shots from the French machine guns was a member of the workers' council, named Sumder, who went to the troops as intermediary seeking their withdrawal.

The first detachment of French troops which had come into the ancient Ruhr town, supported by armored cars, according to the latest reports. It was reported that when the machine gun detachment opened fire the remainder of the troops charged the crowd with fixed bayonets, but the foreign office declares all the deaths and wounds were from machine gun fire. No bayonet wounds were reported.

BLAME WORKMEN

ESSEN, March 31.—Militant workmen surrounded and attacked a detail of French infantry at the Krupp works here this morning. The lieutenant in charge gave the order to fire and six workers were killed and thirty-five wounded with the first volley.

The morning's serious collision between the troops and workers was incited by the passive resistance policy and occurred shortly after 8 o'clock. An officer, two sergeants, two corporals and seven privates entered the Krupp garage on Altendorfstrasse to requisition motor trucks.

The arrival of the detail was announced to all hands in the factory building near the garage by the blowing of sirens. Hundreds of men left their machines and poured out of the shops and congregated in front of the garage.

Surround French Soldiers.

The Krupp workmen were decidedly hostile. Their curses and shouts of derision were heard above the continuous wail of the sirens. When their numbers increased to more than 2,000 the twelve men in horizon blue were completely surrounded.

A stone was thrown. It struck a soldier on the ear and was the signal for a shower of missiles, including pieces of timber and small pieces of steel. The mob tried to connect a steel hose with a pipe from a hot water system so they could boil the invaders, but the pipe was too large.

A lieutenant ordered the workmen to open a path to the gate so he could withdraw the detachment, but the answer came in boots and stones. He ordered a second fire over the heads of the crowd, but it had the way, but still the mob fled.

Given Order to Fire.

Then the order was given to fire. A number of workers fell. The soldiers continued firing and advanced from the garage. Each exhausted his clip of cartridges and then reloaded. The mob fled.

During the tragedy a side show was being staged in the office of the garage, where five French engineers had entered and superintend the requisitioning of trucks. They were set upon by a dozen workmen, assaulted, and robbed of their personal effects. A soldier chauffeur, sitting in a touring car outside was severely wounded and the car was torn to pieces.

Paris returned with tanks and armored cars and absolutely empty.

INSIDE STORY OF CRONKHITE CASE ARMY MYSTERY

Rosenbluth Called a 'Slayer,' 'Martyr.'

BY DONALD EWING.

CHAPTER I.

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Four and a half years ago a column of soldiers standing at rest in a single file trail through a section of Camp Lewis, Wash., so densely wooded that visibility was limited to a few yards, suddenly snapped to an unordered attention as several pistol shots echoed through the trees.

While necks and eyes were strained in efforts to penetrate the thickness of the near jungle, a medical officer was summoned forward. In a clearing at the side of the trail, scarcely fifty yards from the head of the column, he found a major, a captain, and a sergeant, alone. The major was stretched on the ground—dead. The other two kneeled over him.

"He shot himself," one of them explained.

Cast of the Drama.

That was on Oct. 25, 1918. The dead major was "Buddy" Cronkhite—Alexander P. in army records. The captain was Robert Rosenbluth of New York, while Roland Pothier of Providence, R. I., was the sergeant—a bugler on duty as orderly to the major.

For nearly three years the story of Rosenbluth and Pothier that Cronkhite accidentally killed himself while shooting at a target was accepted as the whole truth, so far as the public knew. Today both are under federal indictment for willful and premeditated murder of their superior officer. Pothier has confessed that he fired the fatal shot, first charging Rosenbluth with complicity and then exonerating him.

Rosenbluth still is certain Cronkhite fired the shot. A turmoil of investigation has brought attacks on the war department for reported gross negligence and on the department of justice for alleged perversion of justice through political and social influence.

Criminal or Martyr?

Pothier is in a penitentiary pending court appeals. Rosenbluth is free through legal technicalities. The indictments still stand. A congressional investigation, with congressmen and public leaders lined up against each other is impending. On one hand Rosenbluth is termed a persecuted martyr—persecuted by the government, persecuted by Gentiles, persecuted because he is a Jew. On the other he is called a prosecuted murderer—a deliberate slayer whose prosecution was checked by the intercession of government officials.

The events which have brought about these conditions—four and a half years after Cronkhite's death—form a story that starts in Georgia, runs to the Pacific coast, into the starvation areas of Siberia and the officialdom of the Chita Far East republic, back to New York, on to Washington, and into the buildings of the national government. It is a story of lust—perhaps stolen—papers, secret codes, confessions, secret service investigations, grand jury inquiries, and legal exonerations. Were one to diagram the diverging angles of the fifty-four months of action the result would resemble a railroad switch yard, so many branches are there.

Answer Still in Doubt.

Through it all, no final answer has been given to the Cronkhite death—accident, suicide, or murder. Only the surface has been touched in the facts as revealed to the public.

This story is the first of a series which will present the facts of the case impartially. There will be no attempt to prove any one guilty or innocent. Starting from a date prior to the shooting and on up to the present time, the facts as gathered in an investigation covering 11,000 miles of travel and more than a dozen cities will be laid out side by side for the reader to judge. Persecuted martyr or prosecuted murderer—suicide, accident, murder—the records dealing with each angle will be given.

Major Typical Yank.

"Buddy" Cronkhite was a true product of the army. A son of Maj. Gen. Adelbert Cronkhite, he was the direct descendant through his mother's family of the first graduate of West Point. His uncle was the first Union officer killed in the civil war. When this country entered the world war there were three generations of Cronkhites surrounded.

WEEKS ORDERS QUIZ OF TEXAS ARMY SCANDAL

Washington, March 31. — [United Press.]—Secretary of War Weeks today ordered an investigation into the charges that the character of the wife of Capt. Edwin H. Randle of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., had been defamed by Col. A. L. Conger, of the same post.

When Louis A. Karns of Indianapolis, brother of Mrs. Randle, called on Mr. Weeks today to complain against statements Col. Conger is alleged to have made against her, the secretary told him he had received a letter from Mrs. Randle and that he had ordered a complete investigation of the case.

The inquiry will be made by the inspector general's office of the war department. The inspector general will make the investigation mainly at Fort Sam Houston.

Pay Roll Bandit Is Shot by Cop; Loot Recovered

Ernest McCall, colored, 3016 South Park avenue, one of four negroes who robbed Gordon Lowenstein, a collector for the General Market House company, 3714 Cottage Grove avenue, of collections amounting to $4,000, last night was seriously wounded by Policeman Bowen. Others who participated in the holdup escaped. The money and some checks were found on McCall.

Deputy Sheriff Killed in Battle with Robbers

Muskogee, Okla., March 31.—Ben Smith, deputy sheriff of Delaware county, Okla., was killed tonight in a battle with four men who robbed the Bank of Gentry at Gentry, Ark., this afternoon. Smith was shot down near Row, Delaware county, where posses of several hundred men have the bandits surrounded.

Smoke Downs 15 Firemen in Loop Blaze

Fifteen firemen were overcome by smoke last night while fighting a fire that spread rapidly through the basement of the Reynolds building at 181 North Wells street.

Engine Company No. 40 was the first to respond to the alarm. Three of its members, Firemen Joseph Thorock, Elmer G. Lind, and John Bailey, were overcome while attempting to run a line of hose to the heart of the blaze. They were carried out by fellow firemen, the first two being sent to the Iroquois hospital.

Fireman Twice Overcome.

Bailey was revived, and returned to the battle with the flames. He was again overcome, as was Lieut. John McKinnoms of truck No. 6. Both were sent to the hospital. Their condition is not critical.

Capt. Dennis Curtin of Engine company No. 40 and Fireman John Habborcorn and James Shea of Engine company No. 13 had to be carried from the smoke filled basement, but were revived without being sent to the hospital. Eight others were revived in like manner.

Excelsior Causes Smudge.

Burning excelsior, said to have been used by R. Winburg & Co., dealers in restaurant supplies, was responsible for the dense smudge created by the blaze.

With the arrival of First Battalion Chief Anthony Durkin, additional apparatus was summoned and the blaze was quickly extinguished after doors and windows had been smashed to provide outlets for the smoke.

The origin of the fire is undetermined and, although the damage was small, Battalion Chief Durkin declared he would request Fire Attorney Shirley T. High to make an investigation.

$8,000,000 MART FOR FURNITURE FOR NORTH SIDE

Plans for a huge furniture mart, talked of in realty circles for several months, materialized yesterday in the purchase of the entire block lying between Erie and Huron streets, McClurg court and the Lake Shore drive by Whiting & Co., bankers, representing a syndicate. Purchase price was reported at $600,000.

Improvements totaling $7,000,000 are said to be contemplated on this site. Thus the total investment will approximate $8,000,000. Some 1,600,000 square feet of space is to be made available for exposition purposes. Practically all of the space in the huge mart has already been placed under long term leases, it is announced.

The purchase negotiated by Lawrence H. Whiting, president of the banking company, was made from the Newberry Library and the Newberry estate. E. J. Bowes represented the Library and C. F. Durland the estate.

Building operations have already begun. The syndicate's plans call for the completion of the building and occupation by Jan. 1, 1924.

Rumors concerning the furniture mart have stirred business circles for some time.

Real estate news will be found on pages 12 and 13 of part 2.

CANAL'S WEAK DEFENSES GIVE DENBY A SHOCK

Fact Driven Home by Naval Maneuvers.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

PANAMA CITY, March 31.—The Panama canal, the most vital link in our national defense and without which we could not wisely have dared to enter in the 5-5-3 naval armament limitation agreement, is virtually devoid of essential protection from an enemy.

The gravity of the situation has been brought home with a shock to Secretary of the Navy Denby and other government officials who journeyed here on the U. S. S. Henderson to witness the maneuvers of the American fleet in the Pacific.

With air defense practically nonexistent and the land fortifications lacking in guns of the longest range a navy inferior to ours could put the canal out of commission with ease and then might succeed in taking and occupying the Canal Zone. If the canal were only crippled we should be unable to move our forces from one coast to another without such delay as would be likely to spell ultimate defeat.

Canal Now Vital to Nation.

"Without the canal we would be fighting with one arm in a sling," said one high naval officer, "and then the first thing we knew we would have both arms in a sling. And don't forget that the day we permit the canal to be wrested from us that day we lose our national prestige. We could lose the Philippines without suffering much humiliation, but not so the canal, which has become a part of our nation as vital to our well being as either coast."

Congress so far has been deaf to appeals by the war and navy departments for adequate defense of the Canal Zone, although it has been demonstrated that the defenses must be planned and provided and maintained in peace in instant readiness for use and that when war appears on the horizon it will be too late.

May Wait Too Late.

"You must bear in mind," said Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, commander of the American army forces in the zone, "that the next war we get into is most likely to be declared by the United States and that the overt act causing that declaration of war will be the bombing of the canal by the prospective enemy. Then it will be too late to prepare. Nobody doubts that the first and major objective of an enemy attacking the United States will be the destruction of the canal, and at present we are asleep at the switch and the canal at the mercy of an aggressor."

The ease with which the canal could be put out of commission was demonstrated during the recent naval maneuvers. The black or "enemy" fleet, commanded by Admiral Eberle, eluded the blue or American fleet, commanded by Vice Admiral MacDonald, and anchored in the harbor of Port Culebra, Costa Rica, from which an airplane carrier launched theoretically two airplane bombers capable of flying the 386 miles to the Canal Zone and back.

These bombers proceeded in theory by night, guided by Lake Nicaragua and the Caribbean coast line, until at dawn they reached and destroyed the Gatun spillway and locks, rendering the canal useless at once and beyond immediate repair, because of the draining of Gatun lake.

Admiral MacDonald discovered the location of the "enemy" and notified the army of the air attack initiated, but the canal land forces lacked the fighting planes to destroy the bombers.

Aerial Defense Sadly Lacking.

There is not a single fighting plane on the isthmus today, and only sixteen observation and four bombing planes which are obsolescent. The air defense of the canal requires not less than 100—many experts say 150 to 200—fighting planes and many up to date bombing and observation planes. One squadron of fighting planes is to be sent in the near future, but that number is totally inadequate.

There is only one aircraft landing field in the zone, and it is so small that only one plane can be launched or landed at a time.

The defense plans call for the installation of sixty-six anti-aircraft guns for the protection of the locks, dams, and powerhouses, but only thirty-six have been installed.

LEAD BETWEEN 62,000-92,000, VOTE INDICATES

TRIBUNE'S POLL TO DATE

Dever, Dem.	6,998	36,575	43,573
Lueder, Rep.	4,092	32,146	36,238
Cunnea, Soc.	802	5,068	5,870
Totals	11,892	73,789	85,681

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

William E. Dever, the Democratic candidate, will be elected mayor next Tuesday, according to THE TRIBUNE canvass of more than 85,000 voters, including rechecks. The poll indicates that Judge Dever will get an actual majority of the electorate, which has happened only three times in Chicago in the last twenty-seven years.

On the basis of all the ballots taken, of which a summary is printed above, Dever will get 50.85 per cent of all of the votes; Lueder, the Republican entry, will receive 42.06 per cent, and Cunnea, the Socialist, the remainder. That is a plurality of 62,000 for Dever on the assumption that 80 per cent of the registered voters turn out April 3. But the total ballots include rechecks, votes taken by nationalities, and about 32,000 taken before the campaign really started on the Republican side.

Last Week Shows Gains.

On the basis of the ballots obtained in the last week the poll indicates a plurality for Dever of more than 131,000 votes. But a limitation to the last week does not give an acceptable basis of calculation.

Taking the ballots collected during the active part of the campaign, together with canvasses of occupations and nationalities and recanvasses, THE TRIBUNE poll indicates that Dever will obtain 52.21 per cent of the total ballots, Lueder 39.37 per cent, and Cunnea 8.42 per cent. If the public votes the way it expressed its intentions during the poll Dever will have a plurality of 92,962. This is a larger plurality than ever given any other mayoralty candidate in Chicago except William Hale Thompson the first time out.

Vote by Candidates.

The vote in round numbers for each candidate on the basis of the above percentages will be as follows, on three assumptions—that 724,000 persons go to the polls, or that 750,000 participate, or that 765,000 is the aggregate on Tuesday:

Total vote.	Dever.	Lueder.	Cunnea.
724,000	378,000	285,000	61,000
750,000	391,000	295,000	63,000
765,000	399,000	301,000	64,000

Socialists will freely criticize the allotment for Cunnea. As a candidate twice before he has received more than 100,000 votes; in the early part of this campaign he was running strong, but later some of his supporters appeared, according to the canvass, to be falling away. If he obtains 100,000 votes this time, it probably will not change the results, although it will likely cut down the plurality of Dever. If, however, Cunnea obtains 150,000 votes, as his managers predict, Dever will be in trouble, according to THE TRIBUNE poll.

How Nationalities Stand.

THE TRIBUNE canvass of nationalities and occupations, as well as a persistent search for typical citizens, gave an opportunity to set one result against another. The canvass of occupations showed on its face that it was defective, but the figures obtained gave a means of checking others. The poll of nationalities was checked against canvasses by location and com-

FROWN ON RACE, CHURCH ISSUES IN BOTH PARTIES

"Whisper Politics" Is Deplored.

BY PARKE BROWN.

On the eve of the mayoralty election appeals to religious and racial prejudice are flooding Chicago, affecting what otherwise has been a clean campaign on issues and the real qualifications of candidates.

Thousands of small printed slips, dodgers, and facsimile letters carry the appeals. Some campaign orators are referring to them in their speeches. And wherever two or more interested campaigners discuss the situation those appeals are the topic that is uppermost. And all this, it is believed, without the consent of either of the nominees for mayor.

The election is Tuesday. In addition to choosing its mayor for the next four years Chicago elects its city clerk and city treasurer and settles twenty aldermanic contests that were not disposed of in the first election of Feb. 27. In the Second district there is a congressional election and resident of the South Park district pass on the proposed issuance of $20,000,000 in bonds chiefly for lake front development. The polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 4 p. m.

The Democratic official forecast is a victory running from 125,000 to 175,000. The Republicans predict they will win by somewhere between 40,000 and 75,000.

Al Eyes on the Mayoralty.

The mayoralty election occupies attention almost to the complete exclusion of the other matters to be voted upon. And if discussions around campaign headquarters, ward meetings, and similar centers of conversation are an index, the religious issue, with the racial one a close second, is the one upon which the eyes of the organizations are centered.

Because of this situation, THE TRIBUNE yesterday asked the nominees of the two major parties, Arthur C. Lueder, Republican, and William E. Dever, Democrat, to express for publication their opinions of this phase of the election.

Drag in Religious Issue.

Dever is a Roman Catholic and the "whisperers" as they have been called, have attacked him because of that fact. Lueder is a Lutheran, and the "whisperers" have charged that he is friendly to the Ku Klu Klan and therefore hostile to the Catholic, the colored man, and the Jew. He has denied this in toto.

Dever refused last night to make any statement on the subject. He was asked if he cared to make a statement refusing to discuss it and giving his reasons. His answer was again a negative. At his headquarters it was said that the nominee had maintained this attitude all through the campaign that quotations from him even alluding to the question were "faked."

Repudiated by Lueder.

Lueder made the following statement:

"Much to the regret of everyone who hoped to see a clean campaign and an election that would be determined solely by the relative merits of the candidates, the appeal to religious and racial prejudice was brought into this campaign three weeks—on March 9, to be exact.

"At that time letters were widely circulated charging me with favoring an organization with which I never had the slightest connection or communication. These letters were signed by men opposing me bitterly in this campaign, and there never has been any denial of their authorship.

"No one can regret this development more than I do. My own campaign has been entirely free from this sort of thing. Neither I nor my campaign organization has issued or encouraged any appeal to the voters except the appeal to their good judgment in the selection of the man who is to manage the business affairs of their city for the next four years."

The letters referred to by Lueder were dated March 9 and purported to bear the signatures of Oscar De Priest and two other colored leaders. This was the only document bearing on religious or racial topics that was discovered by either headquarters until about a week ago. Then there began to appear small printed slips, some slightly larger and some slightly smaller than street car transfers.

The first one was an attack on the disposition of a murder case in which Judge Dever presided. The records show that the defendant was acquitted by the jury.

The next one to bob up was signed, "Committee of Public School Teachers," and read as follows:

"Non-Catholics: If you want Rome to run our public schools and city government vote for William E. Dever, Democratic candidate for mayor. He is a Roman Catholic and a member of the Knights of Columbus."

City Strewn with Cards.

And yesterday in several parts of the city there appeared a slightly larger card bearing in large letters these words:

"The One Outstanding Issue.
"Arthur C. Lueder, Republican.
"PROTESTANT
"William Dever, Democrat.
"CATHOLIC."

In between the cards there appeared what purported to be a facsimile of a letter written by a Roman Catholic bishop to an officer of the Knights of Columbus and another printed letter that was thought to be designed to arouse the Jews.

In addition to the printed matter the anonymous attacks are said to have been carried by word of mouth by house to house canvassers. None of them has been caught, but two men have been arrested for distributing anti-Catholic slips. The source of this printing, however, has not been discovered. It has been handed out on street cars and elevated platforms and even on street corners in the downtown district.

Statement by C. F. Smith.

Although Judge Dever declined to express his opinion on these tactics, Democratic headquarters issued a typewritten statement by Clayton F. Smith bearing on the subject.

"The campaign for Dever has been a clean and honorable one," he said. "Every appeal we have made has been one made openly at public meetings open to all, or in signed letters sent through the mails. We have issued no anonymous communications. We have had no meetings behind closed doors. We have taken the public completely into our confidence. When we have had anything to say we have spoken through some responsible person whose name meant something and who was accountable.

"Toward the close of the campaign there have appeared a number of anonymous, scurrilous pamphlets, slips of paper, and similar 'literature.' All are unsigned, all are distributed secretly. But all attack the candidacy of Dever, and it is easy to guess who inspired their publication and distribution."

Knight-Ickes Feud.

An expression used on the latest of the religious agitation cards—"the one outstanding issue"—was much discussed for a few days in the campaign in a controversy between Thomas D. Knight, chairman of the committee of one hundred, backing Lueder, and Harold L. Ickes, head of the Independent Dever club. Ickes insinuated that this "outstanding issue" referred to by Knight was the religious issue, but in return Knight called Ickes "a plain liar."

That apparently ended the controversy, and a farewell statement issued by the committee of one hundred yesterday laid stress not on the religious issue but on a statement that the best elements of the Republican party are behind Lueder and that some "undesirable" Republicans are with Dever.

Asks Who Are Backers.

"Men and women who sincerely want to make their ballots count for good government," read the statement, "must look not alone to the personality of the candidates but to the forces back of them, for no matter what the intentions of the mayor of Chicago, his administration must function through the organization responsible for his election.

"Mr. Lueder's candidacy has won the support of those Republican leaders and forces which in the past not only have stood for good government but, at the risk of political suicide, have proceeded to clean house by the vigorous prosecution of grafters calling themselves Republicans.

"Judge Dever was the unanimous choice of the Democratic organization which has been in control of the city council and all its important committees for a number of years. Not one of the acts for which prosecutions have been instituted by Republican officials could have occurred without their active support and coöperation.

Democrats Can't Dodge.

"In other words, the Democratic majority in the city council has been a full partner in every unclean civic deed committed in the last few years. They cannot dodge responsibility for the school board scandals and city expert fees.

"As the campaign progressed Judge Dever attracted a few well meaning but shortsighted men and women of varied and kaleidoscopic political alliances, who have been put forward to form a smoke screen to hide the array of Democratic bosses in the background.

"Behind this screen these bosses have lost no time in reaching out for the baser elements among Republicans. In this connection it is pertinent to make a few inquiries of Judge Dever's managers.

Say Lundin Aids Dever.

"What promises have you made or what amounts have you paid Oscar De Priest?

"Why are the Small and Lundin workers busy helping Judge Dever?

"Why is Michael J. Faherty now for Dever when on Jan. 21 he said, 'The public schools of Chicago are in a bad fix if they have to rely on Judge Dever for salvation'?

"It does not lie with the Democratic bosses at whose mercy Judge Dever will be if elected. It does not lie with the Democratic party—full partner in all civic misdeeds of recent years.

"It lies only in coöperating with the better elements of the Republican party who are supporting Lueder."

DEVER SANGUINE OF VICTORY OVER LUEDER TUESDAY

The Trade Union Dever club had a dinner and meeting in the Morrison hotel for Judge Dever last night. Arrangements were made by women unionists under the leadership of Mary McInerney of the Bindery Workers' union, Josephine Casey of the elevated railway employés, and Agnes Nestor.

Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and also international president of the Photo-Engravers' union; Alderman Elect Oscar F. Nelson, vice president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank were among the speakers.

"The mayoralty campaign here as I view it is like labor's problem, humanity against dollars," Woll said. "Dever represents humanity and his opponent is supported by the dollar crowd."

Other speakers called the Democratic the 100 per cent labor ticket, Al Gorman, the candidate for city clerk, having been "right" with labor when a state senator, it was said, and John Cervenka, candidate for treasurer, was once a business agent for the woodworkers' union and now an employer of only union labor.

Judge Dever spoke briefly.

"I am assured of the labor vote of Chicago," he told them. "A solid Democratic party is back of me. The committee is so certain of my election that if it were not for the wish to say a word in behalf of Wiley W. Mills, candidate for alderman in the Thirty-seventh ward, I would like to stay here for the rest of the evening.

"I am told that it is unnecessary for me to journey out there to Austin and Cragin in my own behalf, but I want to help Mills be elected."

Floating Safe Official Seized Here as Fugitive

Joseffi Mannini, secretary of the Ocean Floating Safe company, was arrested at 313 South Francisco avenue last night and booked at the detective bureau as a fugitive. He is under indictment in Boston, Mass., with Minnotti Manni, recently arrested here, for an alleged confidence game and larceny. Both men are fighting extradition. Manni's case coming before Gov. Small on Wednesday.

SENATOR BARES 'CIVIC SKELETONS OF DEVER PAST'

McCormick Fears Trick by Traction Magnates.

Senator Medill McCormick issued the subjoined statement yesterday, setting forth his views on the mayoralty campaign, its chief figures, and its issues:

"I wish to present to the voters the simple and fundamental issues of this campaign as they appear to me and as I believe they will appear to every man and woman who has thought upon them.

"The political record of Judge Dever [I do not speak of his judicial record], is known to those who remember it. He was one of a band of vacuous and vehement visionaries who made this city resound with the noise of their promises twenty years ago, when municipal expenditure and municipal taxation was steadily increased, when the school board became a mere nonsensical nuisance, when the administrative efficiency of the city departments fell to the lowest standard which we had known at that time, and finally when, mark you nearly twenty years ago, immediate municipal ownership was promised to the people of the city by Judge Dunne, as it is promised again by Judge Dever. If he be elected mayor, he will live in the history of the city as one whose campaign was as profligate in promises as his administration was poor in performance of them.

What Dever Promises.

"Let us remember now on election day, and later, if he be elected, that Judge Dever has promised and has consented to have repeatedly promised for him, in speech, through the press and on the billboards, that he will reduce taxation and reduce rents. Mark you, he will reduce taxes and he will reduce rents. He promises, and with all the variety of publicity that a full purse can contrive, it is promised for him, that he will reform the schools and find a place in the public schools for every child in Chicago, while at the same time reducing rents. Finally, we read in the paid advertisements on his behalf that he is going to give the city municipal ownership and municipal operation of the traction lines.

"There are no more eager supporters of municipal ownership and purchase by the city of traction properties than the principal owners of them! They want to unload, and they know that they can unload on nobody but the city, and they believe that they can unload more easily and to better advantage on the city under Judge Dever than under anybody else.

"The senior securities, the bonds (I do not speak of the speckled and spotted varieties of stock and participating shares) amount to some $330,000,000. The traction fund amounts to $40,000,000. It will be a very nice arrangement for the great owners of the traction securities to have the city give them the $40,000,000 traction fund while they hold bonds secured by the properties for the unpaid balance.

Subway Plan Perilled.

"If the municipal operation—the municipal operation promised by Dever—proves unable to earn interest and sinking fund on the bonds remaining in the hands of the present traction owners, there will be a default, and the traction properties will go back to their present owners, the city will have lost the traction fund and the traction system as well; but, besides that, if the traction fund goes to the purchase of the properties, how shall we get a subway and other improvements?

"This is a good time to get rid of municipal railway systems, as La Salle street and Wall street know and show by the market. This is a time when experience already has proven that trains in subways and motor busses on the surface will constitute municipal transportation in the future. They will pay and gradually put the old fashioned traction systems out of business.

"It is under these circumstances that a combination of realists and idealists has been brought together to support Judge Dever. One crowd supplies the enthusiasm, the other crowd supplies the savvy.

Brennan Ringmaster.

"There used to be some who decried the organizing talent and the political genius of my friend George Brennan. I was not one of them. The silvered and spangled lady standing with a jeweled whip in the midst of a ring of enraged and engaging lions and leopards has nothing on him. He has them all tamed and all playing their parts, the highbrows in the foreground to get the headlines and the lowbrows in the background to get the votes. He is more than ringmaster and lion tamer—

"'He is the jester and the jest,
And he himself the text supplies.'

"The assembly of the league of nations might envy his aggregation. Mr. Hinky Dink Kenna, Prof. Charles E. Merriam, Mr. Barney Grogan, Mr. Harold Ickes, Mr. Bathhouse John Coughlin, and Prof. Graham Taylor holding that opinion of one another which becomes brethren.

"There are some of the so-called independent Dever orators who have thought to further his cause by mingling falsehood with abuse. To them on this Sunday morning I commend reading of Matthew vi: 24, and Matthew vii: 3, 4, and 5; Matthew xxiii: 5, Luke vi: 41 and 42, and Luke xviii: 11, 12, and 13. We cannot foretell what the great home loving, home keeping people of Chicago will do on election day. It has been hard to present to them the actual issues of the campaign. The memory of the last eight years weighs against the consideration of the pending issues.

"If Judge Dever be elected we shall have occasion to remember the lines of Ezekiel:

"'They have seduced my people, saying, PEACE; and there was no peace, and one built up a wall, and, lo, other daubed it with untempered mortar.

"'Say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall: there shall be an overflowing shower; . . . and a stormy wind shall rend it.

"'Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you,

"'Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?'

"Lueder One of Us."

"Arthur Lueder, the Republican candidate, was born and grew to manhood among us. His life as a man has been interwoven with the life of the city. His especial interest in the development and the value of real estate, in the building of homes, has given him an especial concern and especial experience in the practical progress of the city and in the honest, economical and efficient government of the city—that practical progress, that honesty, efficiency and economy which is constantly, instantly and insistently important to all of us who are citizens and who are parents, living in Chicago and here rearing our children.

"He has known as we know, but from a wider experience than ours, how important to the citizen are the development and the maintenance of the city streets, the preservation of order, and of law, the prevention of fire and the efficient conduct of its sanitary services. He knows, as we know, that the steady, progressive increase in municipal expenditure and taxation weighs not only directly upon the householder but indirectly upon the rentpayer, and oppressively upon expanding industry, retarding or preventing the establishment of industry in Chicago and holding back the wage scale.

"In acquiring this experience, he succeeded, he prospered. He so won the confidence of his fellows that in the associations of which he was a member he was elected to positions of trust, although in private life he was not merely a public spirited citizen, he was actually a public servant. Then, unexpectedly, because a group of us were determined that the appointee to the most important administrative office in Chicago, saving only the mayoralty, should not be a factionist, with favorites to reward or enemies to punish, he was induced, persuaded to submit to the federal examination which established his eligibility as postmaster.

"Since I had some part in persuading him to take that examination, and since I recommended his appointment to the President, I am frank to say that I was proud to read that he had been selected first by the citizens' committee, and secondly accepted by the Republican leaders as a candidate to regenerate the government of this city. I had no part in that selection.

"Arthur Lueder accepted the call to duty, and made the fight and won in the primaries. Despite the lies which have been widely circulated and of which the decent supporters of Judge Dever are ashamed, Arthur Lueder was so good a postmaster that among the thousands of postoffices in the United States, under his administration the Chicago postoffice came to rank first in point of efficiency.

"He is a candidate upon a definite and practical program, pledged to a reform of the school administration, to retrenchment in expenditure, to a square deal for the police and by the police, and to the city's economic acquisition of the traction properties. He is a candidate with a record of political achievement, running upon a practical program, which can be fulfilled.

"If Mr. Lueder be elected, we shall enter upon an era of practical progress."

Stand by the men who stood by you. Be nonpartisan in voting for aldermen. Don't permit your party choice for mayor to influence your vote for a member of the city council, which is nonpartisan by vote of the people.

Herbert J. Friedman, secretary of the Municipal Voters' league, came to bat last night with a strong appeal to the voters of the city to heed those injunctions when they mark their aldermanic ballots on Tuesday. He laid especial stress on conditions in the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth wards, where Ald. Frank J. Link and Eli I. Frankhauser are running against two Democrats, George E. Trumbull and John E. Maloney.

Force was given to Mr. Friedman's words through the fact that he recently issued a statement as an individual (the M. V. L. does not take sides in mayoralty contests) in behalf of Judge William E. Dever for mayor, Link and Frankhauser are Republicans.

Urges Nonpartisan Views.

"Voters should exhibit true nonpartisanship in the aldermanic election," Mr. Friedman said. "Aldermen Link and Frankhauser stood by the electorate when they were needed, and in the face of inducements by the city hall administration which many aldermen were unable to withstand.

In the six other wards in which the candidates and their qualifications have not been set forth in THE TRIBUNE, the aldermanic situations may be outlined as follows:

Thirty-second ward—Here two Democrats, one with an excellent voting record in opposition to experts, high taxes and school board graft, and the other without legislative experience, are the candidates. The former is Ald. Joseph Higgins Smith; the latter Medard A. Kunz, son of Congressman Stanley Kunz, to whom the Municipal Voters' league referred as a "dangerous demagogue" in 1910 when he was trying to defeat William E. Dever for alderman in the old Seventeenth ward.

Young Kunz is a lawyer and moved into the ward last June. Ald. Smith has been confined to his home by illness for several weeks and his campaign is being made for him by friends. He is endorsed by the M. V. L.

Thirty-sixth ward—Eugene L. Nusser, a grocer, O.K.'d by the league and backed by George Hitzman, is opposed to A. C. Sievers, who is receiving the support of "Doc" Peters, Lundin-Thompson followers, and state grain inspector by grace of Gov. Small.

Severinghaus for Peters.

Such Thompsonites as Congressman Michaelson, Harry B. Miller, former Judge Righeimer, and "Al" Severinghaus, the latter one of the school trustees under indictment, have all made speeches in the ward for Peters' candidate. Severinghaus is reported to have said that if necessary he will spend $10,000 to beat Nusser, who is an employe of the state's attorney's office.

Thirty-ninth ward—Here Charles Reuss, a real estate man, whose name was recently published as a member of the Ku Klux Klan, in the anti-klan paper, Tolerance, is opposed to Frank J. Tomczak, superintendent of the claim department of a large insurance company. Tomczak is a law school graduate and a Democrat. Reuss is a Republican. The ward is Democratic.

Fortieth ward—In this ward also the Ku Klux Klan is an issue. Ald. Christ Jensen, who voted three times against the Faherty experts and voted to force the resignations of Davis and Severinghaus as school trustees, is fighting a supplementary battle with Sophus E. Richards, a draftsman. Jensen is recommended by the M. V. L. The only blots on his record are his trip to Europe on the streets and alleys committee junket and a vote for higher taxes.

Richards a "T. T. A."

Richards admitted to an investigator for the Municipal oVters' league that he is a "T. T. A." The letters stand for "true to America," and according to Richards are used in Klux circles to designate those who have taken the apprentice degree.

Forty-seventh ward—Two former workers in the organization of William H. Wesbey, superintendent of the Lincoln park board, are in a hot fight in this ward. Herman F. Peglow, a cement contractor, has the indorsement of the league against Harry W. Klinke, who is 34 years old and admitted by both his political friends and enemies to be a hustler. Klinke began his campaign last September and has been attacking and digging trenches ever since. He is an engraver.

Fiftieth ward—William H. Pontow, a Democrat, indorsed by the league is receiving the support of a large slice of the Brundage organization in this ward. He is deputy controller of the forest preserves and was secretary to Peter Reinberg, former president of the county board, at the time of his death. Pontow is also in the real estate business. He is 47 years old.

Fisher Ex-Progressive.

Clyde C. Fisher, Pontow's opponent, is a lawyer and former progressive. He is employed by State's Attorney Crowe in the writing of briefs for the Appellate and Supreme courts. The league's report on these two candidates says: "Fisher is a man of good reputation, but he lacks the public experience of his opponent." Pontow for six years was a deputy Municipal court clerk.

Backed by League

The following aldermen have been indorsed by the Municipal Voters' league as men of proven fitness to represent the people of their wards in the city council:

Ward.	Ward.
5—Chas S. Eaton.	32—Joseph M. Smith.
6—Wm. D. Meyering.	35—George Seif.
10—John T. Meagher.	36—Eugene L. Nusser.
12—Wm. J. Gorusky.	37—Wiley M. Mills.
16—Scott M. Hogan.	39—Frank J. Tomczak.
17—Frank M. Hallen.	40—Christ A. Jensen back.
	41—Thos. J. Bowler.
18—August W. Domke.	47—Herman Peglow.
19—Don. S. McKinley.	48—Frank J. Link.
31—Stanley Adamkiewicz.	49—E. J. Frankhauser.
	50—Wm. H. Pontow.

LUEDER CLEARED OF ALL CRITICISM AS POSTMASTER

First Assistant Postmaster General John A. Bartlett, who came to Chicago several days ago as the personal representative of Postmaster General Harry S. New to investigate conditions in the postoffice, yesterday issued a statement in which he declared criticism of the office and of former Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder unjustified.

Mr. Bartlett's statement, in part, reads:

"I desire to say for the postmaster general that no man in the postal service will be overworked or unjustly treated either to save money or for any other purpose.

"The administration has no policy to make the postal business of the country 'break even' at the expense of the best postal service or at the expense of the best humane treatment of its workers. Any such impression which some persons seem to have and to convey is wholly erroneous and without any foundation whatsoever.

"A fact that many people have not yet seemed to fully grasp is the existence now of a three months' emergency in our postal business. I refer to the constantly and rapidly rising volume of mail all over the country to an extent and with a rapidity undreamed of by any one.

"I have come here in part to bring the news that the postmaster general has determined to find some way of giving normal postal service to the country even during what seemed to be an emergency—namely: between now and July 1. He has determined not to make further attempt to cut down the service of the country to meet the available money, letting the matter of the cost work itself out as it may have to in the future.

"Thus far the people of Chicago have had little curtailment of their mail service. In certain places where three deliveries have been cut down to two they will be immediately restored to the former service. In certain places where street carriers have been asked to collect the mail this will be abandoned.

"No regular clerks, carriers or laborers have been laid off or lost their positions, neither have any regular certified substitutes been laid off or lost their places. A large number of temporaries have been dropped, due to more efficient methods and practices being installed. Some of those have obtained positions at the Van Buren station under the railway mail service.

"I should add that a strict eight hour day is being maintained except for unforeseen emergencies.

"I should say that nothing has been developed at the Chicago postoffice which reflects in anywise against former Postmaster Lueder. He began his administration of the office only a short time ago and has cooperated with the department in a businesslike manner, always solicitous for improving the postal service of the city."

CUNNEA APPEALS FOR SUPPORT OF WORKING CLASS

Appealing to the working people for their unified support, William Cunnea, Socialist candidate for mayor, practically closed his campaign last night in K. of P. hall, 11037 South Michigan avenue.

"Every election the candidates of the two old parties pledge a fair and square deal for the workers," Said Mr. Cunnea. "All kinds of promises are made to officials of labor unions to gain their support. But this program is composed of promises and nothing else. After election these promises fade into thin air. This takes place year after year, and this year is no exception.

Eugene Debs spoke for Mr. Cunnea at the meeting.

Only 7 Minor Defendants Are Acquitted.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 31.—[Special.]—Fifty-five defendants in the Gary liquor conspiracy case, including Rowell O. Johnson, mayor of Gary; Dwight M. Kindler, prosecutor of Lake county; William H. Olds, sheriff; William M. Dunn, city judge; Clyde Hunter, former prosecutor, and Lewis E. Barnes, former sheriff, were found guilty by a jury in federal court here today.

Seven minor defendants were acquitted.

Sentence probably will not be imposed by Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger until late in April or early in May.

Penalty Prison and Fines.

The maximum penalty is two years in prison and a fine of $10,000 on each of the four counts of the indictment.

Attorneys for the defense were given eight days in which to file motions in arrest of judgment, for new trials, etc. These motions will be ruled on April 20, Judge Geiger announced. The jury reached a verdict at 9:25 a. m. after being out sixteen hours. It was said the jury was unanimous from the start as to the existence of a conspiracy, the greater part of the time being taken up in considering the guilt or innocence of individual defendants.

Sixty-two Faced Jury.

The trial lasted sixteen days and was one of the hardest fought cases ever tried in federal court. Originally there were seventy-five defendants. Of these, five pleaded guilty, seven never were arrested, and the case against one, Stanley Kosowski, was nolled by the government at the completion of its evidence. This left sixty-two to face the jury, the largest number in the history of the local federal court. In the Terre Haute election fraud case more than 100 defendants were named in the indictment, but a vast majority of these pleaded guilty.

The case had its beginning in 1921, during the trial of the South Bend-Gary liquor conspiracy case, involving twenty-six defendants. Dan Melloy, a defendant in that case and star government witness in the case just ended, told a story involving Gary officials.

U. S. Drive on Gary.

Last summer federal prohibition agents, directed by Bert C. Morgan, prohibition director for Indiana, carried on an extensive investigation of liquor law violations in Gary and Lake county. Many arrests were made. The federal grand jury indicted seventy-five defendants in January, 1923.

A dramatic feature of the case was the murder of Gasper E. Monte, an important government witness, at Gary, two days before the trial began. He was shot from an automobile. No arrests in the case have been made. Melloy and Philip Ukman, a Serbian, were the star witnesses for the government.

OFFER REWARDS FOR FINDER OF MISSING PRIEST

A reward of $1,500 is announced by Columbia, the official national organ of the Knights of Columbus, for information leading to the finding of Rev. J. A. Vranisk of Virden, Ill., last seen in Venice, Ill., on March 5, or for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible for his murder, abduction, or injury.

The reward is offered through the Virden council of the Knights of Columbus and is in two separate amounts, $1,000 for the finding of the priest, and $500 for information as to his murderers.

Atlantic City Thronged by Biggest Easter Crowd

Atlantic City, N. J., March 31.—Shattering of all pre-Easter arrival records at Atlantic city was reported today by railroad officials. Traffic was said to have been from 20 to 30 per cent greater than last year, the previous high mark, and it was predicted that at least 200,000 persons would parade their Easter finery on the board walk tomorrow.

Sunny skies and crisp winds were promised by the forecaster.

FAIR SKIES, CRISP AIR, OUTLOOK FOR EASTER PARADERS

Coldest March 31 Ends Frigid Wave.

A month of the coldest March weather in twenty years broke last night with a rising thermometer which registered 20 degrees at 10 o'clock and a forecast from Prof. Cox of the weather bureau of a fair morning for the church bells and spring hats, anthems and flowers, which enter into the annual Easter Sunday pageant.

The weather is to be only comparatively warm, however, with a good deal of chilliness still in evidence, making furs more than mere adornments. Cloudiness for the afternoon and a slowly rising temperature also are part of the weather prophecy. Throughout the country reports indicated that Easter would be given a somewhat cool reception.

Coldest March 31 on Record.

Yesterday was the coldest March 31 in the records of the weather bureau, which reach back for fifty-two years. A minimum of 12 degrees broke all previous records by 9 degrees. The average daily deficiency during March was 3.3 degrees. Prof. Cox declared, making it the coldest March since 1912. The temperature of zero registered on the 19th, with one exception, broke all previous records for low temperatures for so late in the season.

Florists and purveyors of the Easter rabbit and his traditional eggs have done their part in furnishing the proper Easter background, and the mail men have distributed in Chicago one of the largest loads of Easter greetings on record.

Message from Bishop.

"The Christian church wisely gives increasing emphasis to observance of Passion week and especially of Good Friday and of Easter Sunday," read a message from Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal church to the members and pastors of the 200 Methodist churches in Cook county. "The death and resurrection of Jesus Christ are the great events of Christian history. Calvary was the pledge of the world's redemption. Easter Sunday celebrates the pledge of Christian coronation.

"With the quenchless love of God for humanity, a love which gave the life of Deity itself in the effort to redeem humankind, there was great hope of the world's redemption in the sense of the creation of a new moral, social, and spiritual order on earth."

Special Church Services.

Special services will be held in all churches of the city.

Communion services beginning at 6 o'clock in the morning will be held in all Episcopal churches in the Chicago diocese. A sunrise community service will be held under auspices of Hyde Park council of churches on the lake front this morning.

For the first time in thirty-five years a prank of the calendar has made Easter Sunday and April Fool's fall on the same day. The same thing is also to happen eleven years hence.

Nebraska Won't Ask Vote as to Any Future War

Lincoln, Neb., March 31.—The Nebraska lower house voted 2 to 1 today against the proposition to submit the question of future wars to a referendum vote of the people.

"SALLY" COMPANY TO GIVE WOUNDED, AN EASTER TREAT

Leon Errol and some other members of the "Sally" company will give the wounded men in the Edward Hines Memorial hospital a treat tomorrow, Easter Monday. Mr. Errol is taking a company of eighteen out to give the boys an afternoon of fun and music. This matinee will close the monthly entertainments given through the winter at the Speedway institution by the hospital visiting committee of the Chicago Woman's club, of which Mrs. Levy Mayer is chairman.

CONSERVATORIES OF NORTH SHORE EXHIBIT FLOWERS

Exhibits from many of the splendid private conservatories along the north shore will be featured at the Chicago spring flower show at the Broadway armory the week of April 16. Frank Kuehne of Lake Forest, with the cooperation of Mrs. Russell Tyson, president of the Woman's National Farm and Garden association, has interested the owners of the conservatories and their gardens and spirited competition is expected.

The Wayside Gardens of Cleveland, O., will send several of their experts to lay out one of the formal gardens in the center of the armory. There will be six of these gardens, with grass, shrubs, flowers, and garden statuary and furniture.

Mrs. Tyson is arranging for lectures on floriculture and gardening every afternoon at 3 and every evening at 8, by some of the most noted authorities in America. The opening day, Monday, will be "Society day."

"King Tut," with Star Cast, at A. of C. Frolic

"King Tut," himself, will offer a few observations on modern frills and follies at the Spring Frolic of the Chicago Association of Commerce at the Hotel La Salle next Wednesday noon. Supporting him will be Taylor Holmes, now starring in "The Rear Car," and Thurston, the magician.

Ex-Cop and Cousin Held for Theft of Automobile

Charged with the theft of an automobile, Michael Dowling, formerly a policeman attached to the Hyde Park station, and his cousin, Daniel Dowling, both of 452 West 45th place, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $10,000 each.

20 MILLION BOND ISSUE CONFRONTS SO. PARK VOTERS

Improvement of Lake Front Sought.

Four series of bonds proposed by the south park board, totaling $20,000,000, are to be passed upon by voters of the south park district at Tuesday's election.

Of the proposed bond issues $15,000,000 would be for lake front development, $2,000,000 for Grant park improvements, $2,000,000 for new parks and boulevards, and $1,000,000 for rehabilitating the lighting system of parks and boulevards.

The $15,000,000, according to plans, would be used to complete the island east of the Field museum and the stadium, erect a bathing beach house and necessary bridges, and complete the surface for early use.

Would Build Driveway.

From this fund also is contemplated completion of the breakwater along the western side of the inclosed waterway from Grant park to Jackson park and filling in back of this breakwater sufficiently to create an area 200 or 300 feet in width upon which would be constructed a driveway leading directly along the shore of the inner waterway from Grant park to Jackson park.

A third project for which the $15,000,000 is sought is the improvement of the island lying opposite 31st street, creating a bathing beach, driveways, walks, and surfacing, and the bridge at 25th street. Of an $8,000,000 bond issue authorized for this work in 1920 about $5,000,000 has been expended.

The proposed $2,000,000 Grant park improvement includes extension of the park eastward by fills, and general beautification of the entire park area. The electrification plans of the Illinois Central railway on the lake front, already under way, fit into the general improvement scheme.

Of a $3,700,000 bond issue authorized for this work in 1920 something less than $1,500,000 has been expended.

Plans for Parks.

The $2,000,000 asked for new parks and boulevards would supplement a $3,000,000 bond issue authorized several years ago, of which about half has been expended. Two or three new parks in congested parts of the south division are contemplated, particularly one in the territory bounded by 31st and 39th streets and Wentworth and Cottage Grove avenues.

The south park commissioners also desire to develop a pleasure ground at 55th street, near Loomis street; the James R. Mann park in Hegewisch, and the Murray F. Tuley park at 90th street and St. Lawrence avenue.

PARIS TO WEAR BLACK ON ANNUAL EASTER PARADE

Bernhardt's Death Casts Pall on Colors.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 31.—The Easter parade here tomorrow is going to bring at least one surprise, Jeanne Lanvin told THE TRIBUNE today. This is a predominance of black. Lanvin explained that early spring fashions were inclined to pale green and Egyptian and Indo-Chinese designs, with silk kerchiefs worn on the wrists and neck. But a new element entered into the situation.

The most prominent mannequins from whom Paris takes its modes are actresses, Lanvin said. One of the chief of these is Yvonne Printempts (Mme. Sacha Guitry), who is advertised as "always dressed by Lanvin." Mlle. Printempts now refuses to wear anything except black, on account of Sarah Bernhardt's death. The same applies to Mme. Simone, whose name appears on every fashion advertisement from Paquin, and also for Cecile Sorel, who is dressed by Paul Poiret.

Fear Business Loss.

The modistes are not particularly fond of this idea, since black was last spring's fashion, and it is easy for the women to make over last year's dresses unless a change is made.

"However, what can we do?" asked Lanvin. "Every actress in Paris is wearing black. All we can do is to try to invent new ways of wearing an old color."

Not So Gay in London.

LONDON, March 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Easter parade in Hyde Park in recent years has not approached in smartness or beauty that on 5th avenue, and tomorrow when American tourists seek stylishly dressed London crowds they are likely to be disappointed. There will be silk "toppers," white spats, and beautifully gowned women on Rotten row, but these will be only flashes of finery among the thousands of soberly dressed people.

"Nowadays those who are sufficiently courageous to follow the fashions closely are timid about displaying themselves. They prefer the more secluded pathways of Hyde Park, especially one from the Albert memorial to the broad-walk in Kensington gardens, or a walk near Park lane entrance, which has been made popular lately by the promenades of Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles.

Select Quiet Modes.

This year the styles themselves are likely to be the greatest damper to Easter brilliance. English modistes, like those of Paris, are greatly concerned over the simplicity of women's dress, while the men are seemingly more determined than ever to be drab and dreary in their grays and browns, with only occasional spots and crossbars of other shades of those colors. The fire seems to have faded from even the hose and neckties, articles in which Englishmen heretofore have humored themselves.

But Easter in England means more than a style parade. It marks the beginning of the "week-end season"—that Friday to Monday rest period which brings a holiday to everybody but the transport workers.

LANDIS AWARD CARPENTERS' PAY GOES UP JUNE 1

Landis award carpenters will receive a substantial increase in their wage scales on June 1, Fred Bully, president of the Associated Builders, announced yesterday in response to inquiries as to whether a jump in pay would take effect on Monday, April 2, the date set by union carpenters for an increase to $1.25 an hour.

"The Landis award does not expire until May 31, and the $1 an hour rate fixed by Judge Landis for carpenters will remain in effect until that time," said Mr. Bully. "At the expiration of the award Landis carpenters will be given a raise commensurate with that given other building trades. We expect to be able to make the new rate public in the near future.

"Approximately 10,000 Landis award carpenters will be affected by the increase."

GIANT GASBAG TO PICK UP BATTLE PLANE IN FLIGHT

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—The giant semi-rigid airship now being constructed at Akron, O., for the army air service, is to be used as an airplane carrier, it was learned officially today. It will be equipped to pickup twelve small fighting planes while all are in flight, and the planes also can "take off" from the moving airship.

In experiments at Mineola, till now kept secret, a large ring was placed on the upper wing of the airplane, and a huge hook was suspended from the basket of the airship. After the airship was in full flight, the airplane pilot flew under the basket. The equality of speed gave practically the same effect as if both machines were standing still and the picking up of the airplane was accomplished quite easily.

JUDGE CURIOUS ABOUT PILCER'S DANCE OF VEIL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 31.—Harry Pilcer's dancing is immoral, according to a policeman who saw him dance at the Palace theater. Therefore Harry and his partner, Mme. Rahna, must do their dance next Thursday before Judge Bacquart so the magistrate may judge for himself.

Harry and Mme. Rahna appeared in court this afternoon to answer charges preferred by Policeman Caron, who was appointed last week to view their "Afternoon of a Faun" dance.

It appears that Harry, burlesquing Nijinsky, caught a veil left by a nymph. What Harry did with the veil shocked the policeman. Judge Bacquart examined Mme. Rahna's costume, which she brought in a hand bag. The girl's dress consists of a tiny strip of smoke-like veiling.

RECORD BUDGET OF $44,000,000 PASSED SWIFTLY

Council Adds Raises to Those of Committee.

After one of the quietest sessions in the history of Chicago's city council, the annual appropriation for 1923 was passed yesterday. Not only was the budget put through in record breaking time but it was the largest ever passed, totaling more than $44,000,000, and it was the first time in the memory of some of the council veterans that a budget was adopted by unanimous vote.

The council went into session as a committee of the whole shortly after 2 o'clock, and by 5:30 had considered all amendments introduced and was ready to vote. On only three occasions did the alderman go outside of the recommendations of the finance committee, nor did they refuse any of the amendments presented by that body.

$15,000 to Open Avenues.

The largest concession made to any alderman was made to Ald. Ben S. Wilson when the committee voted to put $15,000 in the budget for the construction of bridges in Normal and Eggleston avenues in Auburn Park, opening up two streets not now available to traffic. The other two occasions when the aldermen voted amendments not sanctioned by the finance committee were pay increases. Joe Harvey, the auditor, was boosted from $4,800 a year to $4,800, while the keeper of the dog pound got a raise of $220 a year.

There were a number of pay increases in the amendments of the finance committee, the largest being two of $2,000 granted to the general superintendent of police and the attorney of the board of election commissioners. The increase for the chief of police brings his salary to $10,000, but it was not passed until several attempts had been made to get a similar one for the chief of the fire department.

Other Raises Granted.

Others who got raises were Mrs. Fred Busse, widow of the former mayor, $4,000 to $4,500, and Dr. Archibald Hoyne, head of the venereal disease hospital, $5,000 to $5,500, while the appropriation for the upkeep of automobiles owned by police captains was increased from $30 to $60 a month.

Creation of a position of "deputy commissioner of health" to "take care" of Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, provoked considerable discussion. Dr. Bundesen, before being appointed commissioner, was epidemiologist at a salary of $4,800. By creating the new position and combining it with the epidemiologist the council made it certain that no one but Bundesen could get it. The new job has the same pay as the assistant commissioner of health, $6,500, but there is considerable fear that having an assistant and a deputy, with equal powers, will cause dissension.

Lynch Assails League.

The "M. V. L.," short for the Municipal Voters' league, was under discussion for a short time when Ald. Lynch made an attempt to have Si Watkins, the secretary, ruled from the floor of the chamber. There was considerable talk, but Si was still present when the meeting was over.

The budget as it was passed was about $75,000 in excess of the estimated revenue, but that will easily be taken care of, it was explained, by miscellaneous revenues. Fifty-three aldermen voted for the budget.

ARRESTED AS PICKPOCKET.

Charles Cooper, colored, 3136 Indiana avenue, was arrested yesterday on a street car on a charge of having stolen the pocketbook, containing $50, of another passenger, Richard Eich, 5812 South Fairfield avenue.

PAIR CONFESS 100 BURGLARIES TO IMPRESS GIRLS

Believed to Be Rich by Sweethearts.

Two young bandits, who confessed that they had committed more than 100 robberies to enable them to "show off" before their sweethearts, told the full story of their crimes to Capt. Patrick Harding of the Shakespeare avenue station yesterday. The boys John Nelson, 17 years old, 4001 La Porte avenue, and Harry Echoen, 19 years old, 2519 North Monticello avenue, were captured by Sergt. Frank Dubec on Friday night as they were about to open the safe of the Illinois Duster company, 1922 Webster avenue.

"This is one of the most important arrests that have been made for months," declared Capt. Harding, after haring the confessions. "These boys are responsible for nearly all the robberies in the Summerdale, Irving Park and Rogers Park districts."

Nab Girls and Loot.

Later in the day, Helen Wagner, 18, and Ida Jackson, 19, the two girls named by the boys, were arrested in a luxuriously furnished apartment at 2204 North Western avenue. In the flat wre found eight diamond rings, four gold rings and twenty-two strings of valuable pearls.

According to the girls, who have lived together in the flat for more than a year, they met the two boys nearly a year ago. "They showered us with gifts," said Miss Wagner," telling us that they were sons of well-to-do families in Chicago. We never knew them to be burglars or that the jewelry they gave us was stolen."

The robberies committed by the boys were so numerous that they were unable to recall all the addresses. It is expected that much of the stolen goods goods will be recovered from dealers to whom they sold them.

Cashier Balks Bandits.

An attempted pay roll robbery on the second floor of the Wells building, 208 West Monroe street, was frustrated yesterday by the courage of William Doyle, 55 years old, cashier and bookkeeper for R. J. Powers, plumbing contractor, who has offices in the building.

Doyle was returning to the office with $8,500, the weekly pay roll for employés of the company working on the Merchant Loan and Trust company's building. He carried the money in a package under his arm.

As he entered the building he noticed he was followed by a young man. When he reached the second floor, the man drew a revolver and ordered him to put up his hands. At the same time, a second man, who apparently had been waiting on the landing, came up and attempted to take away the package of money.

Doyle struggled with the bandits and shouted for help. The first man tried to fire his revolver, but the cartridge failed to explode, whereupon he beat Doyle on the head with the weapon. Doyle, dazed, fell to the floor, still grasping the package.

Pair Put to Flight.

At that moment, R. J. Powers and his son, W. F. Powers, who had heard Doyle's shouts, rushed out of the office. The robbers saw them and fled, making their escape in the crowds outside. Doyle, whose head was badly lacerated, was able to proceed home after his wounds had been dressed by neighboring physicians.

Pulling his cap down over his head, three men robbed Joseph Poolhar, 1331 School street, of $139 at West Kinzie street and North Cakley avenue yesterday.

STRONG SUPPORT FOR HULL SEEN BY PARTY CHIEF

Leo F. Wormser, in charge of Morton D. Hull's campaign for congress in the Second district, was emphatic last night in his predictions that Hull will defeat Barratt O'Hara, the Democratic nominee.

"Whatever disputes there may be regarding candidates for municipal office," said Wormser, "the Republican party is solidly united in support of Hull in this district.

"And many Democrats who have contrasted the reputation of O'Hara with the record of Hull during fourteen years in the general assembly have joined a citizens' movement to make Hull's election certain.

"In the Calumet district the industrial workers are supporting him for the fight for the workmen's compensation act and the law limiting hours of labor for women. Civic organizations are supporting him for his efforts for the development of Grant park and outer park improvements, for comprehensive civil service and other progressive measures."

Glenn M. Crosby Dies from Injury Recevied at U. of I.

Champaign, Ill., March 31.—Glenn M. Crosby, 26 years old, assistant superintendent in the University of Illinois foundry, died tonight from meningitis caused by an injury received five weeks ago when he was struck by a beam while at work in the foundry. Crosby is survived by his widow and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crosby of Maywood, Ill. The body will be taken to Maywood for burial Monday.

Irene Castle Charges Gem Broker Pawned Her Jewels

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—Mrs. Irene Castle Treman, the dancer, tonight appeared as complainant against James R. Cooper, jewelry broker, on a charge of withholding a $9,000 pearl necklace from her. Cooper was arrested this afternoon in Seacliff, L. I., on a grand larceny charge. He gave the detectives a pawn ticket showing that he had pawned the jewelry for $1,500.

Report Improvement in Premier Lenin's Condition

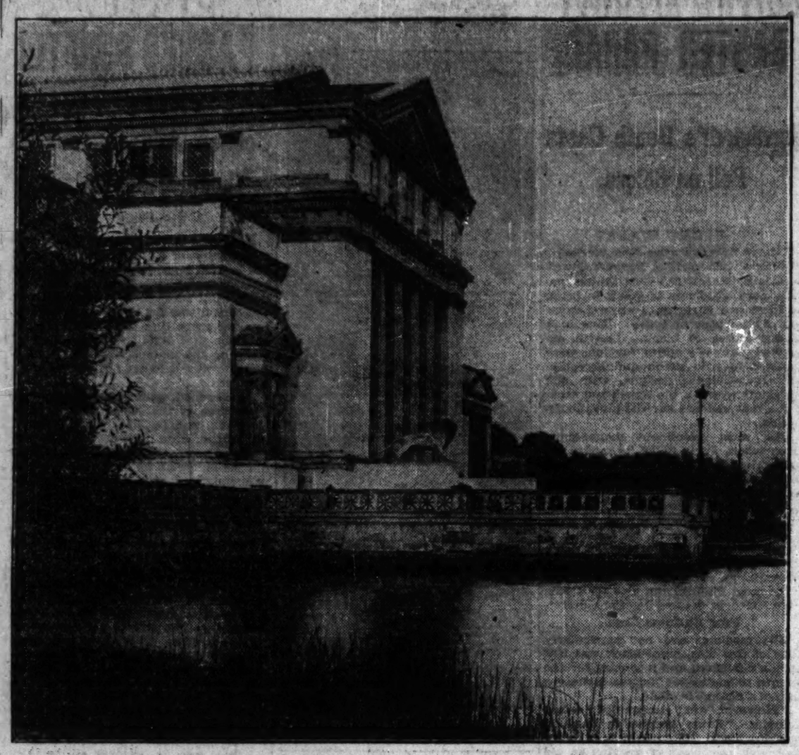
Its Beauty Pleads That It Be Saved to the City



THE OLD FIELD MUSEUM IN MOONLIGHT.

[A memory of the World's Fair.]

BY HORACE SPENCER FISKE.

Enmarbled by the moon's pale magic light
That pours her whitening rays on roof and wall
And by her touch celestial changes all,
It stands a Doric temple in the night.
Here rest those lustrous wings in beauty bright;
The sleepless lions that no fears appall;
The caryatids in their beauty tall;
And strong-limbed centaurs eager for the fight.
Athena's lifted temple, to the eyes
Of gazing citizens, no fairer gleamed
Beneath the sun of those transparent skies
Than here amid the land by Greeks undreamed.
Where hurrying millions rush in mad emprise,
These shadowy columns in the moonlight rise.

DEVER WINNER BY 62,000 TO 92,000, POLL INDICATES

Canvass Points to Big Majority.

pared with the census distribution of nationalities by sections of the city. Out of it all has been compiled a table which purports to show who, by nationalities, is supporting the two major candidates. The table is on the basis of 724,000 votes next Tuesday. It follows:

Citizens.	Dever.	Lueder.
Polish	58,300	7,700
German, Austrian, Hungar'n	38,000	68,000
Italian	15,100	6,200

Irish and other	98,000	11,000
"Native" Americans	66,000	38,000
Totals	378,000	235,000

Colored Folk Favor Dever.

It will be noticed that the table gives Dever a majority of the colored vote. The last two TRIBUNE canvasses show that the colored voters are much stronger for Dever than indicated in the table.

The last returns of the poll, some of them summarized because of space limitations, are as follows:

The subsurface campaigning which has been going at a merry clip for two days may affect before Tuesday all the figures presented.

POLITICAL NOTES

The central committee of the Hungarian Societies of Chicago have passed Lueder resolution, which were presented to the candidate by President Frank Kalman and a committee.

Election Commissioner Czarnecki announced that the election boards of several precincts in the Twenty-seventh ward will be called in to explain apparent padding of their poll lists.

Ald. Terence F. Moran, Sixteenth ward, denies emphatically that his council record is similar to that of his opponent, Ald. Scott M. Hogan. He pointed out he voted twice "for the people and against Faherty real estate experts" and that Hogan voted four times for the experts and not once against them.

The Chicago Dental society announced that both Lueder and Dever have indorsed its plan for placing oral hygiene instruction in the public schools.

M'ADOO O. K. ON WILSON'S CHOICE FOR SENATE JOB

Denver, Colo., March 31.—[United Press.]—William G. McAdoo today agreed, partially at least, with his father-in-law, ex-President Woodrow Wilson, in the matter of recommending a successor to the late United States Senator Samuel Nicholson, by indorsing Huston Thompson, Wilson's choice.

McAdoo previously had recommended Morrison Shafroth, Denver attorney. Today Gov. Sweet received a telegram from Mr. McAdoo, who is in Mexico, indorsing Thompson also for the post. The telegram said:

"Shafroth telegraphed me that Thompson also is a candidate and asked me to indorse Thompson, too, so that you may act without embarrassment. Each is admirably qualified and each is my personal friend. The country and party would be benefited by either."

British Queen Asks Mass for Sarah Bernhardt

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 31.—Maurice Bernhardt today received a notification that by request of Queen Mary of England a requiem mass would be chanted in Westminster abbey Easter morning for Divine Sarah.

MEXICO FACING NEW REVOLT AS AGRARIANS RISE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, March 31.—The agrarians in the state of Vera Cruz are in open rebellion. The citizens of several towns where the federal troops have attempted to disarm them have fled to the hills. Col. Garza was shot by agrarians at Zongolica when they learned he had come to disarm the state troops.

The garrison at Otatitlan, Vera Cruz, rebelled last night, sacking all the commercial houses. A group of agrarians attacked Mirador, in the neighborhood of Huastuco, Vera Cruz, yesterday, but were driven off by the federal garrison after a battle of several hours.

Agitators are going among the country people, telling them the wealthy land owners are behind the movement of the federal government to disarm the state troops and agrarians.

Hearst Buys Two Papers in Baltimore, Report Says

Baltimore, Md., March 31.—[Special.]—Official announcement is about to be made of the purchase by William R. Hearst from Frank A. Munsey of the latter's two newspaper properties in Baltimore—the American, a morning paper, and The News, its evening edition. The price paid for the properties was about $1,200,000.

Mr. Hearst and the Abell Publishing company, publishing the Baltimore Morning and Evening Sun, will now control the daily newspaper field in Baltimore.

TWO MEN KILLED, 7 PERSONS HURT IN AUTO MISHAPS

One Driver Is Held for Manslaughter.

Julius Fein, president of the People's Beverage company, 3516 Ogden avenue, and George Byrne, 23 years old, living at 3805 Ellis avenue, were killed and seven persons were injured in a series of automobile accidents yesterday.

Leaping from his automobile, Mr. Fein stepped into the path of an automobile driven by Jacob Rodkin, a salesman, living at 5929 South Michigan avenue. Fein died at St. Anthony's hospital. The police arrested Rodkin pending a coroner's inquest.

Two Cars Crash.

Byrne sustained a fractured skull when the car in which he was riding was struck by another driven by Harry Wilkinson, 4149 Indiana avenue, at Grand boulevard and East 49th street early yesterday morning. Harry Sweeten, 3927 Lake Park avenue, driver of the car Byrne was in, and Michael Caseman, 824 East 42d place, were slightly injured, as was Wilkinson. He was arrested and charged with manslaughter by the police.

Hundreds of loop shoppers saw a taxicab driven by James Pauzik, 1251 North Ashland axenue, run down Mrs. F. Southwick, 63 years old, 308 North Pine avenue, and her 9 year old granddaughter, Catherine, at South State and Adams streets. Pauzik took the two to the Iroquois hospital, where examination disclosed that neither was seriously injured.

Drivers Are Held.

Possible fatal injuries were sustained by Miss Celia Branch, 2715 West Fulton street, yesterday when she was struck by a taxicab driven by Edward Caldwell, 2825 South Kostner avenue, at Washington boulevard and Sacramento avenue. In addition to a broken collarbone Miss Branch is believed to have suffered a fractured skull. Caldwell is held by the police pending the result of her injuries.

W. J. Aylward, 1119 North Shore avenue, was probably fatally injured when the taxicab in which he was a passenger collided with an automobil driven by Thomas Grimm, 5353 Magnolia avenue. Grimm is held by the police.

YANKEE FLYERS BREAK RECORDS MADE BY FRENCH

Dayton, O., March 31.—In a spectacular aerial derby, army aviators from McCook field today set new world speed records for 500 and 1,000 kilometers distances, far eclipsing those made this week by French aviators at the Villa Sauvage airdrome.

Figures Show Records.

Unofficial figures tonight showed that Lieut. Alex Pearson completed 500 kilometers in 1 hour, 50 minutes 12 7-10 seconds, making approximately 169 miles an hour, and that Lieut Harold Harris and Civilian Pilot Ralph Lockwood, traveled 1,000 kilometers in four hours, 52 minutes, 35.04 seconds averaging around 126 miles an hour

Yesterday the French flyers set a record for 500 kilometers of 2 hours, 42 minutes, an average of 184 kilometers an hour.

For the 1,000 kilometers the French made a mark of 6 hours, 39 minute 40 2-5 seconds, an average of 150 kilometers an hour.

BRITISH SURPLUS OVER EXPENSES IS $471,124,485

LONDON, March 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The government tonight issued the balance sheet of the United Kingdom for the fiscal year ending today. Total governmental revenues were £914,012,452 ($4,295,858,524) and expenditures £813,408,604 (3,819,734,038) leaving a surplus of £101,515,848 (471,124,485).

The revenue for the year just ended is £210,847,421 below that of last year, while the expenditure also decreased £266,690,023.

The principal items of expenditure were: Interest on war debt, £369,760,511; fighting services £111,000,000; civil services, £286,826,000. The floating debt outstanding is £309,942,500, which is a decrease of £219,573,000, as compared with the floating debt on March 31, 1922.

BABY BURNED TO DEATH.

Pollard, Ark., March 31.—The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Vaughn was burned to death last night when fire of undetermined origin destroyed the Vaughn home here. Mrs. Vaughn was burned severely in an effort to rescue the baby.

MRS. REINECKE GETS $6,000 U. S. INCOME TAX JOB

In the federal building office which bore the inscription on its door, "Office of the Collector of Internal Revenue, U. S., Private," yesterday was seated a woman, Mrs. Mabel Gilmore Reinecke. She was it or it was she, either way..

MRS. REINECKE.

The name, Mabel G. Reinecke, may be painted on the glass of the door just above the foregoing title, where the name of John C. Cannon formerly appeared, it became known yesterday.

It was said that United States Senators McCormick and McKinley had agreed upon her as the successor of Mr. Cannon, who died last week.

At least Mrs. Reinecke has the big federal office temporarily, the first woman to occupy an executive federal position here. She has been the acting head of the department since January, when Mr. Cannon's illness caused him to go to Florida. She was at the helm during the collection of 1922 income taxes, which were payable up to March 15 this year.

Mrs. Reinecke was Mr. Cannon's chief deputy, having been appointed two years ago. While word of her appointment to be his successor was not confirmed officially yesterday, it was said she will remain indefinitely in this important office. The salary is $6,000 per year.

Mrs. Reinecke has been active in local politics since 1911, when she took charge of the Progressive Republican campaign for Charles E. Merriam for mayor. Later she was secretary to Harold Ickes, Progresive national committeeman.

EXPERT WALLER'S EX-WIFE CHARGES FRAUD IN DIVORCE

"Showered with Luxuries to Foil U. S. Tax."

Edward C. Waller Jr., one of "Mike" Faherty's million dollar experts under Mayor Thompson, coerced his wife, Mrs. Genevieve Waller, into obtaining a divorce by fraud and collusion, according to an affidavit filed yesterday at Elkhorn, Wis., by Mrs. Waller's counsel, Albert Sabath of Chicago and Olaf Anderson. The affidavit seeks to have the court set aside the decree granted Mrs. Waller at Elkhorn on Sept. 26, 1922.

Mrs. Waller, who is 30 years old, charges that the city hall expert threatened her with incarceration in a psychopathic institution if she did not sign papers releasing him; that he compelled her to designate her legal residence as Lake Geneva instead of Chicago; that he, with his friend John V. Farwell of Chicago, kept her in custody until the divorce was granted; and that he misrepresented himself as bankrupt in order to be let off with payment of $5,000 annual alimony.

Luxury Shower "Evades U. S. Tax."

In her apartment at the Embassy hotel the city expert's former wife yesterday told her story of anti-climax, which she says began with riches showered upon her by the man who wished her to have them "rather than have the government tax collector get them" and ended with forced signatures to divorce papers.

Married on March 13, 1919, the Wallers went at once to live at 826 Kenesaw terrace. Several years of luxury followed, according to Mrs. Waller—an estate, Shadow Hill at Lake Geneva; a retinue of servants, motors, yachts, furs, jewels, high priced gowns and pin money of $200 a week.

"My husband," Mrs. Waller said, "would give me a new bracelet or a fur cloak, and say, 'I'd rather you'd have this than the government.'"

And there was travel.

"We often spent days traveling around and having a good time." And the ex-wife looked amused.

Wife Finds Self Prisoner.

In May 1922, Mrs. Waller went to Dr. Rogers' sanitarium at Waukesha, Wis., the victim, she said, of a nervous breakdown as a result of veronal taken "to soothe my nerves after some of the wild parties at Shadow Hill, and fed to me by Mr. Waller."

Returning home on Aug. 31, Mrs. Waller, the affidavit declares, found herself a prisoner, cut off from the telephone, her mail censored, in the custody of servants, unable to communicate with friends or relatives.

A few days later, Mrs. Waller stated, "my husband told me he wanted to get a divorce. He had never even mentioned such a thing and I became sick and confused."

Immediately, the affidavit charges, Waller "induced and by threats" compelled his wife to take veronal.

"Compelled to Write Letter."

After threatening her for several days, she declared, Waller said: "If you do not go through with this as I want you to, and sign the bill and get the decree of divorce, I will immediately telephone to Dr. Guesner of the Psychopathic hospital at Oconomowoc and see that you are taken there and kept there."

Her resistance broken, according to her counsel, Mrs. Waller next day at her husband's dictation wrote a letter to John V. Farwell, whom she had never met, saying: "I am in a most unhappy condition. I want an absolute divorce." The letter, it is alleged, was given unsealed to Waller, who sent it to Farwell.

On Sept. 25, the affidavit continues, Farwell and Waller drove Mrs. Waller from Lake Geneva to Elkhorn. Waller, it is charged coached her during the trip on what to say to the attorneys.

Farwell, it is alleged, escorted her to the office of Luce & Wilson, engaged by Mr. Waller to act as her divorce counsel.

Gets Decree, $5,000 Yearly.

That afternoon, her story continues, Farwell took her to see W. C. Norton, divorce counsel for Walworth county, who pronounced the contemplated action "one of collusion and fraud." But, the petition states, "through the representations and arguments of the said Farwell the objections of the said divorce counsel were overcome."

The following day, Sept. 26, the decree was signed and Mrs. Waller agreed to accept $5,000 a year alimony, "having been fraudulently induced to believe that Waller's income was reduced to between $10,000 and $12,000 a year."

"It seemed funny at the time," Mrs. Waller mused, "for I was wearing a gown that cost $1,950 and a $300 hat."

FIGHTING A CITY HALL "EXPERT'S" DIVORCE

Mrs. Genevieve Waller (in center) is shown conferring with her attorneys, Albert Sabath (at left) and Olaf Anderson, regarding her fight to annul a decree granting her a divorce from Edward C. Waller Jr., one of "Mike" Faherty's city hall experts. She charges that the divorce was obtained by fraud and collusion and that she was compelled to sue for it by being threatened and kept a virtual prisoner.

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME WILL BEGIN HERE ON APRIL 29

Clocks will be set forward one hour on April 29.

This was the announcement made yesterday by the Chicago Association of Commerce, in answer to hundreds of queries received daily regarding the advent of daylight saving time in Chicago this year.

Some confusion exists in the public mind regarding the day on which the clocks are to be turned up, it is said. This announcement, made officially, is expected to clear the confusion.

VOLIVA FINED ONE CENT, COSTS IN LIBEL CASE

Both Pastors Rebuked by the Judge.

"One cent and costs" was the fine assessed against Wilbur Glenn Voliva, general overseer of Zion City, by Judge Jacob Hopkins in Criminal court yesterday, following the denial of a motion for a new trial on a charge of criminal libel for which the overseer was found guilty five weeks ago.

The judgment was entered by the court at the end of three hours of heated arguments between Attorney Henry A. Berger, chief counsel for the defense, and State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county, who had charge of the prosecution.

The court costs, it is said, will amount to about $3,000. Voliva, at Zion, refused to comment on the sentence, but previously he had said he would spend $50,000 to win his point.

Pastor His Accuser.

Voliva was found guilty by a jury before Judge Hopkins on Feb. 21 after a trial which lasted over three weeks. He was charged in the indictment with having made libelous statements about the Rev. Thomas Nelson, pastor of Grace Missionary church in Zion. Some of the things he called the Rev. Mr. Nelson, according to the indictment, were "an old tomcat," "an old ram," "a big old blatherskite," and "a tom fool."

Comment by Judge.

"The outstanding feature in this case is that it is a suit between two men," said Judge Hopkins, when the arguments were concluded. "The case is unique inasmuch as two ministers of the gospel are involved. They are supposed to be shining lights to lead the people to whom they preach on to higher things.

"Instead of these men confining themselves to the regular activities of upbuilding and making better men and women, we find them at each other's throats.

"Voliva apparently had some provocation for this publication. But before he did what he did he should have consulted the Scriptures. He should have lived what he preached. I haven't any particular sympathy for either of them. Nelson did wrong in attacking Voliva. The latter did wrong in replying. If they had paid no attention to each other they would not have been in this difficulty.

"I think this case should be brought to a close. I do not see any reason why I should allow a new trial and thereby cause the expenditure of thousands of dollars to settle the differences of two men. I will therefore deny the motion.

"I feel that justice will be done if I make a finding for the state. That is as far as I am inclined to go, however, and I will impose a fine of 1 cent and the costs of the trial."

YACHTS, PALMS, COFFIN, AFFINITY IN THIS DIVORCE

Chicago Woman Named in Mortuary Triangle.

A flirtation over a coffin; hugging and kissing as a by product of a funeral cortège; alleged misconduct on the train carrying the corpse of a dear friend. These form the grotesque angles of a mortuary-affinity triangle revealed in New York yesterday when Mrs. Claire Conover, 6818 Sheridan road, Chicago, was named as co-respondent in the divorce case of the Carroll S. Smiths of New York.

Mrs. Jessica Eudora Smith, granted a divorce yesterday from Carroll S. Smith, New York representative of William Cramp & Sons and a well known marine engineer, brought suit when she learned her husband had received a special delivery from Mrs. Conover.

Palms for Background.

The affinity testified that her acquaintance with Smith, whom she thought unmarried, was not of her own seeking. While staying at the Royal Palm hotel, Miami, February, 1922, she said, Smith flirted with her and finally succeeded in meeting her. He wanted to marry her and take her around the world "because he thought he would not live more than a year and wanted the trip first." He also promised, she said, to adopt her young son.

In addition to admitting improper acts at the hotel, Mrs. Conover told that she accompanied Smith on a train to Jacksonville last March to escort the body of his friend, Otis Cutler, president of the American Brake Shoe company, who had dropped dead on his yacht.

Mrs. Conover testified that she and Smith were together on the train and that both stopped off at Jacksonville when members of Mr. Cutler's family met his body there and took it north.

Merely Hugs and Kisses.

Smith denied all Mrs. Conover's allegations of their intimacy and insisted he had done nothing more than hug and kiss her on automobile rides in Miami last winter.

This is not Mrs. Conover's first unfortunate experience with romance. Her marriage, May 24, 1910, to Harry S. Conover, noted aquatic sportsman and Chicago Yacht club member, was so opposed by her mother, Mrs. John S. Byrnes, 3837 West Van Buren street, that she refused to attend the ceremony. Later she relented and welcomed the son-in-law, whom she had never seen.

Still later, Jan. 29, 1915, she said a hearty and maternal "I told you so," when her daughter filed suit for divorce, charging her husband with desertion. The divorce was granted May 1, 1917, and Mrs. Conover took her 3 year old son, Harry Jr., to her mother's home.

Believed Out of Town.

Mrs. Conover could not be located last night at 6818 Sheridan road, the address given in the special delivery letter sent to Mr. Smith which brought about the divorce.

Her mother denied all knowledge of her daughter's whereabouts, saying: "I don't know anything about her, or about this mixup in New York. I have no idea where she is, but I believe she is out of town."

Mr. Smith is in Miami. He agreed to pay his wife, who sails soon for France, $20,000 cash, $3,000 for attorneys' fees, and to give her his property in New York City.

In Weird Triangle

Mrs. Claire Conover, Chicago divorcee, named as coffin-escort affinity by New York matron, with palms, yachts, and Miami romance as background.

Delay Trial of Banker's Daughter for Larceny

That some form of mania prompted her to charge purchases in loop department stores to other accounts to the extent of $1,000, was the plea advanced yesterday by Mrs. Martha Pofenbarger, 23 year old daughter of a New Boston, Ill., banker, when she was charged with larceny. The case was continued until next Saturday, to investigate the report that Mrs. Pofenbarger had broken parole in Wisconsin, where she faced similar charges.

"America's Finest Men's Wear Stores"

C & C — A New Order of Things

"Finer Clothes"

For men concerned with the finer things of life

GOOD dressing indicates a well ordered mind—the quick thinker, and the straight shooter.

The fellow who is particular about his personal appearance is usually in line for promotion.

Indeed, good clothes are quite essential to success in business. They remove the handicaps, and give Ambition a free rein.

The "new order of things in men's clothes," inaugurated by the Capper & Capper stores, is making a strong appeal to the forward-looking.

To produce these finer clothes we had to raise the standard of the clothing industry. And they're the finest in America.

The superbly tailored suits we offer at $85 are typically representative of "a new order of thinking." There are others at $60, for those whose purse suggests a more modest price—and even as low as $50.

There would be no sky-riders today, if some one hadn't dreamed of progress. We dreamed of finer clothes—and our dream has come true.

Wall Paper

The Exhibits of Wall Paper Shown at the Coliseum Are Here

During the "Own Your Own Home Exposition" at the Coliseum there were 25,000 envelopes distributed, each containing ten samples of modern Wall Paper. For the convenience of those desiring to purchase any of the patterns offered in this package of samples, we have placed on sale all of these designs.

The Modern Bungalow

The four-room bungalow also having been papered with a very artistic color scheme of Wall Papers, it will be interesting to learn that these patterns are also included in our exhibition display.

A group of the best known Chicago artists and decorators were instrumental in creating and planning the displays just closed at the Coliseum. Whether you are contemplating immediate selections or intend later to accomplish the redecoration of your home, it will be of vital interest to you to view this marvelous display of Wall Papers.

Come any day this week and inspect the unusual color schemes. An hour or so spent in viewing these original designs and colorings will be time well accounted for.

LUNDIN GAINS TECHNICAL POINT AGAINST STATE

Prosecution Ordered to Specify Its Counts.

Every contract or transaction of the school board upon which Attorney General Edward Brundage hopes to convict Fred Lundin and his twenty-three henchmen of conspiracy to loot the board treasury of $1,000,000 must be set forth in a bill of particulars, Judge Charles A. McDonald ordered yesterday.

During the informal hearing at which Judge McDonald announced his ruling, Attorneys Clarence Darrow, Charles E. Erbstein, and Patric H. O'Donnell, defense counsel, indicated that they would demand a severance of trial for William A. Bither, former counsel for the board, convicted for conspiracy, and James C. Michaels, president of the Chest Creek Coal company, found guilty in the federal courts Friday of entering false claims against railroads.

Co-Defendants with Lundin.

Both of the men are co-defendants with Lundin, Virtus Rohm, and others in the blanket indictment and, according to the attorneys, their presence in the oncoming trial, after conviction in other phases of the school board loodle-cases, would be prejudicial.

Although Assistant Attorney Generals Marvin Barnhart and Hobart P. Young indicated that no objection to Bither's separate trial would be entered, a vigorous fight will be launched against the move to segregate Michaels. Mr. Barnhart asserted that the state would ask a severance for Charles Wilson, former manager of the Chest Creek Coal company, who it was indicated will appear as a witness for the prosecution.

"If many more of these fellows are convicted in other courts and severances because of possible prejudice are claimed by other defendants there will be no one left to try under the blanket indictment," said Mr. Barnhart.

Must Clarify Counts.

Under the ruling of Judge McDonald, the state will be required to clarify the first ten counts of the indictment, indicating "the means which were employed or to be employed to accomplish the alleged conspiracy."

In response to the plea of Lundin and his fellows that they were precluded from making a proper defense because of the multitudinous charges in the indictment Judge McDonald ordered that the state specify the certain contracts which are claimed to be fraudulent or made in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy.

Keep Jury Locked Up.

Both prosecution and defense attorneys agreed that the jury should be locked up during the trial. This may increase the difficulty in obtaining a panel. Attorney Darrow suggested that "Chief Justice McKinley should be appointed bailiff in charge."

No motions for a continuance of the trial until fall will be presented, it was announced following a meeting of Lundin and his followers with their attorneys in the offices of Attorney P. H. O'Donnell.

"If the state will produce one honestman who will testify that I have ever taken one dirty dollar, I will call upon Judge McDonald to halt the trial and sentence me immediately," declared Lundin, after the conference. "One man and one dollar, but it must be an honest man and a dirty dollar."

Dartmouth Collegians to Play Here Thursday

Chicago alumni of the college are sponsoring the affair, which will include the first appearance in Chicago of Halsey Mills and his jazz band, said to be the finest college organization of its kind.

TILLIE KLIMEK, "POISON WIDOW," GETS LIFE TERM

Hears Sentence with a Smile for Judge.

Tillie Klimek, the squat little Polish storekeeper, who poisoned three husbands and sent a fourth to a west side hospital to fight a battle against death, enacted the last rôle of her "four act play" in Judge Marcus Kavanagh's courtroom yesterday.

Dressed in a new black dress and wearing the same black silk hat she wore on the day she followed the coffin containing the body of her third husband to the cemetery, the little woman stood against the bar and heard Judge Kavanagh sentence her to Joliet penitentiary for the remainder of her life.

No Sign of Emotion.

Not a sign of emotion passed over her face as the court pronounced the dozen words that takes away her liberty and gives her a grey cell and iron bars. When the judge ceased talking she turned her face upwards and smiled. Then she passed out of the room, across the "bridge of sighs" and back to her cell.

Mrs. Klimek was found guilty of a charge of murdering her third husand, Frank Kupczyk, by a jury before Judge Kavanagh two weeks ago. It was brought out by Assistant State's Attorneys William McLaughlin and Thomas Peden that the women placed arsenic in Kupczyk's food and also in the "moonshine" he drank.

The case was brought back to Judge Kavanagh yesterday morning on a motion for a new trial. The judge listened for several minutes to arguments by Attorney John Prystalski and Assistant State's Attorney McLaughlin.

"This is one of the most remarkable cases in the history of criminology," Judge Kavanagh said in denying the motion. "The books do not contain another case like it

Affectionate to Women.

"We have here a woman of average intelligence, a modern housewife and a good cook. When she is among women she is affectionate and, it is said, she is the most popular woman in the jail.

"Yet, the testimony showed, cold bloodedly, without feeling or remorse, she killed three of her husbands and attempted to kill a fourth.

"If this woman was let loose today she would kill another man. She has a desire to see men with whom she was intimate suffer. Criminologists tell us there are a few such people on this earth.

"I venture to say there are more husbands poisoned in this community than the police or authorities realize. But the knowledge that Tillie Klimek 'has gone down' will stay their hands."

HOLD ALLEGED ROBBER.

Charged with attempting to rob the dry goods store of Stanley Grabofsky, 6522 South Ashland avenue, James Jones, colored, of Memphis, Tenn., was held to the grand jury in bonds of $5,000 yesterday.

STEWART, "HANGING PROSECUTOR," QUITS TO TAKE UP PRACTICE

ATTORNEY W. S. STEWART.

William Scott Stewart, known in legal circles as the "hanging prosecutor" on the staff of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, has tendered his resignation to Mr. Crowe to take effect on May 1, it became known yesterday.

Mr. Stewart made the announcement himself while being congratulated by his friends and associates on his success in obtaining the conviction of Bernard Grant, "back o' the yards" gangster, who was sentenced to hang by a jury the day before.

Mr. Stewart will be associated with William W. O'Brien, well known criminal lawyer, with offices in the Chicago Temple building. He was admitted to the bar in 1911.

HIDE AND SEEK IS LOSING GAME FOR TWO BOOZE BOATS

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—Two rum runners, with cargoes of liquor valued at $27,000, were seized by customs inspectors off Atlantic Highlands today.

The capture ended one of the liveliest games of hide and seek and one of the most exciting chases on water that have marked the blockade. The customs flotilla included four boats. They engaged three rum runners in all, but one of the smugglers, a powerboat, capable of making 20 to 25 miles an hour, escaped up the Shrewsbury river, after jettisoning more than half its cargo and after skipping over sand bars.

Report One Wounded.

The skipper of the fast rum runner, according to reports, was slightly wounded in an exchange of pistol shots. Deputy Surveyor William R. Sanders, in charge of the fleet, sent out by Surveyor Thomas W. Whittle to intercept the rum runners, said he could not vouch for the accuracy of that report.

"We did not fire at anybody," asserted Mr. Sanders. "We only shot across their bows to make them stop."

Rum Fleet off Boston.

Boston, Mass., March 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—A rum row of twenty vessels, riding or running without lights between Nantucket and Montauk Point, was reported to coast guard vessels today.

Hotel Sheridan-Plaza

SHERIDAN ROAD AT WILSON AVENUE

500 Rooms—Each with Private Bath

Because its business is in part composed of the patronage of the best class of tourists and other travelers, Hotel Sheridan Plaza can and does quote better rates for permanent residence than can any hotel wholly dependent upon residential business.

While accommodations may be had here at various lower prices, the pre-eminence, in values, of Hotel Sheridan Plaza is overwhelmingly apparent when its rooms at $30, $31.50, $33.50 and $35 a week for either one or two persons are compared with rooms for which other hotels of high standing ask $36, $42 and $56 a week.

Few hotels in all Chicago are favored by so select a patronage as that of the Sheridan Plaza and the reason is that few hotels in all America have as fine accommodations to offer. The notable values of this hotel are the result solely of good planning and sound merchandising that have included everything conducive to comfort and satisfaction while carefully excluding extravagance.

Transportation by elevated, Broadway surface cars or motorbus. Business men resident here find they can ride to and from the loop in taxis, daily, and still effect substantial savings as compared with the cost of less satisfactory accommodations closer to their loop places of business. RICH "LOTHARIO" IS QUIZZED AGAIN ON DOT'S DEATH

But His Six Hour Story Is Not Made Public.

New York, March 31.—After questioning John Kearsley Mitchell, wealthy Philadelphia clubman, and his personal attorney, John H. Jackson, for nearly six hours tonight, Ferdinand Pecora, assistant district attorney, announced he had completed his investigation into the murder of Dorothy Keenan King and that he would turn over all testimony and evidence to the police.

"The rest is up to the police," he said.

Mitchell and Jackson recited every detail of their friendship with the slain model, Mr. Pecora said, and answered all questions "frankly."

Won't Discuss "Clean Bill."

"Do you mean that Mitchell's revelations give him a clean bill of health?" he was asked. He declined to answer.

Mr. Pecora denied a rumor that serious friction had developed between his office and the police. He said both had worked in absolute harmony throughout the inquiry.

"Is an arrest likely?" he was asked.

"That is a matter for the police to decide," Mr. Pecora replied.

"We questioned Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Jackson in separate rooms in the presence of their attorneys," he continued. "We questioned both men upon every conceivable line of the investigation and went into every conceivable detail of their movements.

"Both Answered Fully."

"They answered all our questions fully and frankly when we asked them to tell in full the history of their two years' acquaintance with Dorothy King and their movements on the night she was killed."

Did their statements conflict at any point?" he was asked.

"Their statements were not at all inconsistent."

"Does your blackmail theory still hold good?"

"We learned nothing to alter my opinion that the facts tend more strongly to support that theory than the robbery theory."

In declining to give out any details of the stories retold by Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Jackson, the prosecutor said both statements would be checked up carefully.

No Pitiless Publicity.

"I am not going to say anything for publication about whom I suspect," he said. "I am through with the examination of witnesses. I've always viewed this as a job for the police to handle, because they have greater facilities for this work than we have in this office."

While Mitchell and Jackson were being questioned John Keenan, brother of the model, remained in an outer office.

Police Inspector Coughlin will reopen the inquiry Monday and probably will call in the Keenan family, he announced.

"I see no reason to detain either Mr. Mitchell or Mr. Jackson as material witnesses," he said. "The former expected to return to Philadelphia tonight."

"Dot" King's love letters from admirers are not for sale, Keenan told reporters.

"Those letters can't be bought," he said. "They will never be published if I have to burn them myself. A million dollars wouldn't get them."

Ready for Circus Rehearsals

"Primping Animals

The clippers are humming in Peru, Ind., today, for 600 horses, ponies, and burros—ring and draft stock of the Sells-Floto circus, opening its annual spring sixteen day engagement in the Coliseum—are at the barber shops in winter quarters making ready for the arrival of the show in Chicago Tuesday morning.

Yes, they're bobbing forelocks and roaching manes in the stables, while in the animal barns, balanced on the backs of thirty elephants, men apply mops and brooms and brushes.

Rehearsals begin in the Coliseum Tuesday.

LARSON AGAIN REPORTED SEEN WANDERING HERE

Lewis E. Larson, missing real estate operator and former secretary of the school board, was reported to have been seen in the vicinity of Kedzie avenue and Madison street yesterday afternoon. Mr. Larson mysteriously disappeared about a month ago, after he had complained of a "frightful headache."

Miss Francis Heiple, who is employed in a store at 3232 Madison street, said she saw a man answering Mr. Larson's description stop and stare blankly into her shop window. She was alone at the time and could not follow him.

ONCE DENIED, WIFE AGAIN ASKS DIVORCE

Undismayed by the recent ruling of Judge Timothy D. Hurley that neither she nor Valentine Foley, $10,000 a year silk salesman, was entitled to legal separation, Mrs. Nanette Foley yesterday filed a suit for divorce in the Circuit court.

In her bill, filed by Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, details of the discovery of a "love nest" maintained by Foley for Miss Martha Steen, a beautiful corset model at 3825 Rokeby street, are cited by Mrs. Foley in support of charges of infidelity.

GARY PRESENTS $100,000 TO N. U. LAW SCHOOL

Elbert H. Gary, of New York, chairman of the board of the United States Steel company and an alumnus of Northwestern University Law school, has presented the school with $100,000, the income of which is to go to the purchase and repair of law books. This gift follows many annual donations made by Judge Gary for the same purpose.

The Gary law library, in the University building, was founded in 1903 by Judge Gary with the ultimate purpose of obtaining a complete collection of laws and jurisprudence of all the countries of continental Europe. Through the judge's generosity the library now contains some 56,000 volumes, including complete libraries of European legal scholars and jurists and many single items of great value.

THE MAYORALTY ELECTION.

THE TRIBUNE has no recommendation to make to voters in the mayoralty election. Mr. Cunnea may obtain what he will regard as a satisfactory vote, but we do not regard him as a real contender, and as between Mr. Lueder and Judge Dever, the Republican and Democratic candidates, there is no occasion for a newspaper decision.

It is infrequent that a newspaper with the welfare of its community at heart finds such a situation. Generally there is a sharp conflict with public interest on one side and corrupt politics on the other. This year both parties considered public interest. They took into account the vote getting abilities of the candidates they selected, but they also took into account qualities of administration.

The vote getting ability will be tested, but only a demonstration in office could prove which of the two candidates would make the better mayor. It is the general hope that the man elected will make a good mayor and the city is in luck to have reason for confidence.

Lueder and Dever are not of the same type. The latter has been intimately connected with politics and the former has not. Dever has been in political office twenty-three years, ten as alderman and thirteen as judge. Lueder merely touched the margin of politics when he was appointed postmaster for Chicago. His experience has been in business administration.

The duties of mayor lie in the administration of business complicated with politics. Mr. Lueder's fitness is emphasized in one direction and Judge Dever's in the other. Which qualities would best stand the test in this big office we do not know.

It is something to have lived in political office with credit and honor and something to have lived in business life with credit and honor. In character and in policies the two men seem to stand on the same level. We have as much regard for the intentions of one as for the intentions of the other. We believe that both are hoping to meet the requirements of the city honestly and wisely.

In their general ideas they are not far apart. They substantially agree in programs for the correction of evils which the last eight years have developed conspicuously in city life. Both are pledged to the subway and other construction policies.

Both party managements satisfied the demand in their parties for a good candidate. There is no reason in the character or ideas of either candidate to alienate voters who prefer when possible to preserve their party regularity and to promote government by parties and party responsibility.

In efforts to get good local government THE TRIBUNE has supported Socialist, Democratic, and Republican candidates. It has opposed men because they were crooks, other men because they were weak, incompetent, or foolish. It makes no recommendation in this election because it does not believe public interest will be served by one. If there were an issue outside of the personality of the two men it would be different.

Chicago mayoralty elections nearly always are entirely local in significance. As Oscar Hewitt pointed out, no Democratic national ticket has carried Chicago in thirty-six years, but the city has gone from Harrison Sr. and Hopkins, Democrats, to Swift, Republican, to four terms of Harrison Jr., Democrat; Dunne, Democrat; Busse, Republican; Harrison, Democrat, and eight years of Thompson, Republican.

The city does not confuse local interests with national policies, although it frequently does damage to its local interests. This time it seems about to promote them.

SOME BIRDS ARE BAD BIRDS.

The natural history survey of the University of Illinois finds that the bird distribution per square mile gives 187 English sparrows and 111 crows. The meadow lark is third with 82 and the cowbird with 64. Then come mourning doves, dickcissels, horned larks, bobolinks, yellow hammers, red winged blackbirds, and robins.

Of the four highest in the bird census three are destructive to other birds. The cowbird is one of the thoroughgoing rascals of nature and the female is worse than the male. She has no instinct of motherhood and lays her eggs in another bird's nest. A distracted pair of bluebirds may find this hideous intrusion into their sacraments and tumble the eggs out or they may build another nest above them to start afresh, only later to find that the cowbird has left her family responsibilities again at their hearth.

The sparrow is a pest with which no decent bird will live. The neighborhood which has these quarrelsome, insect ridden, disease carrying birds will see no house wrens, cardinals, tanagers, wood thrush, or any other of the delightful feathered friends, whose very existence makes palpable the truth that there are fairies. A ruby throat might make a saint of a sinner, but the ruby throat will not be where the vermin-carrying sparrow is.

If you like the ruby throat in the nicotiana you do not have sparrows. Crows are the black pirates of bird land. They are vandals in the vineyard. They should be shot or shot at. Even if you do not hit them the persistent hazard discourages them. They can be eaten. Possibly the last jumbo squab you ate was a fat young crow. [Protests from the squab growers expected.]

Now and a little later crows and their nests can be destroyed more easily than when the foliage has given them concealment. They'll be building nests before the leaves are out and their breeding places can be knocked down.

Sparrows can be trapped. They are much more easily disposed of than the crows. They will enter a trap, following a food trail, and can be drowned. We doubt that you can kill the cowbird. It is too lively. But sparrows are easily disposed of and crows can be handled, and if American bird lovers wanted to get the best esthetic enjoyment they can get from their feathered friends they would exterminate the enemy and welcome the friend.

A chickadee singing in a March snowstorm is worth a great deal to life which has many storms in all months and tries to sing. A meadow lark singing from a frozen field is another evidence of endurance and hope. A cardinal in the wych hazel when the world is white is a flame of joy, and a wood thrush singing to the late May twilight is the voice of everything imponderable which exists in the arcanum of mankind.

You cannot have the rowdies of nature and the beauties of it together. Life is elimination of the unfit and the disturber, if it is to be life worth living. Sentimentalism dislikes the elimination, but it does not like the consequences of its stupidity. Kill the sparrow and the crow.

HEARST IN THIS ELECTION.

The peculiarity of this mayoralty campaign is that its object was accomplished before it was begun. The object was the destruction of the Thompson-Hearst organization which for eight years had plundered the city.

Until a short time before the primary election Thompson was the only going candidate in either party. The Republicans opposed to him were divided and it seemed useless to think that they could unite. The Democratic leaders were sitting on the fence watching the Republicans. If the Republicans made the mistake of selecting an unworthy candidate or if they went into a factional fight the Democrats intended to be guided accordingly. They would select as good a candidate as they had to select, but no better.

Thompson, the only one running in these preliminary days, was running strong and Hearst was boosting him. Hearst threw mud at the critics and opponents of the predatory administration. He ignored or apologised for the depredations. He obstructed, so far as he could, the efforts to obtain reparation and justice.

Hearst and his pay rollers and Thompson and his pirates were in close combination and working to give the city four years more of corruption and destruction. Experts were dodging their income taxes, pillagers were dodging the grand jury, criminals were dodging the courts and the accountants, but Thompson and Hearst were using their pay rollers, pillagers, and pirates to put over another four years of brigandage in the schools, in public improvements, in public utilities, and in all city administration.

Suddenly the opposition Republicans did the wholly unexpected. The leaders agreed upon a candidate—Lueder, whose record was irreproachable, whose abilities were recognized, and whose vote getting ability was thought good.

The Democrats had a standard to meet. They came down off the fence and took the best candidate available—Dever. The whole situation was changed. It was changed for Thompson. He went to New York and saw Hearst. Hearst told him they were licked. They were. Thompson agreed. He came home and quit cold. The Thompson-Hearst organization was busted.

Hearst has an ambition which is preposterous to every one but himself. It is preposterous even to his pay rollers, but they do not tell him what they think. He wants to be president of the United States. He thinks he can be and whenever he gets a chance he puts his pay rollers to work to get the Democratic nomination for him. He is in this ecstasy of delusion now.

He has so small an idea of Judge Dever that he thinks that if he is sufficiently malicious, vindictive, and untruthful against Lueder in the present campaign, Dever, if elected, will lead the Illinois delegation into the Democratic national convention for Hearst. He also thinks that he will be given the same privileges under a Dever administration that he had under the abuses of the Thompson administration.

We do not think so, but he does, and he is using the methods he would use to gain favor and advantage with a weak or corrupt man. In spite of him the campaign was decided before it was begun. He is still an apologist and defender of the Small administration, but Thompson is gone and the Chicago issue is settled.

LAWS, LAWS, AND THE MAKING OF LAWS.

The average person would rather be arrested for violation of the traffic laws than be observed eating peas with a knife. He will violate the Volstead act, but he would not be seen wearing tan shoes with his evening dress.

He is more concerned by what other people think of him with respect to their customs than what they think of him with respect to their laws. It is more serious to tuck a napkin in the collar than to tuck a revolver in the hip pocket.

A person may remain a social animal in spite of crimes, but may be banished for boorishness. For most people most of the time the real government was not established by legislatures. Certain laws for the protection of life and property are required, but if the majority of people wanted to break these laws the laws could not exist. The government of custom and tabu does not need law.

Society needs machinery as it becomes complicated. The farmers driving in of a Saturday to a small market town do not need a traffic policeman in the town square nor does the small town need a parking ordinance at the courthouse rail.

Chicago needs both traffic laws and parking ordinances. We submit to the policeman's whistle because we could not move without it. That is the exigency of law and not its substance. It is machinery. It is required to accomplish a desired or necessary thing in an ordered fashion.

The government of custom and tabu, which is so successful without the intervention of state authority or machinery, is established in the real desires of the people. They will not be jailed if they disobey, and yet society largely rests upon their desire to obey. If a majority of the people of the United States suddenly determined that their customs and tabus were undesirable they could, within a week, make the United States a place which would be shunned by every civilized man and woman on the globe and yet the offenders might not have violated a single law.

The foundation of society is in a minimum of statutory law strictly administered and not in a multitude of laws generally ignored. A great deal more than we think, the cure for an ill is in the people and not in the legislature.

The trouble with nearly every American community is that it does not administer the laws that it has. The idea of nearly every American community is that it fails because it does not have proper laws. When it finds that the human equation has stopped one machine it builds a new machine and hopes that because this one is new it will run where the other did not.

When an ill is discovered the question is not what is wrong with the people involved, but what is wrong with the machine which they do not run. A new machine is ordered, but the same people run it in the same fashion to the same result.

Therefore the American nation in its federal and state capacities makes laws annually and biennially by the tens of thousands and the American people are ignorant of what they are and indifferent to what they propose.

A really civilized state would need only its customs and tabus plus a few laws to punish transgressors against the common security, order, and tranquillity, govern marriage, inheritance and the disposal of estates, and guarantee freedom and liberty against transgression.

There would be codes to protect a home against a glue factory, public decorum against public affront, the individual life against the ruffian, the great mass of well ordered people against the marginal minority which would disturb them.

That would be a civilization of the higher order, one of men and not of machinery. It may be beyond attainment, but it is worth consideration. It requires administration and not legislation, but so long as we seek for saints in law making and are content with sinners in administration we shall be chasing our tails in a circle from which there is no exit.

Some centuries before the Christian era Lao Tse in China asked governments not to govern but simply to administer, and said that rulers should not interfere with the natural development of their people but practice "nonacting, nonmeddling, and noninterference," so that the people should scarcely know that they had rulers.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Poor robin has been a-cold in the northeast wind, and hepatica have huddled under their blankets, while men have had only the lengthening day to persuade them that the vernal equinox has danced in, a Russian dance in furs. The magic wand has been an icicle, and spring's steps have fallen in snowdrifts instead of blossoms.

The magic wand will wave in the wind from the south or west some day and all repression will be swept aside. Banks will be pink and white, and all the songs which have been silenced will fill the fields and woods.

Repression is a tyranny which sits upon the impatient soil and soul, but no tyranny is long successful.

LABOR TURNING TO CAPITAL.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has organized the Amalgamated Bank of New York, with $300,000 capital and surplus, and will open the institution for business on April 14. That is an announcement upon which every worker, every property owner, and every so-called capitalist in the country should be congratulated. Whether it turns out to be a success or a failure, it means a closer relationship and understanding between capital and labor. It will teach labor a fuller and more sympathetic appreciation of the problems of capital, and will teach capital the problems of labor.

An interesting point is that the organization of this bank merely marks one more step in a rapidly developing movement of labor into the realm of capital. Eight months ago the Chicago branch of the same union established a bank here. More recently the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers bought a substantial block of the stock of the big Empire Trust company of New York, assuring themselves two seats on the directorate. Two and one-half years ago the brotherhood opened its own bank in Cleveland with paid up capital of $651,000. Now that bank has assets of more than $15,000,000. The brotherhood has opened a second bank in Cleveland, one in Hammond, Ind.; one in Minneapolis, one in Birmingham, and three in California railroad towns. Other labor banks are running in Philadelphia and smaller cities. The pioneering brotherhood has had requests for assistance in organizing such banks in sixty-eight cities.

That is a record of two and one-half years. It is too short a time to determine positively whether the banks will be successful. Probably some will be and some will not. As in other banks, it will depend largely upon the management. But whether they succeed or fail they will teach a lesson.

Labor representatives will sit on directorates with such men as Charles M. Schwab, T. Coleman du Pont, and Minor Keith of the United Fruit company. Such association must be invaluable to all concerned. Best of all, the workers who put their money in these banks will learn that the success of their institutions depends largely on management and that there is no intrinsic evil, but much good, in capital and its judicious use. They will learn that capital plays as important and as honorable a part in production as does labor, and is equally entitled to protection and esteem. They will learn, if they do not already know, that it means power, but not necessarily power for evil. They will come to realize that abuse of this power is no more general and no more serious than abuse of the power of labor.

Such economic movements give organized labor a stake in the game of business. They let labor buy in and enjoy the profits as it accepts the hazards of business. That is fair enough.

For the present we doubt that it will do that. Banking is a highly specialized and trained profession. Neither a clothing cutter nor a locomotive engineer can hope to grasp it in a day. Some bad loans are inevitable. Failures and resulting discouragement are possible. But if the economic movement in general continues we may hope for great advantage to this country through the close sympathy and understanding which must follow.

EXTORTIONATE TAXATION.

In 1917 we paid $5.97 and in 1921 $14.32 on every $100 income. Tax experts show us that if taxes will keep rising at their present speed, we shall within seventeen years pay 50 cents on every dollar earned and in forty-two years the taxes will swallow every cent of income not only of individuals but of corporations, etc.

This steadily increasing grind of taxation affects everybody, because either directly or indirectly we all are taxed, without any exception. Its excessiveness is acutely felt by the business men, who are prevented from saving and building up our trade; the result is a lack of employment. Federal, state, and city taxes are now burdening the population to such an extent that the complaints are universal, and the protests keep becoming more energetic.

It is not any too early, therefore, to demand a reform in the most impressive way. Legislative bodies should become fully aware that the people are bearing this burden with difficulty and are groaning under it. There should be a stop to lavishing money on extravagant schemes, on "pork barrels."

The Republican administration has given a good example by cutting down expenses and putting into effect economical measures in the federal departments. The state and city administrations should now hasten to follow this example, so that the taxes will become smaller and the citizenry will cease to complain.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

DISEASED DISPOSITIONS.

TO THE surgeon health means surgery. To the bacteriologist it means diseases caused by bacteria. To the chemist it means food poisoning. To the sanitarian, typhoid and other diseases. To the entomologist, interested in mosquitoes, it means malaria. To the physical culturist it means exercises to develop muscle. Each is like the dyer's hand, subdued to what it works in.

And now comes another Richmond on the field! The new crusaders contend for diseases of the disposition. This is not exactly the same as mental disease. It is true that persons with mental disease frequently have diseased dispositions, but not always. Some of the most insane are sweet and wholesome in disposition.

On the other hand, persons with physical disease frequently, but not always, have diseased dispositions. Different people react in different ways to invalidism. Some are made selfish and mean and some are made unselfish and affectionate by it.

So, while it is akin to other forms and varieties of illness, it is a thing separate and apart. It is a matter of moods, and moods are neither wholly mental nor wholly separate from the physical. Neither bodily health nor mental health necessarily carries emotional health or health of mood.

Says Dr. Marianna Taylor: "Health, meaning health of the whole, involves elements that make up personality. Many individuals suffer from disorders in their emotional life and in their personality, and these are just as crippling as are disorders of the heart or lungs. No other group of symptoms brings more suffering to the sick persons and more unhappiness to the parents and friends than do these disorders of disposition." Personality disturbances hurt worse than the pangs of gall stones or the pains of neuralgia."

Dr. Marianna Taylor tells in a publication of the Massachusetts Mental Hygiene the story of a survey of 190 people, principally children, who were under observation by a group of welfare agencies for one reason or another. They were social misfits. The following list of symptoms and signs will help to tell what she means by that kind of lack of emotional stability which she calls "disorder of personality."

There were seventeen with the following speech defects. Ten, baby talk; one, stuttering; four, late in talking; two, mutism; bad motor habits, twenty-two; thirteen with fidgets and choreiform jerkings; seven with twitching of eyes or face; two with shivering; incontinence of urine, eighty-six; forty-nine were bed wetters; twenty-seven had incontinence of urine by day; nine soiled themselves, had difficult urination.

Conduct defects were much in evidence. One held his breath; fifty-two had tantrums; forty-one were spoiled children (stubborn, difficult, uncontrolled); eleven, excessive boldness; thirteen, excessive timidity or shyness; one, excessive finicklness or precision; three, runaway; two, truants; one, pilfering; five, biting and scratching; six, seclusiveness.

With sleep disturbances, thirty-nine, as follows: Twelve, restlessness; seven, disturbing dreams; one, sleep walking; six, cried out; two, sighing; eleven, talking in sleep.

Mental habits and mental grades, sixty-three: Thirteen, mentality retarded; eighteen, in same grade two years; three, day dreaming; four, absent minded; three, epilepsy; four, idiocy; eighteen, mentally deficient or epileptic.

Miscellaneous, 118; Seventeen, capricious appetite; two, headaches; one, excessive imitativeness; twelve, masturbation; ten, thumb and finger sucking; thirty-three, nail biting; twenty-six, picking of nose, lips and fingers; three, gritting of teeth; ten, stubbornness; two, excessive jealousy; two had hydrocephalus.

While all children need character training, those with any of the above symptoms are headed for disaster if they are not trained in character and stability somehow and by somebody.

"SOFTENING" HARD WATER.

N. G. writes: I have a water softener in my home. The artesian city water, which is very hard, passes through a chemical substance called borromite, a word I cannot find in the dictionary.

The water is softer than rain water, and I am writing to ask if you consider it safe and healthy to use for drinking purposes, also cooking. The lime that the borromite gathers is flushed out frequent with large quantities of salt.

REPLY.

The chemical softener used is designated by a trade name and, therefore, cannot be found in the dictionary. Water softening is one process with one object.

Disinfection is another, with another object.

Softening a water may remove some bacteria or it may increase them, especially if the apparatus is not disinfected frequently.

However, artesian waters are all safe, as they come from the ground.

I should say your water is safe unless it has been befouled in handling.

CURE IT WITH SUNLIGHT.

D. P. writes: When I was 4 years old I was afflicted with brain fever.

I am 15 now and am well, but since this sickness my ear has been running, a yellow substance coming out of it.

REPLY.

Chronic suppuration of the deeper ear can be cured by daily exposure to sunlight. This cure works occasionally.

Self-treatment by means of Dakin's fluid under the direction of a physician works occasionally.

Some cases require operation to remove dead bone, followed by medical treatment.

APPLICATION FOR CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, March 26.—[Friend of the People.]—I would like to find out where an application for citizenship may be obtained. Please tell me also if it is necessary to call in person for such papers.

A. B. C.

Blank forms on which to give data with a view to file a petition for naturalization may be obtained by writing to "The Naturalization Service, Room 776 Federal Building, Chicago, Ill." The applicant should state the date he arrived in the United States.

It is not necessary to call for the blank personally.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT,
Chief Naturalization Examiner.

"NOT INCORPORATED."

Centralia, Ill., March 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can an individual legitimately sell or promote the sale of an article he has the agency for either through the mail or direct, or give himself or his business a company name ending with the word company by placing the words (Not Inc.) after it? Or is it necessary to place these words after the name?

R. E. G.

Sec. 220 of the Illinois criminal code provides a penalty for use of a corporate name for soliciting business by persons or organizations that are not incorporated. The effectiveness of the section is cut down by 219 Ill. 46, but many cautious persons use the words "not inc." after the word "company."

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BAD STREET CROSSINGS.

Chicago, March 26.—[Friend of the People.]—Can something be done to make the crossings from sidewalk to sidewalk on Diversey avenue, from Crawford avenue west to Cicero avenue, fit to walk on? As it is now, one cannot cross the street without getting covered with mud and water. One or two of these crossings have been filled in with ashes, but it seems that the worst ones have been neglected.

Anything you can do to relieve this situation will be appreciated.

L. E. G.

The crossings on Diversey avenue from Crawford avenue to Cicero avenue will be filled in with ashes in order to make some passable at the earliest possible moment.

Destruction of Bregs, Spain, by the Carlists.

Serious Troubles in Malaga and Barcelona.

SPAIN.

MADRID, March 31.—Dispatches from Barcelona say the situation in that city is grave.

Intelligence has reached there that the town of Bergs, captured by Carlists on Friday, had been destroyed by fire by the insurgents, who, before applying the torch, saturated a number of buildings with petroleum.

SUMMARY OF DEVELOPMENTS

The Spanish Cabinet has rejected the demands of President McKinley for the recognition of the Cuban Republic. The fact was cabled to the State department and by President McKinley read to a number of Senators. Sagasta makes counter proposition looking to further delay. It is believed by the President's friends he will make no further efforts at negotiation, but will lay the entire Cuban matter before Congress. In Washington the belief is general that war is inevitable.

It is generally admitted in navy circles that the flying squadron will be ordered to Puerto Rico to hold the torpedo flotilla in check in the event of a crisis with Spain.

All woodwork and surplus boats are ordered cleared from the warships at Key West and everything is ready for instant action. Patrol boats were sent out for the first time last night.

General Blanco describes the condition of Cuba in connection with the order releasing the reconcentrados. He claims that order is being re-established.

Gen. Gomez will refuse to negotiate with the Spanish on any basis but that of complete independence.

General Garibaldi tells of his project to liberate Cuba, which he deferred to await the action of the United States.

RESTORE THE FINE ARTS BUILDING.

Chicago, March 27.—At a meeting held at the Union League club on March 1 to discuss the matter of restoring the beautiful Fine Arts building in Jackson park there were present representatives of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs, the Association of Arts and Industries, the Municipal Art league, and the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

It is the opinion of leading architects that the Fine Arts building is the most beautiful building of classic architecture in the world. Mr. John Earley has recently developed a material for the permanent outside treatment of the building. It is the same material that is used on the "Fountain of Time" in the Midway plaisance, and has also been successfully used in restoring the Parthenon in Nashville, Tenn. Its texture is not perfectly white, but of a tone that marble would assume after years of exposure.

The Second congressional district of the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs has recently raised $7,000 with which to restore the northeast corner of the Fine Arts building, under the guidance of the restoration committee of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, in the same manner and with the same material, in order that the public may see how beautiful the entire building will be when fully restored.

Undoubtedly the greatest accomplishment achieved by Chicago was the World's Columbian exposition. Our children and our children's children will read and be told of the world's fair. There could be no more impressive reminder of that exposition than to leave as a heritage the beautiful Fine Arts building.

After the building has been restored it should be dedicated to art and industry. It should become the home of a great industrial art school with classrooms and workshops, such as abound in all the industrial centers of Europe. There should be an art museum, a museum of industry, art galleries, convention hall, a civic theater, a woman's memorial hall, and, in addition, provide for the installation of appropriate historical exhibits.

Chicago is rapidly becoming the mecca of art and music. Contemplate the prestige it will give to Chicago and the state of Illinois when this wonderful building is permanently restored and it is heralded throughout the world that Chicago possesses the most beautiful building of classic architecture in existence. The financial benefit that will also accrue to Chicago, as the result of visiting sightseers and tourists who will be attracted by this artistic gem, is inestimable.

The building is practically fireproof. The walls are of brick, from two to three feet in thickness, and are in sound condition. The only part of the building that is in bad repair is the outside covering of stucco. It would be a stupendous civic blunder not to restore this beautiful building and thus prevent its enduring forever.

REGISTER THE FLOW OF WATER FROM LAKE MICHIGAN.

Danville, Ill., March 26.—Would it interest the public to know that there is a larger volume of water flowing out of Lake Michigan through the straits of Mackinac into Lake Huron than there is flowing in the opposite direction?

Then we have another factor. That is the Chicago drainage canal is unable to use all the water flowing into Lake Michigan from its many rivers and creeks. Consequently the surplus water flows into Lake Huron. In my sailing experience on these lakes I have had occasion to pass through the strait of Mackinac hundreds of times. I have many times noted the current at Point St. Ignace running into Lake Huron. The straits at this place are the narrowest, say about five miles wide. I think they will average twenty feet deep from south to north shore.

How are we to prove that there is more water flowing out of Lake Michigan (say from the first of April to Nov. 1.) through the straits of Mackinac than there is flowing in. It's to be remembered it will flow both ways. To record this it would be necessary to have two sets of water meters. One set records the flow west and the other east. They would be similar to the speedometer and placed in deep water so that they would not get injured by navigation. Their record could be taken every twenty-four hours. A ship's patent log would measure a constant current one way. I have thought that two of them should be in the center of the stream and two on each side to record the flow of the current each way.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

PSALM XLVIII.

Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised
In the city of our God, in the mountain of his holiness,
Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth,
Is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King.
God is known in her palaces for a refuge,
For, lo, the kings were assembled,
They passed by together.
They saw it and so they marveled;
They were troubled, and hasted away.
Fear took hold upon them there,
And pain, as of a woman in travail.
Thou breakest the ships of Tarshish with an east wind,
As we have heard, so have we seen
In the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God;
God will establish it forever.
We have thought of thy loving kindness, O God,
In the midst of thy temple.
According to thy name, O God,
So is thy praise unto the ends of the earth;
Thy right hand is full of righteousness.
Let Mount Zion rejoice,
Let the daughters of Judah be glad, because of thy judgments.
Walk about Zion, and go round about her;
Tell the towers thereof.
Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces;
That ye may tell it to the generation following.
For this God is our God forever and ever;
He will be our guide even unto death.

DENIES SANITARY MENACE IN OHIO ST. BEACH PLAN

Engineer Holds Project to Be Feasible.

In answer to reports of health department officials that the proposed Ohio street bathing beach would be unhygienic, George T. Donoghua, for eight years chief engineer of the Lincoln park board, yesterday voiced an opinion that the beach would be a project of sanitary nature.

Tests at the Lincoln park beach, which is practically land locked, showed no pollution, he said, and with strong currents of water running around the breakwaters and jetties at the proposed beach, there will be little chance of it being unsanitary.

The proposed Ohio street beach, situated in the bend in the lake shore near the Municipal pier, will take from the now overcrowded Oak street beach practically all of its bathers. Transportation service over the Chicago and Grand avenue lines will make it possible for swimmers to reach the beach without walking.

In addition space on the pier will be provided for lockers and dressing rooms, something which is impossible at the Oak stret beach.

The project is being fostered by Ald. Dorsey Crowe, and the finance committee already has appropriated $25,000 with which to begin work.

IROQUOIS CLUB WILL PAY HONOR TO E. D. HULBERT

Dr. James Whitney Hall, president of the Iroquois club, has selected the following committee to attend the funeral tomorrow of Edmund D. Hulbert, who was a life member of the club: Judge William E. Dever, Cyrus H. McCormick, Oscar G. Foreman, Melvin A. Traylor, Orva G. Williams, Edwin F. Mandel, Adam Ortseifen, Benjamin L. Rosenthal, William A. Tilden, Carl Latham, William L. O'Connell, Hon. Edward P. Dunne, Thomas M. Hoyne, James C. Jeffery, Edwin Romberg, Edgar B. Tolman, Charles M. Wacker, and Charles J. Vopicka.

The active pallbearers for Mr. Hulbert's funeral are as follows: H. G. P. Deans, F. W. Thompson, C. E. Estes, John E. Blunt Jr., Leon L. Loehr, and Frank G. Nelson.

All are active vice presidents of the Merchants' Loan and Trust company and have long been associated with Mr. Hulbert.

HOLD FUNERAL FOR J. C. CANNON HERE TOMORROW

Funeral services for the late John C. Cannon, who was collector of internal revenue for the Chicago district, will be held tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock from his home, 4521 North Paulina street, to Our Lady of Lourdes church, Ashland and Leland avenues, where requiem high mass will be celebrated. Burial will be in Calvary. Elks' services will be held at the residence this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The funeral party arrived with the body from St. Petersburg, Fla., yesterday morning, and was met by a large group of Mr. Cannon's friends.

Charles S. Williamson, Expert Engineer, Is Dead

Charles Sumner Williamson, formerly vice president of the Mead-Morrison Manufacturing company, died yesterday at his home, 3202 Sheridan road, after a short illness from pneumonia. He was a well known engineer, having specialized in ship loading, ore and coal handling, and dock machinery early in his career. He was the inventor of many improvements in this line.

Mr. Williamson was born on April 12, 1874, in Cleveland, the son of Samuel Williamson and of Stella Sumner Williamson, a descendant of Gov. Increase Sumner of Massachusetts, and a cousin of Senator Charles Sumner.

Charles Sumner Williamson was graduated from Case School of Applied Science in 1895. Three years later he received the degree of civil engineer. He was subsequently connected with various engineering and machinery companies.

Mr. Williamson was a member of the American Engineering society and of the University, Union League, South Shore Country, Flossmoor Country, and Chicago Yacht clubs. He is survived by his widow, Grace M. Williamson, a daughter, Grace E. Williamson, a brother and a sister.

DEATH NOTICES.

IN MEMORIAM.

BACIGALUPO—Rosa Bacigalupo. Remembrance of our darling mother, who passed away one year ago today.
LOVING SONS.

HOEPPNER—Louise, nee Giermann. In memory of our beloved daughter and sister, who passed away six years ago today, April 1. Gone but not forgotten.
PARENTS AND SISTERS.

JABLONSKI — Emma Jablonski. In loving memory of our dear mother, who died three years ago today.
We miss you more and more each day.
LOVING CHILDREN.

MARGGRAF—Charles Marggraf. In fond and loving memory of our dear husband and father, who passed away one year ago, April 2, 1922.
A shadow rests upon our home.
We miss his smiling face;
Where'er we look, where'er we turn,
We see his vacant place.
While on earth he did his best.
His heart was truly kind.
His memory will be ever dear
To those whom he left behind.
We loved him well; no tongue can tell
How much we loved him; and so well
God loved him, too, and thought it best
To take him to his home of rest.
FROM HIS LOVING WIFE AND CHILDREN.

NICHOLS—Martha A. Nichols.
Easter time of all times
—Means Mother time to me.
I see her smile in every flower,
In every leaf and tree.
I hear her voice in every breeze
That ripples by my way,
And from my lonely heart I'm wishing her
Everlasting peace this Easter day.
Devoted Daughter, MARION DECKERSON.

PALMER—Regina Palmer. In memory of my dear mother, who passed away three years ago, May 3, 1920.
Every day brings back sweet memories.
Every memory brings a tear.
Deep into my heart I carry
Thoughts of my mother I loved so dear.
From her lonesome daughter,
EDYTH DOYLE PALMER.

PLUMM—Catherine Plumm. In sad and loving memory of my beloved wife and our sister who passed away one year ago today, April 1, 1922.
While on earth she did her best.
Her heart was truly kind:
Her memory will be forever dear
To those she left behind.
FOR HUSBAND AND SISTERS.

RYAN—Margaret E. Ryan. In loving remembrance of our dear wife and mother.
Loving mother, true and kind;
No friend like her on earth we'll find.
For all of us she did her best;
God grant her peace and happiness.
LOVING HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

SCHILTZ—Marie Schiltz, nee Zuhlke. In memory of our dearly beloved wife and mother who passed away two years ago today, April 1, 1921: "Gone, but not forgotten."

FARMERS' BLOC CARVES UP BIG CZECH ESTATES

Pay Noble Owners on Basis of 1915 Price.

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PRAGUE, March 31.—The annual emigration of 80,000 Czechs, which has resulted in 2,300,000 persons, or 23 per cent of the entire nation, establishing themselves abroad, is being halted by agrarian reform in Czecho-Slovakia.

A law, which practically expropriates the surplus of all estates of more than 325 acres of arable land or more than 625 acres of other land, has just been declared legal by the supreme court. The owners will be indemnified and for the first time in 400 years the Czech and Slovak farmers will be able to buy the vast estates of the Austrian and Hungarian nobles which they have cultivated. The land is being sold on easy terms, at prices fixed on values in 1915, and the younger generation is remaining on the soil instead of going to Chicago.

Result of Abuses.

This drastic policy of expropriation was the result of abuses dating back to feudal times, when all the vast church properties had a privileged character and the nobles confiscated and held all the best land.

In Bohemia 1,548 families possessed two-fifths of all the land. In Moravia, also a part of the Czecho-Slovak republic, only one-sixth of the land belonged to small holders. In Silesia half the soil was held by a few families. In Slovakia 1,000 persons held two-fifths of the land. In Ruthenia 750 persons held one-third of the whole area. As the result of this feudal system, which was still in force at the outbreak of the war, the small farmers were economically dependent on the large land owners.

Law in Austria.

In the Austrian republic the law of May 31, 1919, fixes the amount of indemnity on the basis of the sale price of land customary between 1910 and 1914, while assessing its value at an amount twenty-five times higher than the net average price obtained during the same period.

In Poland the law of July 15, 1920, fixes the indemnity on redeemed land either by amicable settlement or by expropriation at one-half of the sale price, although it prescribes reductions of landed estates to lower the price at which the land is given up.

In Roumania the law of December, 1918, fixes the indemnity on the basis of the prices obtained by the sale of land, between 1911 and 1915, and the amount of the lease for that period.

In Yugoslavia a recent bill stipulates that the amount of the indemnity must not exceed the average market price of land between 1910 and 1915, and also prescribes a reduction for landed estates, ranging from 2 to 40 per cent.

SCRATCH BRINGS DEATH.

Blood poisoning, the result of a scratch of his hand, received while cleaning his bicycle, caused the death yesterday of Ralph Bowers, 17 years old, 6858 Harper avenue.

WORRIED

MRS. "PATSY" ROSS.

"What to do? What to do?"

This was the refrain of Mrs. "Patsy" Ross as she paced her apartment at the Birchmont hotel last night and pondered ways and means of accompanying her prisoner husband, Herbert I. Ross, to Los Angeles tomorrow. He goes in custody of Detective Sergeants Bahr and Birch to face bad check charges.

"Herbert is innocent," she said. "If I could only go with him I could clear him—I know I could. But I'm penniless, helpless. They say I'd be ashamed to go along if Herbert was in handcuffs, but that's a lie."

Mrs. Ross sidestepped queries touching the report that she is one of the two divorced wives of Thomas Thorkildsen, "Borax King of Death Valley," and denied she had sought Torkidson's aid in her present trouble. She admitted, however, a vain attempt to reach reputedly wealthy relatives of Ross in Pittsburgh and Baltimore. Further charges may be placed against Ross for alleged worthless check operations in Racine, Wis., and Minneapolis, officials say.

HETTY GREEN'S SON DENIES HE IS REJUVENATED

Miami, Fla., March 31.—Denying the report that his improved health was due to the Steinach "rejuvenation" surgery, Col. Edward H. R. Green, son of the late Hetty Green, today asserted that the operation he underwent in New York last month was not the much discussed Steinach treatment.

He admitted he had considered the operation but his doctors advised against it at the time.

"My doctors told me that I could take the Steinach treatment this spring if I still wanted to," Mr. Green declared. "When you are not feeling well you will agree to do almost anything if you think you can be made better," he remarked when asked if he intended to make the experiment.

RECAPTURE FLEEING WOMAN.

Arrested for disorderly conduct, Miss Agnes Hawkins, colored, 25 years old, 46 West 35th street, was being led to a cell in the South Clark street station yesterday, when she broke away and fled. She was recaptured after a short chase.

ORGANIZED LABOR TAKING STEPS TO CLEAN OUT REDS

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Organized labor has launched an active drive against "borers from within" in localities where unions have been under control of the ultra-radicals. Minneapolis, which has long been regarded as a leading outpost of radicalism, is the first to register action against domination of the trades unions by the so-called Reds.

The central labor organization in that city has recently voted to stop making its official organ a mouthpiece for communists and one-big-unionists, and to get back to the principles of the old trades union movement.

Radicals Long in Control.

Inside information brought down from the Twin Cities in the last few days indicates that the American Federation of Labor forced the house-cleaning in Minneapolis, which took place early in March, before the trial of W. Z. Foster started in St. Joseph, Mich. For a long time the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly has been controlled by radicals, many of whom have been followers of Foster. Local unions which remained loyal to the policies of the American Federation of Labor discontinued sending delegates to the assembly and the radicals ran the show without let or hindrance.

Months ago Samuel Gompers, head of the American federation, attacked the Trade Union Educational league, Foster's organization, and editorially declared in the Federationist that it was "devised in Moscow" to disrupt the American Federation of Labor and to "replace it by a Red revolutionary federation" affiliated "with the Bolshevist International at Moscow."

Assembly Returns to Fold.

In Minneapolis, where the radical propaganda for "industrial unionism" and "proletarian revolt" was widely disseminated, affairs reached a stage where the American Federation of Labor at length sent in an organizer, Paul J. Smith, with instructions either to bring about return of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor assembly to the fold of the American federation or to revoke the charter and organize a new assembly. The showdown came some three weeks ago, when the Minneapolis labor assembly adopted a resolution, with only a few dissenting votes, pledging itself to hit the trail back to old trades union principles.

It instructed the editor of the official organ, the Labor Review, to edit the publication in full harmony with the aims and policy of the labor movement as exemplified by the American federation, and put up the bars against the publication of propaganda aiding the communists and one-big-unionists.

Word from the Twin Cities is that Minneapolis is undergoing a rapid reconstruction in its labor movement. In Chicago labor circles it is interpreted as signifying that Mr. Foster has lost the outpost where radical activities were strongest. The campaign, it appears, is to be extended into other localities where the "proletarian revolt," the "abolition of capitalism" and "a workers' republic," and the rest of the revolutionary propaganda have been most actively peddled and where "borers from within" are running the labor organizations. Apparently there are not many of these cities left, so reports from organized labor indicate.

CHINA WILL USE BOYCOTT LASH TO MAKE JAPS BOW

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, March 31.—"Parliament and the government are one on the question of the abrogation of the twenty-one demands treaty with Japan," Premier Chang Shao Tsang of China told THE TRIBUNE today in a frank discussion of China's efforts to recover Liaotung peninsula.

"Both unquestionably reflect the innermost lives of the Chinese people as evidenced by students, merchants and other democrats throughout the republic. The government will soon address another note to Japan, which if refused will cause China, being unable to employ force, to turn to an economic weapon, the boycott.

"Japan's contention that China accepted the treaty is not true. The treaty was made by Yuan Shi Kai in pursuance with his monarchist ambitions and in defiance of all the wishes of the Chinese people. Parliament flatly repudiated the treaty."

May Appeal to World League.

Although the premier was not willing to be quoted in this connection, THE TRIBUNE learns authoritatively that China is contemplating appealing to the league of nations should other action fail.

The situation brings Peking and Manchuria nearer to reunion, while the Anfuites' celebration of Tuan Chi Jui's birthday at Tientsin gives an indication of their hearty support. Even in the south the question is being used to aid reunification, the premier admitting to THE TRIBUNE that he has addressed a personal communication on the subject to Sun Yat Sen.

Chang to Join Reunion.

The present vacancy in the foreign office affords an opportunity for delaying the note to Japan until the full temper of the people can be judged. Chang Tso Lin's approaching birthday party probably will afford a vehicle for the reunion of Peking and the Manchurian tiger.

RUSSIA SHOOTS CZARISTS; JAILS MANY PLOTTERS

Uncovers Big Society of Monarchists.

LONDON, March 31.—[United Press.]—The Russian government today discovered headquarters of a huge monarchist organization at Kharhov, with branches elsewhere throughout the Ukraine, according to a Central News dispatch from Copenhagen.

Many arrests were made, some of the monarchists were shot, but the leaders escaped, according to the report, which says close liasan between the organization unearthed today and royalists abroad, was disclosed.

PRELATE STILL ALIVE

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, March 31.—[Tribune Radio.]—Vicar General Budkiewicz of the Roman Catholic church will greet Easter Sunday in a cell, a government official declared. He is alive tonight.

The reply of the foreign office through the head of the Anglo-American department, Gregory Weinstein, to the note of Robert Hodgson, head of the British trade mission, indicates that the government is not influenced by petitions of protest from foreign countries. Mr. Hodgson asked for clemency in behalf of Foreign Minister Chicherin.

Mr. Weinstein's reply says "Russia, an independent sovereign state, had the undeniable right of passing the sentence to conform with its own legislation on people who break the laws of the country."

The Prisoners' Good Friday.

M. Kommidoff, attorney for the Roman priests, today gave THE TRIBUNE a dramatic account of how the priests spent Good Friday in prison.

"Before the executive committee's decision was announced to them, the guards beckoned to Mgr. Budkiewicz, who left the large common room which hitherto has housed all sixteen," said M. Kommidoff. "Mgr. Budkiewicz was taken to solitary confinement in a small cell. A representative of the court then read aloud the commutation of Archbishop Zepliak. For a moment there was silence and then a shout of joy rang through the prison. The fourteen priests crowded around Archbishop Zepliak, all endeavoring to kiss him at the same time. The excitement was intense. They kissed his robe and shouted for joy and some kneeled.

Joy then Sadness.

"Archbishop Zepliak alone was unmoved. While his brother priests were joyful because his life had been saved he alone realized that Mgr. Budkiewicz' removal from the common cell probably meant his death sentence.

"After the joy had subsided Archbishop Zepliak called his fellow priests' attention to the fact that the decision read to them did not mention Mgr. Budkiewicz. He took this to indicate that the death senence had been confirmed. The happiness immediately vanished from the prison room. Under Archbishop Zepliak's guidance all knelt in a semi-circle and prayed for Mgr. Budkiewicz."

The trial of Patriarch Tikhon of the Greek Catholic church in Russia will begin on April 19, according to Attorney Kommidoff, who has been asked to join the counsel for the defense.

Germany Makes Appeal.

BERLIN, March 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The German government has instructed Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, ambassador to Russia, to use his influence informally with the Russian government towards securing modification or revocation of the sentence imposed by the Moscow court on the Catholic prelates, it was officially stated today. It was added, however, that Germany would not make a formal protest.

ETHIOPIA FINDS PAGE IN HISTORY THROUGH TOMBS

Excavations Recall Story of Race.

Cambridge, Mass., March 31.—[By Associated Press.]—The history of the ancient kingdom of Ethiopia through the long span of 1,100 years—from 750 B. C. to 350 A. D.—has been completed in principal outline by excavations in tombs and pyramids in the Anglo-Egyptian Soudan by the Harvard-Boston expedition headed by Prof. George A. Reisner.

The most recent researches of the expedition in the pyramids at Meroe have established that the culture of the Ethiopians stood as an outpost of Egyptian civilization in middle Africa, Dr. Reisner said, and that the invention of a script of their own was evidence that the Ethiopians were people of genius.

The Ethiopians, Dr. Reisner declared, are not and were not African Negroes. He described them as "dark colored races, in which brown prevails."

Near Tomb of King Tut.

The impression that Ethiopia was governed by a long line of queens named Candace, held in the New Testament and by Pliny and Strabo, was dispelled by the excavations. It appeared that from 750 B. C. every ruler of Ethiopia was a male, Dr. Reisner asserted.

This latest report from Dr. Reisner has to do principally with discoveries at Meroe, which is not far from Khartum, and some 600 miles south of Luxor and the valley of the kings, where the discovery of King Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb was recently made. The report picks up the main outlines of the history of Ethopia from 300 B. C., where Dr. Reisner's earlier report of researches at Napata left off.

The capital of Ethopia was changed from Napata to Meroe at that time. Dr. Reisner, whose report from Napata made it possible for the first time to write the history of Ethopia from 750 B. C. of 300 B. C., now brings the story of the kingdom in main outthrough the following six and one-half centuries up to conquest of the Abyssinians about 350 years after Christ.

The principal achievement of the expedition during the past three years, under the auspices of Harvard university and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, has probably been scientific examination and analysis of the fifty royal tombs in the cemeteries at Meroe, the report indicated.

The identification of the tombs with the names of the kings and queens buried in them has been completed except in the cases of twenty-three of the royal persons buried in the north cemetery.

The custom of sati-burial, according to which the members of the king's household killed themselves or were killed when he died, and were buried in the same tomb, prevailed at Meroe from the second century B. C. onwards, says Dr. Reisner.

"The great outstanding feature of the history of Ethopia was that the Ethopian cultural unit stood as an outpost of Egyptian civilization in middle Africa," Prof. Reisner said.

Invented Own Script.

"The Ethiopians, however, were not so entirely dependent on Egyptian civilization as this might seem to indicate, for they invented a script of their own, as few other nations have done, unique in the form of the letters, adapted only to the writing of their own peculiar language.

"As always throughout Ethiopia," Dr. Reisner said, "the burial chambers of every tomb which we excavated had been plundered. The gold objects actually found by the expedition were, therefore, only those overlooked or dropped by the thieves.

"There had been elaborate gilded mummy cases, sometimes with inlaid stones, carved wooden beds, and toilet boxes with decorated ivory inlays, rings, earrings, necklaces, bracelets, girdles, and crowns of gold on the mummies."

The most important objects of local manufacture found by the expedition were the products of the goldsmiths, Dr. Reisner said. These included a series of twenty gold seal rings dating from about 100 B. C. to about 100 A. D., and thirty silver seal rings of about the same date.

ENGINEER OF CRACK NORTHWESTERN TRAIN RETIRES ON PENSION

CHAS. SCHLAGEL, passenger or a pedestrian; and the record of his heroism during the Chicago fire in 1871, when he piloted a score of coaches through the burning area. Mr. Schagel estimates that he has traveled 1,920,000 miles. [Matsene Photo.]

Charles Schagel, 1532 Park place, Des Plaines, who rose from the job of "engine wiper" to engineer on "the Limited," crack train of the Northwestern railroad, has been pensioned and retired. He completed 52 years' continuous service on the road.

Among the high points in the story of Mr. Schagel's long service is the fact that his train has never injured nor killed either a

He is 68 years old, is widely known in Masonic circles, and has been a member and officer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for forty years.

MAY RAISE TEACHERS' STANDARDS.

Recommendations to raise the standard of qualification of school teachers and to reduce the size of their classes were adopted by the Central Teachers' council yesterday. Supt. Peter A. Mortenson stated that the matter would be taken up with the board of education.

DEATH TOLL OF AUTO AND TRAIN WRECK NOW IS 8

Columbus, O., March 31.—The death of W. L. Siebert of Cincinnati, a student locomotive fireman, today increased the death toll of the wrecking of the Southwestern limited of the Big Four railroad at the northern outskirts of the city yesterday to eight.

Five men, all aboard the train, the speed of which was estimated at seventy miles, and a woman and her two small children, sole passengers of an automobile, which the locomotive struck at a grade crossing, were the victims. Eleven injured at hospitals today were reported on the road to recovery.

Railroad officials have not determined whether the train bucked after sudden application of the air brakes or if some part of the demolished auto got under the "pony wheels" of the locomotive, causing it and six of the seven passenger cars to leave the rails.

LOWLY GERM IS GIVEN AS PROOF BRYAN IS WRONG

Washington, D. C., March 31.—If William Jennings Bryan's denial of the theory of evolution be correct, Adam must have survived for 930 years all the germ diseases which afflict man today and Eve must have been created by vivisection. In addition, Noah must have been not only a capable ship captain, but the world's first successful public health officer, because he must have taken all the germs into the ark and taken them out again without losing a single elephant.

So declared Dr. Charles W. Stiles of Wilmington, N. C., noted zoologist and scientific research worker before the Washington Biological society tonight.

Describing himself as "Mr. Bryan's self-appointed attorney on germs," Dr. Stiles argued to his fellow scientists that if one doesn't wish to believe all these things one cannot agree with Mr. Bryan.

Germs Created in Beginning.

"According to Mr. Bryan's premises," Dr. Stiles said, "all germs which cause disease must have been created in the beginning as they exist today. If it is to be conceded that those germs were originally created in some form other than as disease germs, the theory of evolution stands admitted.

"Obviously, since Adam was the last animal created, and since the animals were not created until after the plants, it is unthinkable that any of the numerous germs which cause disease were created after Adam. Since disease germs are dependent for their existence upon animals and plants in which they cause disease, it is clear that these germs could not have been created or existed prior to the creation of their victims.

"A challenge of this deduction would be an admission that the germs were not created as they are today, but that they later evolved into disease germs, but this would be an admission of evolution."

Says Adam Had 'Em All.

Therefore, said Dr. Stiles, if Mr. Bryan's challenge is to be accepted, "we must conclude that Adam harbored every germ disease which is characteristic of man or dependent on man for its life cycle."

According to that, said Dr. Stiles, Adam must have had among other trouble various species of cooties, typhus fever, hookworm, pneumonia, tapeworm, Jacksonian epilepsy, three kinds of malaria, sleeping sickness, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, Asiatic cholera, mumps, whooping cough, yellow fever, scarlet fever, measles, meningitis, infantile paralysis and small pox.

MISS LOUISA HOAR.
[O. H. & E.]

Boston, Mass., March 31.—Friends of Speaker Frederick H. Gillett of the national house of representatives received today the announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Gillett's younger daughter, Miss Louisa Hoar, to Christopher Lafarge of New York. Miss Hoar is the daughter of the late Congressman Rockwood Hoar and a granddaughter of the late Senator George F. Hoar. Mr. Lafarge is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Grant Lafarge, a grandson of the late John Lafarge, the artist, and a great-grandson of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry. He is now finishing a course at the architectural school of the University of Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT WILL ATTEND GEORGIA SERVICES TODAY

On Board President Harding's Special Train, March 31.—The special train carrying President Harding and his vacation party from St. Augustine to Augusta, Ga., reached Jacksonville at 8:35 o'clock tonight and left fifteen minutes later.

The special will reach Augusta early tomorrow and the party will go to the Bon Air Vanderbilt hotel, where they will stay during the visit. The President plans to attend Easter services in Augusta tomorrow morning.

Confers with Daugherty.

Attorney General Daugherty changed his plans to leave St. Augustine for Asheville, N. C., in advance of the presidential party and traveled on the same train to Jacksonville. Just before reaching Jacksonville President Harding went up to Attorney General Daugherty's car and spent some time with him.

Those who saw the President and his wife step from a train twenty-five days ago at Ormond and who also saw them today could plainly see the benefits derived from the vacation away from the cares of Washington and without schedules or any firmly established routine.

Both Vastly Improved.

The President, through the open life of the houseboat trip and the daily rounds of golf, has been bronzed by the Florida sun, and, in the words of a member of the party, "has improved 100 per cent."

Mrs. Harding, who left the White House for the first time since her illness of last fall, has been recuperating rapidly and during the week in St. Augustine has surprised old friends by her improved condition.

Trestle Falls, Ties Up Northwestern Traffic

Traffic on lines of the Galena division of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad was held up yesterday when an overhead trestle across the tracks near California avenue was brought down by an empty passenger car, which hit an open switch and ran afoul of the trestle supports. No one was injured.

SAVE MONEY WITH ROTARY

Over 100,000 Rotary Owners in 1922!

Write Today for Descriptive Booklet

"Can I burn oil as cheaply as coal?" is a question often asked. YES, you can! Heating with the ROTARY Oil Burner costs less than with coal. $1 spent for oil produces more heat than $1 for coal. Thousands of Rotary owners have proved this. You don't have to be a millionaire to use ROTARY. It helps to make you one.

One ROTARY owner says, "I am saving $10 per week as against coal, to say nothing of the saving in time and expense formerly required to haul ashes and shovel coal." Scores of others enthusiastically endorse ROTARY. You, too, can save. Let us tell you how.

ROTARY

"The Successful Oil Burner"

Endorsed by best mechanical engineers. Burns cheap, safe fuel oil. Is easily installed in any furnace. Made small enough for a cottage or single store—large enough for an 18-apartment, factory or store building. Not dependent upon uncertain natural draft. Has no electric motor—no additional electric or gas bills. No machinery noise. Simple in construction. Nothing to get out of order. Has only one moving part and this is automatically lubricated. The low cost of ROTARY will surprise you. In ROTARY the little water used intensifies heat, like a rainy day gives pep to the automobile.

Write for full information. Learn why over 100,000 have chosen ROTARY. Be sure to write—today!

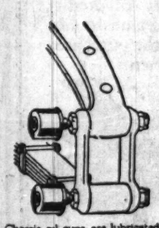
Hidden Values Keep Essex Young in Long Service

After fifty, sixty and seventy thousand miles, Essex cars keep the dash and action of new cars. They stay tight and quiet. They keep their economy of operation and maintenance.

Service like that is not accidental. It results from hidden values which are fully revealed only in long hard service. Attention to detail extends to parts you never see. Finest roller bearings are used where commonly plain bushings are used. For the weight carried the Essex frame is the sturdiest built, save one.

Qualities like these make Essex cost less in the long run than the lowest priced cars, because of the difference in repair, maintenance and replacement costs.



Chassis oil cups are lubricated with an oil-can—clean, simple, effective. Large size, require infrequent attention. Patented and exclusive to Hudson-Essex. Also compare shackle adjustment with average type, which require insertion of metal washers or shims. Only costly cars share this Essex feature.

LEARNING PERILS DEVIL AND IMPS, SLATEN ASSERTS

Jonah and Noah Won't Mix with Modern Ideas.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

If you want your child to swallow the Bible whole, don't send him to college.

DR. A. W. STATEN.

If you wish him to believe literally in a devil with horns and a twisted tail, don't let him get to high school. And if you want him to accept word for word the Bible story of creation, Noah, and Jonah, never let him read or write.

This is the advice which Dr. A. Wakefield Slaten, new pastor of the Third Unitarian church, Austin, gives to parents in his pamphlet, "How Can I Help My Child Get the Most Wholesome Religious Ideas?" issued yesterday.

Dr. Slaten, the Baptist minister who was driven from the William Jewell Baptist college at Liberty, Mo., because of his liberal views and his antagonism to the "fundamentalists," whose cause Bryan is championing, believes in interpreting the Bible in modern terms.

Don't for Pious Parents.

"If your heart is set," the modernist writes in his new treatise, "on keeping intact in your child's mind a certain set of doctrines which you regard as the sum and substance of the Christian religion, don't let him go to college. Those doctrines are almost sure to be blown to bits by the explosive power of modern ideas.

"For that matter, don't send him to high school. Not to a good high school, at any rate. Even there he may hear of modern history or science."

For old fashioned parents who wish their offspring to smell brimstone and see fiery imps of Satan, Dr. Slaten holds out this scant hope: "Perhaps one may find a school where the standards are low enough, and the textbooks old enough, and the teachers sufficiently belated, so the child may go through with his basket of eggs unbroken. But it is very uncertain."

Satan Just a Bogey Man.

For himself he prefers to regard Satan as an old bogey man, a combination policeman and bookkeeper, used to frighten adults. When you are urged to "go to the devil," you are without a destination, according to the comforting doctrine he preaches.

"The safest way," Dr. Slaten declares, "to insure the perpetuation of a stock of religious doctrines unimpaired that has ever been found is to nip education in the bud, and never even let the child learn to read and write."

For the modern parent, the modern preacher has the following suggestions: "Your whole task is to help your child grow into a worthy, productive citizen. God will take care of your child's soul. Leave that to Him. Disregard the future world entirely and center on America.

"We are not outfitting emigrants for another planet, but training children to be farmers, and storekeepers, lawyers, teachers, and preachers. Give your child a few definite, broad, tenable religious ideas which he can always respect."

"A Perfect Lady"

The Harefoot club, the dramatic organization of the University of Wisconsin, will present "Kikmi," an elaborate extravaganza, at Aryan Grotto temple, 8th street and Wabash avenue, on April 9. This is the silver anniversary production of the club, which is making unusual efforts to offer an attractive show. Donald Marvin is one of the "chorus girls," and, as the press agent explains, "Although all our girls are men, every one's a perfect lady."

SMALL'S LASH FOR BONUS BODY, CAPITAL CHARGE

Springfield, Ill., March 31.—[Special.]—Gov. Small's attempt to annex the Springfield municipal government as an adjunct to the state machine, is becoming the main issue in the capital city campaign as election day approaches.

While some of the candidates on the state house ticket are denying allegiance to Small, their opponents are asking why it is that they were put in race by the organization which represents the governor here.

Charges by Senator Searcy [Rep., Sangamon], that state civil service employés are being driven under the whip to contribute financial aid as well as votes to campaign here caused a stir in the capital.

Now comes the accusation that war veteran employés of the service recognition board, charged with responsibility of distributing the soldiers' bonus, also are under the lash.

REDUCES COAL PRICES FOR APRIL FROM $1 TO $3.50

Consumers' Lead Likely to Be Emulated.

Coal price reductions ranging from $1 to $3.50 a ton, depending upon the grade, were announced late yesterday by the Consumers Coal company for April, and may remain in effect longer. While no statements were forthcoming from other dealers, indications are that most of them will follow this lead.

The reductions, so far as the Consumers company is concerned, were frankly heralded as a business proposition, but, it was said, such concessions should, nevertheless, be an inducement to consumers to accept the recent advice of F. R. Wadleigh of Washington, federal fuel distributor, to buy next winter's fuel during the spring and summer.

Operators Assist Cut.

"We have reductions on certain kinds of coal from the operators," said M. E. Keig, vice president in charge of sales and purchases of the Consumers Coal company, last night. "We will give the consumer full benefit, and in addition we propose to figure our overhead at cost.

"The very best southern Illinois lump, egg, and nut (known as prepared coal) will be $1.75 cheaper than the winter price. Anthracite will be $1 cheaper; solvay coke, $2 cheaper, and Pocahontas mine run, which is in great demand for large plants and apartment buildings, will be reduced from $12.50 a ton to $9.

"This is not exactly a philanthropic proposition with us. We simply are prepared to take a loss to promote sales and utilize overhead. If we can deliver 100,000 tons in April under the prices we are making we hope to break even; if we deliver 75,000 tons we will lose a lot of money, because, in either case, we have our constant overhead of yards, equipment, and employés."

Find Producers "Bullish."

Mr. Keig said his company, believing the miners' strike would last no more than thirty or sixty days, last spring advised customers not to lay in stocks. Because this advice proved poor, he added, the company now is merely presenting facts, leaving conclusions to the consumer.

The April prices quoted range from $5.75 a ton for central Illinois mine run coal to $16 a ton for high grade Deep Valley anthracite coal.

ACCUSES BILL HART

ELIZABETH MacCAULLEY.

HART SUPPORTS CHILD HE DENIES, WOOLWINE SAYS

Denver, Colo., March 31.—William S. Hart, "two gun man" of the movies, despite his emphatic denials, made a $50 a month trust fund for a child alleged by the mother to be Hart's, Thomas Lee Woolwine, district attorney of Los Angeles, Cal., declared here today he had been informed following his own investigation of the case with a view to bringing criminal action. The settlement came after the woman engaged an attorney to bring a civil suit, Mr. Woolwine said.

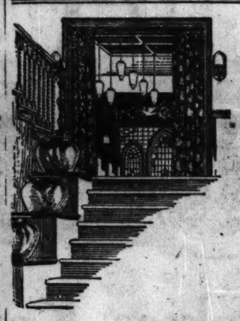
"The case first came to my attention in December, 1918," Mr. Woolwine stated. "The woman with the baby came to my office, declaring Hart was the father and that he had refused to see her. So I summoned the actor to my office.

"Hart denied everything; denied it with emphasis and preparations were being made to take criminal action when the woman made ready to take civil action. Then I was informed that the case had been settled out of court.

"So far as I know, Hart never admitted parentage of the child."

Hart Refuses to Talk.

Hollywood, Cal., March 31.—William S. Hart, the actor, when shown the statement accredited to District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine, read it carefully, but refused to make any comment other than that his attorney, James Scarborough, had instructed him to say nothing for publication.



"Hursen Funerals" Famed All Over America

The charges made for Hursen funerals are from one-third to one-half the charges which are usually exacted elsewhere. This sounds amazing to those who have been subjected to an enormous outlay of money for funerals not conducted by Hursen.

Yet, another amazing fact is this, that in spite of this vast reduction in cost to you, the elegance of all Hursen materials and Hursen equipment so generously furnished to you cannot even be equaled anywhere else in America.

Supreme elegance, and low cost—these are two of the many features which have made "Hursen's" what it is today, the largest and the most remarkable institution of its kind in America.

500 people at one time can attend a funeral at any one of Hursen's 3 establishments in Chicago, without ever being crowded for room. Each establishment is built like a mansion. Each has great chapels, spacious meeting and ritual rooms for lodges and societies, and smaller presence-chambers and family sanctums secluded from all the rest.

Hursen automobiles at Hursen funerals excite universal admiration everywhere. For comfort, roominess and elegance they are unsurpassed by many of the highest-priced automobiles of the day. The charges for these Hursen-cars are no higher than the usual auto hire. Call Hursen, of course!

PERSEVERANCE.

The poor fisherman is always looking for the next stream. The wise one studies the opportunities for a catch in the stream which he visits first and usually returns with a string that is the envy of the less persevering.

In business as in fishing, obstacles must be studied and surmounted, rather than given in to. It is a sign of failure to be always seeking a change.

A policy of "stick-to-it-ive-ness" is sure to end in Business Success.

INSIDE STORY OF CRONKHITE CASE; ARMY MYSTERY

Rosenbluth Is Called a "Slayer," "Martyr."

The third of this line of fighters was only 24 years old at that time—25 when he died. Despite his youth, he had established a military reputation in advance of many of his superiors. He was termed a military genius by his comrades, and his ability in field tactics brought him his majority.

Personally his character and characteristics were those of a youth who stands at the front in popularity; young, boyish, impetuous at times, honest, and sincere and able to "bawl out" his command with a finesse that left no bad taste—there were few who disliked him. He was the type, a friend said, "whom you would want to call on your mother if he came to your home town when you were away—and who would do it."

Rosenbluth Yale Man.

Rosenbluth is a graduate of the Yale Forestry school and his fellow alumni have rallied to his defense with pamphlets and letters and speeches proclaiming their belief in his innocence. He is 36 years old—31 at the time of Cronkhite's death. He was graduated from Yale in 1907, previously attending Penn State. After some years of United States forestry service in Washington and the Philippines, he went to China on government work.

He mapped parts of Utah and then went into New York state forestry service, where he saved the state $41,000 through checking of lumber contracts. A period in correction work and then Plattsburg followed. Commissioned as first lieutenant, he went to France, returning as a captain, instructor in engineering. His field rating was low.

After the war he went abroad for Herbert Hoover in relief work. He is the friend of many leading Jews of New York, numbering such men as Louis Strauss, Louis Marshall and the heads of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., among his intimate acquaintances.

Pothier Is Uneducated.

Pothier is a French-Canadian, 28 years old, more or less of a tramp who has wandered back and forth, serving as horse breaker, railroad brakeman or anything that might be handy. Illiterate, uneducated, he seems, nevertheless, to have a rather shrewd brain, although it is undeveloped. Some have tried to make him out a half wit, but his conversation and actions are only those of an uneducated person. Very short, wiry and muscular, he forms a contrast to the short but 220 pound Rosenbluth, or the tall, slim Cronkhite.

With these associations behind them, these men found themselves together in the 213th regiment of engineers in Camp Forrest, Ga., early in the war—Cronkhite as junior major, Rosenbluth as junior captain, Pothier as regimental bugler.

About the first of October, 1918, orders came transferring a skeleton regiment, officers and noncommissioned officers, to Camp Lewis for intensified training preparatory to increase to war strength and active service in France. Cronkhite had trained the noncoms and their efficiency was his hobby.

The orders did not include Rosenbluth's name, but it finally was added. Rosenbluth says Cronkhite had it added. Others deny this. Camp Lewis found Cronkhite a victim of influenza, but on Oct. 31 he left the hospital, remaining in quarters to gain strength.

The final hike for Cronkhite was preceded by a series of events of unusual importance in theories either that Cronkhite was murdered or that he killed himself accidentally. The various reports of them are so contradictory, however, that they will be passed for the time being. Evidence dealing with them will be presented later.

Cronkhite Leads Troops.

Skipping the night before the hike and the first part of the hike itself, the column of soldiers found itself on a road several miles from camp headquarters but still on the government reservation about 10:30 a. m. Oct 25. Maj. Cronkhite headed the column, acting as instructor and as umpire in field tactics. He gave problems in advance guard work, Capt. Rosenbluth being his second in command through the absence of officers of intervening grade.

Cronkhite and Rosenbluth conferred over a place for lunch, Rosenbluth urging that a side trail into the woods be taken, explaining that he was familiar with the terrain and that his path led to a clearing.

Cronkhite started ahead up the trail to reconnoiter, the column following with Rosenbluth in command. The trail was barely discernible, so thick was the underbrush, and it was so narrow in places that it was necessary to march single file. The column was halted about 175 yards from the main road it had left and placed at rest.

Exact Meeting Disputed.

Here again another skip must be made for the present, for the sworn testimony of witnesses disagrees as to just when Cronkhite, Rosenbluth, and Pothier came together in the clearing fifty yards ahead and to the side. The facts on both sides will be brought out later.

But a few minutes after the column halted the pistol shots were heard. When Lieut. Elmer Seaburg of the medical corps, Sergt. Wuthenow, and others went forward they found Cronkhite dead, a bullet through his chest starting at the right and running to the left.

The clearing was a miniature one—simply a turn off to the right from the trail. It was probably three and a half yards wide and five yards long—not counting the trail itself. A slight twist in the trail and the thick woods blocked the clearing from the view of those in the halted column.

At the far end, as one turned from the trail, was a swinging gate in a fence, beyond which were a house and outbuildings, situated at the edge of an orchard, but unoccupied.

On the gatepost at the left as one faced it stood a large, round tin can, according to some of those who came forward from the column. The distance from this post to the spot where Cronkhite lay dead, with Rosenbluth opening his clothes, was only a few yards.

Bullet Wound Surprises.

Lieut. Seaburg, thinking Cronkhite had fainted, injected strychnine. Artificial respiration was tried. Sergt. Wuthenow, loosening the clothes on Cronkhite, suddenly exclaimed:

"Why, this man has been shot!"

That, the records show, was the first statement that Cronkhite had been shot. It was followed a moment later by the statement:

"Yes. He shot himself." Witnesses remember hearing this statement, but are not certain who made it.

A little later four discharged shells from a .45 caliber pistol were picked up. By their side lay a flat Piper Heidsick tobacco can, a .45 caliber bullet hole through it.

Cronkhite, it was explained, had stopped during his walk to try his shot. He had placed the tin on the left gatepost and shot at it. He had missed at first, then hit it, and finally had shot himself, it was said. An ambulance was called and the body taken back to the base hospital. There the clothes were stripped off and the body taken to the morgue for an autopsy.

Medical Man Astonished.

Looking at the naked body, one of the medical force suddenly exclaimed:

"Now, how the dickens could a man shoot himself in a place like that?"

The wound was on the right side. If a line were drawn from the right nipple straight to the corner of the right shoulder, the wound would have been on a point three inches from the nipple. A little farther back and it would have been under the armpit. A little farther front and it would have been directly in the right breast.

The exact course of the bullet—diagonally through the chest is a subject of contention by various doctors, but it established positively that Cronkhite did not commit suicide. It was impossible, all admitted, that Cronkhite could have held the gun naturally in his right hand and shot himself in such a place. It was explained by some that the gun must have slipped backward in his hand, and was upside down when it went off. The suicide theory, however, seemed to be badly shaken.

Autopsy Quickly Performed.

Dr. Ernest A. Sommer—a captain—was performing autopsies in the morgue. He started on Cronkhite, making the chest incision and dictating as he cut along. M. C. Terry and others took the dictation in long hand.

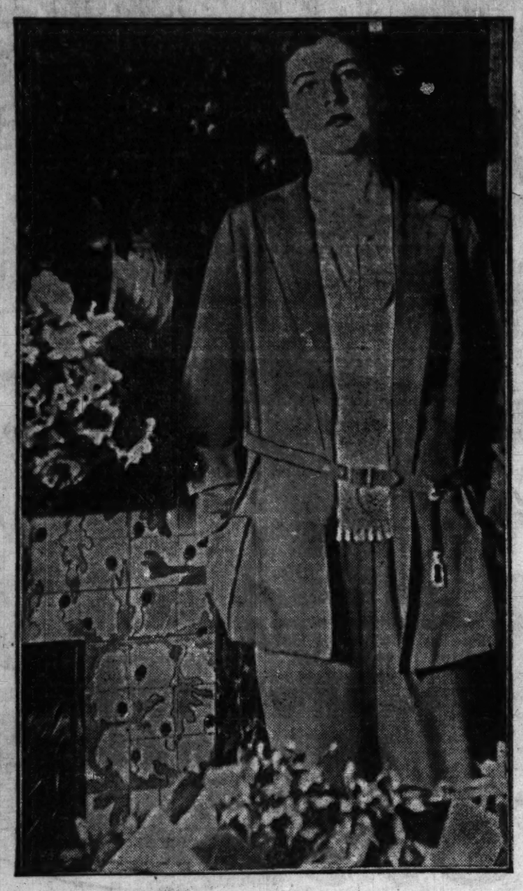
"Three inches from the right nipple in a line drawn from the nipple to the greater tuberosity of the right humorous there is a wound—" began Dr. Sommer. He ended with: "Cause of death—gunshot wound, as above said to be accidental."

The report of the autopsy was taken away by those writing it. Rosenbluth and Pothier were instructed to make written statements. Dr. Sommer turned to the next body. Rosenbluth had watched the autopsy. That night the news wires carried a fifty word dispatch that Maj. Chonkhite accidentally killed himself at a target range. It wasn't even published in most papers. Thousands were dying in France from bullets; hundreds in America from influenza.

Contrary to general belief, Dr. Sommer in his autopsy never expressed an opinion as to how the wound was inflicted. He simply traced the bullet, expecting to give his opinion on whether it was self-inflicted when the board of inquiry met. But the board of inquiry never called Dr. Sommer. It didn't examine the clothes for powder burns. It didn't examine the gun to see if it had been fired. And later the government itself was to discard the board of inquiry report as incorrect, and improper.

The story of Rosenbluth's testimony at the inquiry will appear tomorrow.

GANNA EUROPE BOUND



This photograph was made of Ganna Walska McCormick aboard the S. S. Paris en route to France by a staff photographer of the Pacific and Atlantic Photo service, also sailing for Europe. The picture was brought back to New York by the pilot of the steamship. Harold McCormick's bride posed in her suite, filled with flowers sent by her husband.

The owners of these three concrete block homes performed a real service for home builders when they conducted a practical test of FLAXLINUM in their homes. If you want a comfortable home that saves fuel, you will find a valuable suggestion here.

An Interesting Home-Building Test

IF YOU are at all doubtful about the wisdom of using FLAXLINUM insulation in your new home, you will find interesting the results of a practical test made by the owners of the three River Forest homes pictured above.

The three houses are alike in size and design and alike in construction, with one important exception. FLAXLINUM insulation was used in the second floor ceiling of two of them. In the other house it was, as an experiment, left out.

The two owners of the insulated homes in a joint letter write:

"The results are that our homes are much cooler in the summer, particularly the upstairs rooms; they are also much easier to heat in the winter. This experiment has proved to us that the amount of money paid for the FLAXLINUM will be returned to us in fuel savings, in at least three years."

The owner of the uninsulated home reports:

"I am losing a great amount of heat through my attic, burning coal that my brothers-in-law are saving. The upstairs rooms are much warmer in summer."

Since this experiment was completed the owner of this house has had FLAXLINUM installed in his attic. So that now he enjoys the savings and comfort that always come with FLAXLINUM.

It is often possible to use FLAXLINUM for roof or ceiling insulation after a house is completed. But the surest way to get a perfect home is to install it when the house is being built. Write or call for the free FLAXLINUM booklet and sample.

What Flaxlinum Is

FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable, chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes.

For walls it is made ½-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets 1 inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down."

One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.

RED EVANGELISTS SEEK CONVERTS IN YOUTH OF U. S.

Communist Aims Uncovered in Foster Trial.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

St. Joseph, Mich., March 31.—[Special.]—The campaign of the international Red to turn the so-called "liberal" elements in America, the "intelligentsia," toward communism, and well organized plans to reach the youth of this country, were points barely touched upon in the trial of William Z. Foster, which is just closed, but which are fully revealed in several exhibits in the case, and in evidence gathered by the department of justice and brought to Michigan by Max F. Burger, an attorney formerly connected with the Chicago bureau and now a special aid in this case.

Evidence shows the organization of the young communist league of America, which reaches into schools, factories, and industrial establishments, with its base firmly fixed in the main communist party and its eyes turned toward soviet Russia as a model development.

Activities of League.

The state presented some evidence during the trial which referred to the activities of the Civic Liberties league and the General Labor Defense council. The Communist, official organ of the party, for September, 1922, prints an article outlining its plans and policy for work in and through those mediums. Lenin, the Russian premier, has advocated in his writings, the importance of work among the more intelligent classes, lessening the prejudice against communism, leading liberals toward it. This plan is outlined in the American party program in part as follows:

"We are face to face with a new situation. We are on the threshold of a momentous campaign of self-defense by the workers against the capitalist offensive. The central executive committee therefore instructs all party units vigorously to pursue the following plan of action:

"The main campaign of our party today is against the government authorities rather than against the trade union bureaucracy and the yellow Socialists. The intensity and the wide range of the immediate struggles of the workers are becoming even more marked.

Demand and Take Rights.

"We must encourage the workers to demand and take for themselves all the rights of the famous American democracy. The communists are a part of the working class, therefore the communist must also have this democracy, unrestricted right to freedom of press, speech and assembly.

"The federations also must wage an energetic campaign to have the foreign born workers become citizens of the United States not for patriotic reasons but in order to draw them more into the political life of the country.

"There is about to be formed a general labor defense council in which every member must take a most vigorous part. Organizationally, this council will be constituted on the basis of the complete unity of all working bodies regardless of political difference.

Contains Noncommunists.

"This council will contain various labor and liberal elements, not all Communists, such as:

"(a) The American Civil Liberties union.

"(b) Groups gathered about the liberal press like the Nation, the Freeman, and the New Republic.

"(c) Liberal and working farmers' organizations like the Nonpartisan league and other tenant and farmers' groups.

"(d) Also men prominent in public life who are willing to coöperate, such as professors, editors, clergymen, progressives and lawyers.

Contains Prominent Names.

The labor defense council, which recalled Frank P. Walsh in the Red trials, contains the names of prominent educators, labor leaders, ministers, and social workers in its directorates.

The Young Communist League of America is intended for leading boys from 17 to 20 into the movement. Its literature deals with the Negro question, the student youth, children's groups, anti-military tactics, and states.

"The Young Communist League of America contends that the forcible overthrow of the capitalist state and the establishment of the workers' soviet state through a dictatorship of the proletariat is the only means that will break the power of the capitalists over the workers."

Ruthenberg to Be Tried.

Charles E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers' Party of America, probably will be the next one of the forty-two Red defendants to be placed on trial here. He has been active in many ways and is highly educated in social science. He denied on the witness stand that the Workers' party was an integral part of the communist movement.

The report of the central executive committee of the communist party which was presented at the Bridgman convention on Aug. 21 is in the hands of the state and shows that in his defense he was merely carrying out communist orders to protect party members at any cost.

"Communism and Christianity," by William Montgomery Brown, former Protestant Episcopal bishop of Arkansas, is one of the books taken in the Bridgman raid, and is marked as an exhibit in those cases. On the title page is stated:

"To banish the gods from the skies and capitalists from the earth and make the world safe for industrial communism. Come over and help us abandon Christian socialism for Marxian materialism."

On Aug. 14, 1922, Ruthenberg wrote a letter to Leslie H. Marcy, care of C. Scherr & Co., 341 East Ohio street, Chicago, informing Mr. Marcy that he had asked Comrade Joseph Lang of the Hungarian section would call on him relative to translation and publication of a book in Hungarian. "Lang" is Joseph Pogney, a former secretary of Bela Kun, Hungarian Red dictator. He was arrested in the Bridgman raid.

The Foster case will proceed Tuesday morning with argumdent to the jury. It is expected that in the next week the defense will ask a change of venue.

The COLE "net price" basis a Sensational Success

Just What Does This Mean To You?

YOU save $1,000, from a comparative standpoint, on the finest car we have ever built.

You get this saving through Cole's New Merchandising Plan of economic distribution. It lowers overhead costs for Cole dealers 50 per cent—which means they can operate on a smaller margin than ever before—and you get the saving.

In a word—we deduct the value of your used car from our List Price. This literally means that under our plan you get credit for your old car, yet it remains your property. We will help you sell it at the market value, and whatever you get is that much profit for you.

Your acceptance of Cole's Merchandising Plan simply saves you an unnecessary middle cost and shortens the distance between the factory and the buyer.

It means that you get the $2685 list price Cole Aero-Eight, with many added refinements, for a net price of $1885.

Two Ways of Marketing Automobiles

Touring Car

Seven Beautiful Body Designs

The same plan which makes possible the reduction in the standard Cole Aero 8 Touring Car is applied to the closed models as well, thus making it possible to have a custom-built closed car at a price commonly associated with open models.

The Cole body designs are so intrinsically beautiful that they please the most discriminating. For years they have been approved by people of refinement and good taste.

So basicly sound are the designs that they will endure for years, and never go out of style. Only one of the many reasons for Cole permanency of value.

The closed models are finished in various harmonious colors, while the interior fittings are most luxurious. The Cole is a fine car you may be proud of in any company.

Berline-Limousine	2885

F. O. B. Indianapolis Plus Tax

The two tables above illustrate the list and the net method of marketing automobiles.

A moment of thought will convince any one that Cole's new merchandising plan is economically sound.

One of the chief burdens of the motor car industry has been the "trade-in practice." It piled up a National cost which ran perhaps in the tens of millions annually (for rent, heat, light, interest, insurance, overhead, and selling cost in the used-car department). According to national authorities this cost averages 20 per cent. on fine cars such as the Cole Aero Eight.

Cole's merchandising plan also saves the "trade-in" allowance said by authorities to average from $200 to $600—really a rebate in case an old car is taken in.

Cole's "No-Trade-In" policy removes this burden, estimated to be one-third of the cost of automotive distribution, and passes the saving on to the public. At the same time it provides a fair and satisfactory plan to help dispose of used cars.

What Cole Quality Means

For sixteen years the Cole has been recognized the world over as a fine car. Nothing has been taken away at the new price, which is made possible only by Cole's new merchandising plan, which has met with universal endorsement.

The outstanding features of the Gole Aero Eight are: 8 cylinders, 80 horse-power—insuring perfect performance under all conditions; 1 to 72 miles an hour in high. Such powerful brakes that the Cole is known as the safest car made. 33x5 Cord Tires which average 20,000 miles of service. 127½-in. Wheel Base—a truly big car. Body designs so beautiful that they have been widely imitated. Complete equipment such as Waltham 8-day Clock, Boyce Motor Meter, extension jack, shock absorbers, etc.

And to this standard model have been added many additional refinements, at the net price of $1,885, factory.

A Permanent Value

The Cole "No-Trade-In" policy not only means that you get a truly fine car at wholesale and actual valuation, but that much of the usual first year depreciation has been removed.

The Cole plan means that your investment in a fine car is protected for years. This high used-car value is further enhanced by the Cole policy of permanent body design (the same style has been used for five years).

Do You Know How to Judge Automobiles

In the past many things have clouded the issue in buying a motor car. Personal prejudice—what friends said—the personality of the salesman and a thousand other things.

Now comes a new and scientific system—a standard by which you may correctly gauge the worth of any automobile.

With this simple system you can be certain of the worth of any car you are considering. The test is fair to all, and Cole will abide by your decision.

Make the Test that Tells

This system is known as The Test That Tells.

Regardless of your preference, make this test before you buy any car. Then remember that we deduct from our "List Price" the market value of your used car, thus giving you our "Net Price."

The "Test That Tells" is proving a revelation to many buyers who thought they knew all the "Ins and Outs" of motor cars. It opens a new era in automobile values. Call, phone or write for the "Test That Tells."

TEUTONS LAUGH OVER RECENT REVOLT SCARE

Various Parties Lack a Plan of Action.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, March 31.—Berlin has recovered from its putsch scare and is breathing easier again, while the people of Munich, Leipsig, and other towns, which were supposed to be storm centers, are laughing up their sleeves.

The Socialist party leaders also are laughing. They got what they wanted—the outlawing of the German National Freedom party—and brought about a new display of Socialist solidarity, but the man in the street is wondering why Herr Severing, Prussian minister of the interior, tilted as hard as he did at the nationalist windmill.

Windmill Was Ferocious.

The answer is plain. There was some danger and Herr Severing overplayed it for political purposes. But so far as Herr Hittler, leader of the Bavarian gray shirts, a German variety of Fascisti, is concerned, while there is some hazy idea in the popular mind that he was connected with the plot, he had no intention to march on Berlin or to take any active part in any putsch that irresponsible monarchists might have planned.

THE TRIBUNE made an immediate investigation in the district described as the center of Herr Hittler's plot. Its correspondent found Gera, Hof and Leipzig as quiet as an Iowa village on a Sunday afternoon. At Gera, where three of Herr Hittler's couriers were reported to have been arrested, the chief of police knew nothing about those stories.

The actual situation today is difficult to understand. The two camps are arming, but Germany is not divided into two armed camps. The extremists who represent not more than 10 per cent of the population are watching each other like two strange and hostile bull dogs.

Reds Openly Arming.

The communists openly are arming and carrying on maneuvers in some parts of the country backed in Saxony by government permission and in other regions by government tolerance.

Influential monarchist leaders with whom THE TRIBUNE talked admit that they too are organizing, but they give the Hittler movement an entirely different character than that assigned to it by the Socialist ministers of the Prussian government. They say their activities merely are intended to oppose any communist attempt to overturn the government or to set up a bolshivik autocracy.

One of the leaders of the nationalist movement said that should a call to arms come, 200,000 men would flock to the standard of nationalism to save the country from a Red revolt.

Lack Definite Policy.

The Hittler people have no definite constructive policy nor are they supported by all the nationalists. There are as many schisms among the right wing parties as among the left. There are as many leaders. But one and all are preparing for any emergency that may arise.

The strength in arms of the Hittlerites is being kept a careful secret, but it is not believed that they possess any artillery. On the other hand, they have wealthy interests behind them and are well supplied with funds.

The nationalists have no definite policy on the Ruhr problem, except resistance. Their aims and ideals conflict in a most embarrassing way with the general welfare of the country at large, but they feel that if the Cuno government cannot solve the problem before it and if the communists and Socialists will not permit the nationalists to take over control they will break away and shift for themselves

CLEAN UP PALESTINE

JERUSALEM, March 31.—[Jewish Telegraph Agency.]—Sanitation and hospitalization work in Palestine has virtually been revolutionized since the war as the result principally of American agencies. The results are seen in a great cut in the toll formerly exacted by malaria and in a reduction of approximately 50 per cent in trachoma in certain sections.

The anti-malarial work which formerly functioned under the auspices of the American Hadassah Medical unit, principally supported by American Zionists, now has been taken over completely by the Palestine government and is financed by the Jewish joint distribution committee of New York.

The installation, now in progress of modernized waterworks plants, it is believed, will also result in elimination of considerable disease.

placed by the French squarely on the shoulders of the management of the works. The French spokesman asserted that for two months the owners of the mines and mills have been trying to promote a collision between the workers and troops by ordering the whistles to be blown for an assembly by the employés as soon as the French arrived.

Rigorous actions will be taken as a result of what occurred today, but no details have been announced.

Essen was quiet during this afternoon and evening. The guards have been increased in the French posts. Tanks and armored cars are patrolling the streets.

10 DEAD, FRENCH ADMIT

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 1.—[1 a. m.]—Figures published here this morning say ten Germans were killed and thirty-five wounded in the incident at the Krupp works in Essen. The newspapers editorialize in a bitter vein, charging that the Berlin government, having failed to succeed by diplomatic channels, is now attempting to destroy France by planting agents in the Ruhr and forcing French soldiers to fire, thereby obtaining new propaganda.

The Matin says the incident was caused by former members of the German police inside the Krupp plant who incited the workmen.

Organs close to the Poincare cabinet assert new sanctions will be immediately applied with the greatest vigor.

Seize Krupp Mines.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUSSELDORF, March 31. — The Emscher and Lippe mine and coke ovens owned by Krupp were occupied by the French today, who will begin next week loading 30,000 tons of coke which has been stored. Integral parts of the great machinery were moved by the Germans before the French took possession. The superintendent was arrested, charged with theft.

Good Friday was red letter day for the French, who shipped 6,000 tons of coal and 4,000 tons of coke to France.

Deport German Generals.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

WIESBADEN, March 31.—Sixty families at Wiesbaden were ordered today to quit their homes within four days. Among these are Lieut. Gen. von Graaf, whose wife is an American; Commander General Mudra, and Gen. Kossak.

Seize Mannheim Factory.

MANNHEIM, March 31.—At 6 o'clock this morning a detachment of Moroccan troops entered the Benz factory here to inspect a new type of motor which they claimed was a submarine engine. The marine engine department was occupied and the workers quit.

Eleven Die in Rail Wreck.

BERLIN, March 31.—[United Press.]—Eleven persons, including six Germans, were killed today in a crash of trains operated by French engineers in the Ruhr, according to the Frankfurter Zeitung's Gerolstein correspondent.

NO PAPAL INTERVENTION

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, March 31.—[Tribune Radio.]—The vatican has not the slightest intention of intervening between France and Germany in the reparations tangle. This authoritative information was given to THE TRIBUNE today at the office of Cardinal and Secretary of State Gasparri, who told Hugo Stinnes the identical thing a few days ago. Senator Jonnart, French envoy, has informed the vatican that France did not wish mediation by a third party.

Premier Mussolini is working close to the vatican. He does not intend to intervene.

YANKEES CLAIM BILLION DOLLARS FROM GERMANY

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., March 31.—[Special.]—America asked no reparations of Germany as a result of the world war, but American citizens are about to demand damages to the extent of a billion dollars from Germany.

This is the extent of American war claims—10,000 of them—involved in the demands of individuals and the government, covering damages to American property and loss of noncombatant American lives in the great conflict in which Germany was vanquished.

Argument of the case, said to involve more money than any other in the history of the United States, will begin before the mixed claims commission of the United States and Germany, a week from Monday, on April 9, with Robert C. Morris representing the United States as agent and general counsel.

Amount Will Be Cut.

The billion dollar total has a terrifying sound when Germany's present day claims of inability to meet the huge obligations of the war are considered. In all probability, however, Germany finally will not have to pay anything like that sum.

It is the opinion of officials of the alien property custodian's office and others connected with the government that the final score against Germany in this case will approximate $150,000,000. All the demands, if met dollar for dollar would total a billion dollars

Settlement of the issues involves the disposition of about $350,000,000 of German owned property now held by the alien property custodian. On one side is the question whether these millions of dollars of alien owned property shall be confiscated and the proceeds used to pay American claimants, hundreds of them the heirs of submarine victims, or held as a guarantee of payment and eventually returned.

Not to Confiscate Property.

Authorities here declare that the property held in this country will not be confiscated. There is agreement of minds on all sides that private property cannot be used to pay national debts, and also that claims of the heirs to Lusitania victims and other Americans who suffered at the hands of Germany are national obligations.

One of the last acts of the Sixty-seventh congress was to pass a law which authorized the alien property custodian to return seized properties which did not exceed $10,000. This law made possible the return of 95 per cent of the more than 32,000 properties, now held in trust by the alien property custodian.

The alien property custodian's office is authority for the statement that there are between 10,000 and 12,000 American claims awaiting adjustment. Of these claims, those which relate to loss of life at sea total approximately $190,000,000.

American officials familiar with the situation say that in hundreds of instances claims filed with the government have been padded. It is charged that lawyers taking cases on a contingent fee basis have in some instances filed claims of ten or twelve times what they hope to receive.

Veterans' Bureau Claims.

Besides the personal claims, the United States veterans' bureau has laid claim to the sum involved in the cost of insuring soldiers and sailors. No sum for Lusitania claimants has been announced, but prior to the establishment of the commission such claims had been filed with congress for $190,000,000.

The United States shipping board has claim for excess expenditures by the emergency fleet corporation, blamed on Germany.

It also has been reported that the Germans would make no defense in cases involving claims for loss of life caused by submarine warfare and it is believed that the claims arising out of the torpedoing of the Lusitania will be adjusted upon the basis of individual claims.

LEGION NOTES

The Peoples Gas Light and Coke post of the American Legion announces a reception and dance for Friday evening of this week in the Capitol building, State and Randolph streets.

Oak Park post will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday, April 3, at the Oak Park Elks club.

Invitations for a springtime dance have been issued by La Societe des Hommes 40 et Chevaux 8 for April 7, to be held in the Louis XVI. room, Hotel La Salle.

Jane A. Delano post meets Monday night at 7:45 at the Chicago Nurses' club, 116 South Michigan avenue.

The next meeting of the American Legion auxiliary will be held at Grace church parish house in Oak Park on Tuesday evening, April 3, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. W. H. Clough and Mrs. George W. Kellogg will be in charge of the program.

M. K. T. RAILROAD RECEIVERSHIP IS BROUGHT TO END

St. Louis, Mo., March 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad tonight formally emerged from the receivership it was thrown into Sept. 27, 1915, and hereafter will be known under the reorganization name of Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad.

The road has been standardized thoroughly during the period of receivership, it was announced at general offices here this afternoon.

Improvements to the roadway, buildings, and equipment cost a total of $47,000,000.

The new company will have total stock and bond issues of a par value of $196,800,000 and 1,000,000 shares of common stock without par value. The gross revenue of the road in 1918, the receivership year, was $33,000,000, as compared with $55,000,000 last year. The net income in 1915, after payment of interest and taxes, was $1,474,988, as compared with $4,117,473 in 1922.

Receiver C. E. Schaff, who was president of the road for three years prior to the receivership, is president of the reorganized road, and the following are officers: C. N. Whitehead, executive vice president; C. Haile, vice president in charge of traffic; W. M. Whitenton, vice president in charge of operations; Francis F. Randolph, vice president.

That's a strong statement to make. Considering that traditional Bill of Fare prices of other good restaurants and hotels [which follow the old custom of "service" to your table] are just about double ours, it is a sweeping challenge. It would be a foolish statement to make if we did not know it to be a fact. But it is a fact. And a fact which anyone can easily verify.

This is one of the very few dining places in the whole U. S. A. which never uses "cheapeners" or substitutes of any kind in its cooking and baking. It is one of the few restaurants which cooks eggs in butter, instead of lard or grease. It is one restaurant where cooking and baking is done with fresh butter, instead of with so-called cooking butter.

In buying food we always pay top prices. Never can we be interested in any food merely because it might cost us a few cents less.

We operate—every day in the year—a ventilating plant which completely changes every bit of the air in the restaurant every three minutes; giving you fresh, washed and warmed air in the winter and fresh, washed and cooled air in the summer. That is why this is pronounced by experts to be the best ventilated restaurant in Chicago.

And because the North American Restaurant (which is under the same ownership and management that made Rector's Restaurant of older days famous all over the Country) has adopted the Common Sense and economical plan of asking you to serve yourself, our prices are just about half what any good restaurant or hotel must charge to include "service." If this sounds too good to be true we can only urge you to try it. Then you will know it is true

SHANGHAI RULE ON LAKE BOATS CHARGED BY BOY

College Youths Forced to Work, He Says.

Cleveland, O., March 31.—[Special.]—Charges that numerous high school and college boys from central state cities have been "shanghaied" and lured away during the last month by men organizing crews for lake steamships are being investigated by Police Prosecutor Skeel.

The investigation was started after Neal F. Maloney, 15, missing East High school pupil of this city, was discovered working under guard in the engine room of a vessel in the harbor at Toledo. His father, a Cleveland attorney, claims it was necessary to obtain the aid of a Toledo police flying squadron to effect the release of his son.

Skeel was told that another Cleveland high school boy, said to be 17 years old, was lured away from school by the same men and that a score of boys from Detroit, Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee, and other lake cities are now aboard ships.

Detained by Force.

The Maloney boy claims to have been lured away from school by one of the ship's officers. He says he was promised a salary of $30 a month and expenses and employed as assistant steward.

Skeel believes boys are being enticed away with promises of large salaries and an opportunity to see the lakes, and at the end of the season will be swindled out of their wages by unscrupulous officers.

The Maloney boy says that after boarding the ship, instead of becoming assistant steward, he was put to work scrubbing oil soaked decks below the water line. He says an armed guard was posted to prevent his slipping away.

Heard Cries of Boys.

Upon arriving in Toledo the boy was taken to a third rate hotel frequented by lake men, where he stayed over night before being taken to the ship, he says. Skeel has learned that numerous other boys were subjected to immoral treatment pending their removal to ships. He is investigating reports that frequently during the last month boys' cries and sobs were heard in the hotel's corridors.

That entire crews for certain lake steamships are being organized with young boys, many only 15 and 16 years old, is evident from Skeel's information.

Police have been instructed by Skeel to comb the local water front in search of boys who may be forcibly detained aboard ships which are being fitted out for the coming sailing season.

K. K. T. RAILROAD RECEIVERSHIP IS BROUGHT TO END

St. Louis, Mo., March 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad tonight formally emerged from the receivership it was thrown into Sept. 27, 1915, and hereafter will be known under the reorganization name of Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad.

The road has been standardized thoroughly during the period of receivership, it was announced at general offices here this afternoon.

WEATHER MAKER, HERE, TELLS OF CLOUD CONQUEST

Electric Sand Ends Fog; May Doom Poison Gas.

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

Dr. L. Francis Warren, whose experiments on fog dispersal by means of charged sand have aroused wide interest in scientific circles, yesterday at the Drake hotel explained the scientific basis for the remarkable results he has obtained.

"Last February," he said, "the war department conducted a number of tests at McCook flying field, Dayton, O., under my direction. The object was to find whether it was possible to clear an aviation ground of fog. Flyers cannot land when the ground is covered with mist, because they cannot see what is beneath them. My method showed not only that fogs can be cleared away artificially but also that fairly thick clouds can be cut through."

Sand Shatters Clouds.

Dr. Warren then detailed his method. A machine for generating static electricity is installed on an airplane. Sand screened to 150 mesh is fed into the machine and comes out bearing an electrical charge up to 35,000 volts for each grain. As the airship flies this sand is scattered in its wake, and when it falls on a cloud it clears it.

Clouds and fog, he pointed out, are made of tiny drops of water. All clouds are charged electrically, some positively and some negatively. When it has been determined which sort of charge the moisture in the cloud bears the aviator sets the generator to charging the sand in the opposite way and sprays grains among the water drops. Being charged in an unlike way, the two attract, so that as the sand falls it carries down nine or ten times its bulk of water.

Dr. Warren was explicit in asserting that every cloud that had been sanded was broken. In some cases lanes were cut in the cloud where the sand fell; in others the whole formation vanished. A few times, he said, the sand carried the water down so fast it looked like rain.

May Disperse Poison Gas.

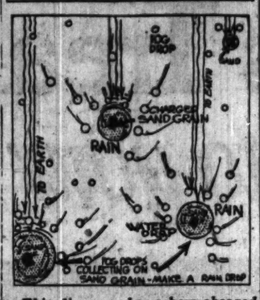
"I have two professors associated with me in these experiments," he said. "They are Prof. Wilder D. Bancroft of Cornell and Prof. Emory Leon Chaffee of Harvard. They believe it will soon be possible to use this method in war to disperse attacks of poison gas and cut up smoke screens. That would be done by sanding the fumes with electrical charges of like polarity, which would make the noxious particles fly apart. Our experiments indicate that coal smoke can be scattered."

He described certain features of the experiments which pointed to the belief that, as the charged sand fell, it excited the ether.

"The place where the sand was dropped remained clear for some time, even when the air all round was cloudy and a strong wind was blowing," he said, "as though there were a column in space in which no clouds could form but evaporated as they passed through it."

He stated that the army will make further tests on the various feasures of his invention at Aberdeen proving grounds, near Baltimore, next May.

Blowing Up a Cloud



This diagram shows how charged sand, carried on an airplane in experiments conducted by Dr. L. Francis Warren at McCook flying field, is shot into a cloud and carries down water drops. The little drops stick to the grains and get to be big drops, or rain, before the sand has fallen far.

HEIRS TO $5,250,000 HILL ESTATE END ROW ON DIVISION

St. Paul, Minn., March 31.—[United Press.]—Heirs to the $5,250,000 estate of Mary T. Hill, wife of James J. Hill, the "empire builder," agreed today to a division of the property.

Each of the nine heirs will receive one-ninth of stocks, bonds, and other property under the agreement, Howard Wheeler, probate judge, announced.

Signs of dispute among the heirs over the division of property have been evident in court proceedings. Nothing was said in today's decision regarding the North Oaks farm and $750,000 in securities given L. W. Hill by his mother.

SMALL ANSWERS INTEREST SUIT; ASKS DISMISSAL

Springfield, Ill., March 31.—[Special.]—Gov. Small's plea in the state treasury interest suit brought by Attorney General Brundage to recover $1,000,000 in interest on state funds alleged to be due the state was filed in the Sangamon County Circuit court today by Attorney Werner W. Schroeder.

In brief, the plea denies all the allegations by inference, and asks for dismissal of the charges against the governor on the grounds that all the issues were tried and settled in the criminal conspiracy case at Waukegan last year.

The plea contains a copy of the indictment of the governor by a Sangamon county grand jury in July, 1921, and also a copy of the bill of particulars filed by the prosecution in the criminal case.

In filing the document today, Attorney Schroeder complied with the order of Judge Norman L. Jones requiring the governor's counsel to come into court with a plea by April 1. Judge Jones offered to extend the time to May 1 if Gov. Small wanted an opportunity to file a complete answer to meet all the charges specifically.

BRING CHARGES AGAINST SON OF RICH BROKER

Darby Day Jr., 20 years old, son of a wealthy insurance broker living at the Drake hotel, appeared before Judge Theodore Ehler yesterday on a charge of assault and battery. The charge was preferred by E. J. Cunningham, 1305 Juneway terrace, who alleged that on Friday night, Day, while intoxicated, pushed against Mrs. Cunningham as she was getting into her automobile, she fell to her knees and is confined to her bed as a result, he says. Day was released on a $25 bond.

Unless your stove, range or furnace is a genuine Cole's Original Hot Blast you are permitting an extravagant waste of your money. Figure it out for yourself. With the ordinary under-draft stove or furnace (one where the draft air enters at the bottom, passes upward through the fire and out through the stove pipe) only 39% of your fuel is actually used. The other 61% escapes up the chimney in the form of combustible gas mixed with the smoke. These figures are from government experiments.

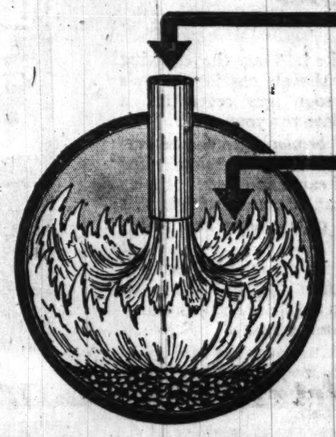
Cole's Original Hot Blast combustion eliminates this serious loss. And it is serious, for these gases are valuable! They are approximately the same as those sold to millions of homes for heating, cooking and lighting.

Roll a cone of heavy paper. Stick a nail or pencil in middle for handle (as above). Hold large end down and light it. Note how smoke pours out small end. This burning compares to under-draft stove or furnace. There is a fuel waste of about 60%.

Now hold a lighted match near the smoke. See how it lights with a puff and burns like a gas stove. Very little smoke remains. The valuable gases are burning. The full efficiency of the fuel is being utilized. This method of full combustion is the Cole's Hot Blast method.

Burn 20 Pounds of Air To Every Pound of Fuel

In Cole's Hot Blast stoves, ranges and furnaces, free air is used to get the last atom of heat out of costly fuel. Twenty pounds of oxygen (in the air) is burned to every pound of fuel. And the fuel is made approximately twice as efficient. Note illustration and explanation at right. Then make up your mind to save your money as many thousands of others are doing with a Cole's Original Hot Blast device.



Cole's Hot Blast Combustion consists of mixing air which is free, with the gases otherwise wasted, and forcing this heat-producing mixture back upon the live coals where it burns. This is accomplished through the patented tube shown in center illustration.

This perfect combustion is impossible in any but an absolutely air-tight stove, range or furnace. The fuel gases must not escape. Air must not enter except at the proper point. Cole's are positively air-tight. All parts are machined to fit perfectly.

Cole's Hot Blast High Oven Range, illustrated below, is without question the most economical, most convenient and most artistic range ever produced. It saves from 1/3 to 1/2 your fuel. It saves space and does away with the annoyance of stooping to reach the oven. It can be obtained in several different finishes. And note this fact: Heat naturally rises, therefore oven on this range is practically always at baking temperature. Also obtainable in the combination coal-gas model.

Cole's Semi-Enamel Cabinet Gas Range—center below—is another fuel-saver. Heavy semi-enamel finish. Rust-proof oven 20 inches deep. Frame and body rigidly braced. Wilder-treated metal. Furnished in either right or left hand oven as desired. As fine a range as expert skill and highest quality materials can produce.

At right, Cole's Hot Blast Furnace. Burns any kind of fuel—hard coal, soft coal, wood, coke, lignite, gas. Warms and ventilates entire home. Saves one-third to one-half the fuel expense and gives more uniform, more satisfactory heat. Adaptable to old homes as well as new. Made also in single register models.

Looting Nature's Treasure to give new beauty to your roof

A BLAST of dynamite! Then the cracking picks, the scraping shovels dig for nature's buried treasure. And soon they reveal it—a beautiful new color in slate for your roof.

This new weathered brown slate nature created as she does her jewels—by pressing it for ages under mountains of earth and rock. It is as beautiful as the frosty tan of autumn fields, and is now available to you on a wholly new slate-surfaced shingle.

Only in the Richardson quarries of Georgia has it ever been found. And it grows richer with age, as the tan of rocks on the shore deepens under the ceaseless wash of ocean waves.

Architects are enthusiastic over the rare color effects of the weathered brown, especially when it is blended with other Richardson shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl.

A super-shingle

THIS new weathered brown is used only on the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle—a unique roofing product which you should know all about, no matter what color you select.

For this shingle offers a new degree of serviceability in a roof, just as the weathered brown offers new beauty.

First, because it is 37% larger than the ordinary shingle, fewer are needed to cover a given roofing area. Thus the cost of laying is 35% less.

Second, it is 50% thicker than the ordinary shingle and therefore lasts much longer. Incidentally this greater thickness casts a deeper shadow line that gives life and interest to the roof.

Third, because it is 100% stiffer than the ordinary shingle, it remains rigid under all kinds of weather and makes the whole roof twice as firm.

Its inner secrets

BUT, of course, the true measure of roofing service goes beyond the color or size of the shingle to the materials in it. As you know, slate-surfaced shingles are built on a base or core of felt impregnated with asphalt and surfaced under pressure with slate granules.

Exceptional quality in these three materials makes the Richardson Super-Giant the finest slate-surfaced shingle produced.

Take, for instance, the felt upon which depends the very life of your roof. Richardson felt, as architects or roofing dealers will tell you, has for fifty years been recognized as the best. The asphalt is refined exclusively by the Richardson process from the higest grade raw materials. And the flakes of slate surfacing, found only in the Richardson quarries, seal the whole shingle permanently against weather and fire hazards.

RICHARDSON Product

From the makers of Flintkote Flamenite, Velvalt Membrane Roofs, Vitalum, Wall Board and similar products

The Super-Giant Shingle—50% thicker, 100% more rigid, and 35% more economical in cost of laying

Prove the facts yourself

A SUPER-SHINGLE indeed when you weigh its points one by one! First—absolutely exclusive color effects. Second—unusual dimensions which give you added roofing protection at ⅓ less in cost of laying. And finally—exceptionally high test standards in its three materials; felt, asphalt, and slate surfacing.

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material, or to your contractor, and ask to see the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown. Feel it, weigh it, measure it, note the rare color. Then compare it with ordinary shingles—the difference will convince you.

RACING RENEWAL AT HAWTHORNE SET FOR JUNE 30

Last Year's Policy Will Govern 25 Day Meet.

MARE TRAINS ON BEER

LONDON, March 31.—[Associated Press.]—Beer—old ale with a kick in it—was responsible for the remarkable victory of White Bud, a 66 to 1 chance in the Lincoln handicap, according to assertions of the mare's trainer.

Several weeks before the race, the trainer says, White Bud was given a daily ration of two pints of beer. The mare thrived on it.

An interesting story now is being circulated in the London newspapers as to why the horse came to be treated to such a diet. Several weeks before the race the mare, during a trial turn, became winded. She clenched the bit and ran away with the jockey, and thereafter was so nervous that she would not eat. After trying numerous foods the trainer finally resorted to ale. It worked.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Racing will be resumed in Chicago at the Hawthorne track with an early summer meeting of twenty-five days on Saturday, June 30, it was announced last night by officials of the Illinois Jockey club. C. W. Hay, Kentucky horseman and business man and presiding steward at the Latonia track, will preside at the Hawthorne meeting.

HAY CANNON.

These plans have been made in the event the new racing law now sought in the general assembly at Springfield is not written into the statutes by that time. Should a racing law be enacted and the sport placed under the control of a commission, there would naturally be a rearrangement of dates, but Illinois Jockey club officials do not believe it would seriously interfere with their early plans.

Oral Betting Only.

The policy pursued at the Hawthorne test meeting last fall again will be adopted. This means that open book making will go by the boards, with the oralisers operating and willing to take their case to the higher courts in an effort to test the Illinois betting laws.

Associated with Mr. Hay in the stewardship will be Malcomb N. McFarlin, who was serving as steward when the last American Derby was run in Chicago, and Judge Bernard Barrasa, well known to sport followers of Chicago. Other officials include Fred W. Gedney as racing secretary; John Carey, paddock judge and clerk of the scales; James Milton, starter; William N. Murray, assistant starter, and William E. Golden and William E. Nielsen as timers. The latter is the well known baseball man, being president of the Chicago Midwest association. For several seasons he has been an all winter visitor at Oriental park track in Cuba.

Opening on May 1 Planned.

It was originally planned to open at Hawthorne in May. This would have conflicted with Latonia dates, however, and with a change to get Presiding Steward Hay and many of the good horses from Latonia and other Kentucky tracks, the June interval was selected.

The new lineup of officials indicates the severing of all connection at Hawthorne of the Joseph E. Murphy faction which was prominent in last fall's revival. This was the move Judge Gedney announced he would make several weeks ago, and his plans, with those of his immediate associates not on the officials this season, to build a new racing plant at Riverdale may soon show life.

Trend Going to Kentucky Derby.

Chicago will be represented at the thousandth running of the Kentucky Derby in Louisville on May 19 by close to 1,000 persons, according to early estimates of railroad officials and others who plan to operate special trains.

General Manager Matt J. Winn of the Kentucky Jockey club, has announced a list of Derby day boxholders and it includes the following Chicagoans:

A. R. Barnes, G. G. Beltzhoover, Frank J. Bell, C. Baron, George E. Brennan, Joseph L. Brennan, Jr., E. P. Cockrell, R. C. Caldwell, Thomas T. Cavanaugh, W. J. Cummings, J. P. Dunn, J. S. Flying Start Shatters All Known Marks

Berkeley, Cal., March 31.—[Special.]—Charley Paddock, champion sprinter and captain of the University of Southern California, today bettered by 3-10 of a second the time accepted as a world's record for 100 yards with a flying start. Paddock turned his feat in an exhibition race at the Southern California-University of California dual track meet here. The California team overwhelmed the Trojans, 81 to 50, despite the fact that Paddock won two events.

Paddock's first victory was in the intervarsity 100 yard dash, which he won in :09 4-5, and he repeated with a win in the 220 dash in :21 4-5. Neither of these marks approached the world records held by the Southern California captain, his old mark in the century being :09 3-5 and :20 4-5 for the 220. In the 100 yard race two officials caught Paddock's time at :09 2-5.

Old Mark Set in 1899.

In the exhibition race, Paddock, with a flying start, negotiated the distance in :08 9-10. The best previous mark on record was :09 1-5 and said to be held by Seward, an English professional racer in 1899. Conditions for the meet were ideal, the weather being warm and little wind blowing when "Flying Charley" set his new speed mark.

This mark by Paddock probably will not pass into the world record list, as the event was under unofficial conditions.

In winning the meet, University of California athletes showed great strength. The team is one of the strongest ever developed at any college or university in the country and plans are being made for an invasion of the east by the Bears. The Californians will compete in the larger meets in the east during the late spring and summer.

Entered in Meet Here.

It is also likely that California will be represented by a team at the national intercollegiate championship meet which will be held on Stagg field in June.

In Paddock's varsity 100 yard race today he beat O. Anderson, a teammate, by two feet. Harder competition might have meant a shade faster time.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question George H. Luxon, Creston, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

What do you consider the cleanest and best sport of today?

Where Asked.

7 South Dearborn street.

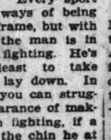
The Answers.

J. A. Bergman, 1460 Farragut avenue, agent — Well, there's baseball, but that isn't very clean at times. If football is considered, there can be some rough work in that. Horse racing, without betting, would be great. Basketball is more like a child's play, although I suppose it has some good points. I would consider baseball the cleanest of the major sports, and the most popular.

H. D. Glink, 1503 Roosevelt road, salesman—Baseball in spite of all its faults. There is not a cleaner or a better game than baseball, that I know of. And it should be kept clean. The way to do that is for each and every player who hears of gambling taking place to report it to the proper party.

James Watson, 2712 Van Buren street, chauffeur—Well, of all the sports I believe boxing is the cleanest. Every sport has its ways of being able to frame, but with boxing, the man is in the ring fighting. He's got at least to take something in order to lay down. In baseball and wrestling you can struggle, giving us the appearance of making an effort; where in fighting, if a man does take one on the chin he at least takes it on the chin.

Earl D. Starks, 447 Gordon terrace, salesman — The cleanest and best sport is boxing. Boxing gives an invigorating vitality that's so necessary to build up a man. On account of the rules and regulations of the game as a sport or profession, if one boxes he will derive the knowledge that it is one of the cleanest sports that it is possible to indulge in.



W. R. O'Connell, 8045 Avalon avenue, industrial loans—Baseball. I have played baseball myself, have also taken part in a number of other sports, and I consider baseball the best and cleanest of them all. In all my experience I have never known of any crookedness in it, with the possible exception of the White Sox affair. This is perhaps the only serious taint on baseball's glorious past.

GRID RECEIPTS IN BIG 10 HIT RECORD FIGURE

Pass $1,146,000 Mark; Chicago Richest.

Columbus, O., March 31.—Total receipts for Western Conference football games last fall were $1,146,421.26, according to figures received here by Ohio State university athletic officials. The total is said to be far and away the largest in conference history. Chicago led in the individual receipts with $212,852.93; Michigan was second with $181,606.98, and Ohio State third with $168,966.11. Illinois reported $144,473.38 for fourth place, Wisconsin $133,357.54 for fifth, and Minnesota drew $96,342.80.

Iowa in Seventh Place.

Despite their second successive championship and two big games away from home in the Yale and Ohio State encounters, Iowa's receipts ranked seventh with $78,330.25. Figures for the other schools are: Northwestern, $51,974.68; Purdue, $44,804.13, and Indiana, $34,193.52.

Chicago's lead in receipts is chiefly accounted for by the Princeton game. Michigan's feat in placing second is attributed here to the Wolverines' game with Ohio State, which netted Michigan approximately $75,000

Ohio Has Largest Crowds.

While Ohio State, in the belief of Ohio State officials, played to the greatest attendance of the Big Ten, with the possible exception of Chicago, receipts did not keep pace with the attendance Ohio State officials point out that the Buckeyes paid out $100,000 more to visiting teams then the Ohioans received for games away from home.

AMERICANS AT CUBAN RACING MEET PEEVED

HAVANA, Cuba, March 31.—[United Press.]—General dissatisfaction among the owners who had their stables at Oriental park during the last season, which closed Sunday, leads to the belief that Havana has had its last big race meeting.

Some of the practices objected to by the American racing men are the abolition of the overnight handicap races, the cutting of purses from $700 to $500, and the lack of patronage.

The season was disastrous for many owners, and the losses caused them to demand that the management offer absolute guarantees for the next year.

Peter Manning to Return to Track at Windsor Meet

Detroit, Mich., March 31.—Peter Manning, 1563/4, world's champion trotter, will appear in a race for the first time since 1920 in the free-for-all trot, feature of the Blue Ribbon Driving club's grand circuit meeting at Devonshire track in Windsor, Ont., Aug. 2 to 3, it was announced here today.

Indict Canadian Soccer Official as Embezzler

Winnipeg, Man., March 31.—David W. Roy, former secretary-treasurer of the Dominion of Canada Football association and for some years a leading light in the dominion's soccer affairs, has been indicted by a grand jury here on a charge of embezzlement of more than $4,000 from the Canadian association.

Weram Made President of Columbus A. A. Club

Columbus, O., March 31.—Clarence M. Werum, who handled the deal for the recent purchase of the Columbus American Association baseball club from Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago, today was made president of the controlling company.

San Francisco, Calif., March 31.—[Special.]—Two former well known townsmen were treated rough today when the Cubs trimmed the Frisco team, 9 to 5. After taking picks at Jim Scott and Douglas McWeeny, former White Sox, they gave a native son named Van Houtte a rough inning and won the first game they have taken in five starts.

Nick Dumovich dragged his aching elbow onto the slab and was nicked for three hits and a pair of runs in five innings. One of the tallies was due to a wild throw by Poe Wee Adams. Cheeves finished and allowed four hits and three runs in the last two innings and passed three men. He made objection to the way Umpire Joe Becker called balls and strikes.

Statz Again at Leadoff.

Manager Killefer switched his lineup and put Statz back in the leadoff position. Young Grigsby was benched in favor of Cliff Heathcote, who played left field and contributed a single, a double, a triple and two steals. He was quite the star of the afternoon.

Jim Scott had one bad inning, the fourth, when Friberg doubled with two down, Callaghan walked, Heathcote tripled and O'Farrell doubled. The Cubs scored off him in the first when Adams singled, Grantham was hit by a pitched ball and Kilduff let loose a wild throw.

Jump on Seal Rooks.

Grimes greeted McWeeney with a single to start the sixth. Friberg sacrificed and Heathcote singled. The Cubs batted all the way around in the ninth and turned two singles and Heathcote's double into four runs. They might have made more but two hands were chucked out at the plate. Van Houtte, the young native pitcher, was wild, walking two and hitting O'Farrell. He also threw Cheeves' sacrifice to the wrong base, which contributed to his downfall.

RAIN SAVES YANNIGANS

San Jose, Cal., March 31.—With the score 3 to 1 in favor of Seattle at the end of the second inning, the Cub Yannigan game here had to be stopped today because of a hard rain. Hippo Hodges had started and lost his control when the ball became waterlogged.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

BOXING INSTRUCTION.

WINNERS in five classes of the eight city championships of THE TRIBUNE amateur boxing tourney came from a gymnasium conducted for profit, where professionals or ex-professionals are employed to give instruction.

Several of these winners worked their way to the title by eliminating opponents in every way their physical equals but lacking in experience and knowledge of how to handle themselves in the arena. Sometimes poor defense determined the issue, sometimes inability to hit properly or to take advantage of openings.

Moreover, boxing, when it is other than a tapping contest, calls for training and condition. Men who have been through the mill themselves know better than others methods of training, essentials for prime condition.

Results of this tourney, in our opinion, demonstrated the desirability of a law permitting contests between professionals, thereby insuring a source of supply of instructors for amateurs. Golf teachers, baseball managers and coaches, wrestling instructors—all come from the ranks of those who have been through the fire of competition. Even in football, where rules debar professional players as coaches, the tendency is toward mentors for all-the-year-round work instead of only a few months in the fall.

Professional boxers, because their prowess is their means of livelihood, naturally will exhibit more science and more finished punching powers than amateurs. Professionals are necessary to the highest development of amateurs. These facts should be considered by the gentlemen at Springfield who are discussing the several boxing bills offered.

TRIBUNE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION BOXING FUND TO WAR "VETS"

AS promised those persons who so unselfishly gave of their time and funds to make a success of the recent Tribune A. A. amateur boxing tournament held at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, officials of the association this morning are able to state that the net proceeds of the six days events have been tabulated at $6,267.26. The figures given are subject to a recheck by auditors, but they are approximately correct. The fund will be turned over to Charles G. Dawes, Central Trust company of Illinois, for the benefit of the Illinois Veterans' trust.

The Song of the Whip-Poor-Will.

As the world sinks to rest
And the still-glowing west
Marks the daylight's reluctant retreat,
From a wood o'er the way,
Where the deep shadows lay,
Comes a melody mournfully sweet.
The gleam from afar
Of the soft evening star
Carries surcease from travail and pain,
While the care-burdened mind
Leaves its worries behind
In the whip-poor-will's plaintive refrain.

Poker Variations.

We call it Business Man's Poker because one has no business playing it unless he has a wad. Deal each player five cards, one at a time, same as in regular draw except that you bet after each card. When you have received five cards it becomes draw poker.

This game makes a nice opening pot. If some one books a pair the first two cards, it will cost you plenty for your next three cards, and to draw cards after that, and you simply HAVE to stay because your last card may make you a pair.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Dallas, Tex., March 31.—[Special.]—With only two hits to show for their nine rounds of endeavor against a pair of McGraw's hurlers, the White Sox flopped before the Giants today, 9 to 1. The Chicago fellows simply were off color in every department while the champions fielded brilliantly and walloped the ball with abandon.

The ineffectiveness of Gleason's pitchers and the feebleness of his attack indicated nothing else than lack of condition. It was six days since the batters had looked at any real pitching and for the same period the pale hose hurlers hadn't been able to cut loose.

Faber Lasts Four Rounds.

Red Faber started on the mound for the Sox and in four innings had all he wanted. The champs collected eight hits and three runs before he was succeeded by Ted Blankenship. Ted handed out eight passes in five frames, gave up eight hits and was scored on six times.

The clumsy John Scott was McGraw's hurling choice for the first five chapters, and although he seemed to be offering ordinary stuff the Sox were helpless. In four innings they didn't even get anything that looked like a safety. In the fifth, however, Kamm singled to right after Mostil had walked and stolen second. Schalk drove Kamm around to third with a double to left, but that was as far as the rally went.

In the next inning Jonnard was on the mound and he proved just as invincible as his predecessor

One satisfactory feature of the game from Gleason's standpoint, was the showing of Rish in left field. The former Sioux City star upheld his reputation for being a hound on flytalls and he also looked great when it came to getting in front of grounders and hurrying the ball back to the infield. At bat he did nothing.

Robertson Shows Up.

The Sox found Charles Robertson, the holdout pitcher, at the hotel here this morning. The no hit hero talked with Gleason for a few minutes but terms were not discussed. It is said, however, Robertson will be in the fold before the team leaves Texas Tuesday night.

Outfielder Pennington, taken on trial from the Grand Rapids, Mich., club was shipped back there today. His place was taken by a youngster named Hogan, a Chicago school kid.

UTTER DEMAND FOR PLACE ON NATIONAL BOARD

Roy Cannon Spokesman; Club Owners Cold.

BAN IS IN FAVOR

BAN B. JOHNSON, president of the American league, last night said he was in favor of giving the ball players' representation on the national commission.

"I received a letter from the baseball players' union officials," President Johnson said, "but in the letter it was stated that the players involved were all from the National league. No mention of American league players was made.

"I am in favor of giving the players representation and a voice on the national commission."

Union baseball players, claiming that four-fifths of all major league players are members of their association, yesterday demanded representation on the national baseball commission.

That the demand of the players, made through Raymond J. Cannon, the Milwaukee lawyer who organized the players' union, will not be granted has been the attitude of baseball club owners and officials for several months. Whether they will grant a hearing to the players now that the athletes have forced the issue is uncertain. Judge Landis has been reported among the players to favor granting them a voice in baseball affairs, but it is known that the club owners and the majority of managers have opposed the union bitterly.

JUDGE BARASA.

Owners Refuse to Act.

The fact that the organization has maintained secrecy as to its membership and officers and that the majority of those mentioned as being elected to office have denied that they belong to the union has been taken by the owners and managers, especially by McGraw of the Giants, as cause for refusing to deal with any such union. Cannon's connection with the White Sox scandal, as attorney for some of the accused players, is given by some of the owners as sufficient reason for refusing to recognize the union.

While Mr. Cannon, in his letter, declares that the demand is not made with the purpose of fomenting trouble, the insistence upon the demand may bring trouble.

Seek a Fair Deal.

Both the resolution passed by the executive committee of the Players' association and Mr. Cannon's letter are conciliatory. The letter, addressed to Commissioner Landis, President Johnson of the Americans, and President Heydler of the National leagues, said:

"This demand is not made for the purpose of fomenting trouble, but purely from the conviction that the granting of such a demand will be to the interests of every one concerned.

"It was thought that such representation was absolutely necessary in order that players might be assured they were being fairly dealt with by the owners.

"You have made the laws and regulations binding upon the ball players without the players being given a voice in the creation of the laws governing them. You have set the terms of the players' contracts and have passed upon all vital baseball problems which directly affect the players and rendered decisions without the advice and counsel of the players.

Seek to Avoid Friction.

"At a meeting of the executive board of the players' association it was decided that the best means to secure cooperation of both players and owners and to make for a peaceable understanding and to insure the best possible baseball for the public was to have the players represented on your body. In this way it was thought friction could best be avoided and interests of both sides reconciled."

Once before a players union demanded representations. The committee of that organization, composed of John Henry and Ed Reulbach, met with the national commission, which, after a stormy session, refused to recognize them or deal with them in any way and finally rejected all their demands.

CHLOE MALON IS DOUBLE WINNER AT HORSE SHOW

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Three thousand motorists attended the first annual spring horse show given by the Illinois Automobile club at Dexter park pavilion, the stock yards, yesterday afternoon. At the close of the show 3,000 motorists were ready to tell the world they were still interested in the king of the turf and would be willing to leave their steering wheels any day to see a skillful display of horsemanship.

MRS. JAMES G. ALEXANDER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

There were 100 entries, and only three professional horsemen competed in the ring. It was a day for amateur equestrians who take their daily rides on Chicago's great system of bridle paths.

Mrs. Alexander Wins.

Mrs. James G. Alexander, riding Chloe Malon, won first in both the women's three gaited, and the open three gaited classes, capturing the two cups donated by James Levy and Oliver G. Temme. William Danniel's Bootlegger took second, and Bobby Martin, ridden by Mrs. J. McLaughlin, won third in the ladies' three gaited class.

Rex Shawmut, owned by G. Leopold, walked out with the blue ribbon in the five gaited class, with T. Mahony's Tailor Maid second and Charlie Dare of the Falkenberg Riding academy third.

The Al Tearney cup in the road class was won by Musician, driven by Ed Moore and owned by M. Coates. Rex Shawmut took second in this class, and Frank M. Flynn's Lightning third.

Tailor Maid Victor.

Tommy O'Neil and his bucking broncho, brought in out of the line of westerners at the yards, gave the show crowd a real one reel wild west scene.

Tailor Maid racked up another honor to his credit by racking away with the Flynn cup in the women's five gaited event, Miss Lucile Riser riding the blue ribboner. Charlie Dare was second, and Spring Maid of the Chicago Riding academy, third.

Baby Girl and Bobby Martin, stepping around the white oval to the tune of a high speed jazz orchestra, won first in the three gaited pair class. Mrs. T. McLaughlin and B. Benson rode the winners. The second prise was won by Miss H. Richis and Frank M. Flynn, riding Col. Walker and Golden Floss.

Black Pine and Lancier, jumpers from Dr. W. Venn's stables, captured first and second, winning over Strongheart and Peter Pan of the H. Wetmore string, in the four foot jump class. Hughe, also owned by Dr. Venn, won first in the triple bars jump; Peter Pan was awarded second.

Two hundred exhibitors and horse lovers were guests of the management at a dinner dance at the Saddle and Sirloin club last night. Judge William E. Dever and other Democratic candidates were guests of the show management yesterday afternoon

LA GRANGE AND DEERFIELD WIN 3 CORNERED MEET

La Grange with 54¾ points won high honors in the senior division and Deerfield's 54¼ brought top place in the junior class in a triangular track meet at Bartlett gym yesterday. ALL BASKETBALL PATHS LEAD TO CHICAGO

Herewith is sketch showing the various towns in the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico which will be represented in the great national interscholastic cage tournament to be held at the University of Chicago this week.

VICTORS' PARADE ENDS RECORD KENNEL SHOW

The annual dog show of the Chicago Kennel club came to an end at the First Regiment armory last night with the grand parade of all of the winners. Competition in all classes was the best of any show held by the club and the entry was unusually large.

Edgemore, owned by Tim Donoghue and C. J. Pratt of La Salle, Ill., won all prizes among the dogs, while Nancy Bootleg, owned by the same men, was supreme among the bitches in the Pointer class. Kaiser's Bella II., owned by Dr. J. M. Kaiser, was the best of the bitches in the English Setter class, while Betty Clanderrick, owned by Carl Boening, was the best among the bitches in the Irish Setters.

The bulldog class was the largest in the history of the show. A. H. Stewart had two winners in Strathway Remnant, victory in the limit bitches, over 40 pounds, and the winners classes and Strathway Aldridge Amorel, winner in the open bitches, under 40 pounds.

MINERALITES' 3,010 COUNT BEATS GOTHAM

Mineralites, champions of the Randolph league, showed their class when they won a special bowling match from the University team of New York at the Randolph alleys last night. They took the easterners for three straight games and beat them, 3,010 to 2,856, on total pins.

Frank Kartheiser, substituting for Capt. "Chuck" Collier, was the leading pin getter for the winners with 632. Harry Steers was right behind him with 630. Asa Harris was the only high average man for the New Yorkers with 621.

Tonight the Orpheum team of New York will roll a three game total pin match against the Wethes, runners up to the Mineralites in the Randolph league at the Randolph drives. Scores:

Record Bunch of Pay Scores, but No New Leaders in A. B. C.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 31.—[Special.]—No new faces were added to the leaders in the doubles and singles events of the American Bowling Congress tourney here today, but a record for number of big games was set for the present classic.

Seventeen pairs rolled in the 1,200 class and forty-one individuals in the select 600 class. This is five more doubles and ten more singles than has been recorded for a single day's activity heretofore.

A number of good money counts were registered, principally among them being the 681 of A. Lea of Chicago, and the 675 of Maurice Hotchkiss of Detroit in the individual event.

1,365 High in Doubles.

Doubles event rolling showed Leo Allen and John Bauer of Detroit as the day's leaders with a mark of 1,265. E. Krems and T. Ferrarini of Chicago ranked next with 1,253.

Two Chicagoans had splendid opportunities to go well over the 700 mark in the singles but wabbled in the last game. Joe Leilinger began with 235, and followed with 245. His final game was a lowly 187 that made his total 668.

In this game he did not get a strike until the last frame into which he went with 157 in the ninth. Bunning of Chicago, likewise had a fine opportunity to go into the select 700 division, for he opened with 258 and 222, only to fall to 136 in the closer.

Best Single Scores.

Best single scores of the day were 664 by K. Spellman, Tulsa; 663, F. Breckie, Detroit; 650, O. Schroeder, Waukesha; 649, J. Bruggeman, Detroit, and 644 by E. Hesley, Chicago.

Best doubles scores were: R. Brakow-J. Turner, Detroit, 1,249; A. Bamberg-Harold Allen, Detroit, 1,246; B. Phillips-E. Hardy, Waukesha, 1,225; W. Fawcett-W. Miller, Detroit, 1,223.

But one team showed anything in the way of class on the first five man shift, this being Chateau Fritzi Scheffs. It gained a team total of 2,935. No other team was able to make even the 2,800 class. Wally Lundgren, who won the world's singles title at Toledo last year, had an off night, getting games of 174, 179, and 179.

Best Chicago scores today were:

RECORD SET FOR ENTRIES IN A. A. F. GYMNASTIC MEET

With a record number of entries assured, the championship gymnastic tournament of the Amateur Athletic Federation of Cook County will be run off at Central Y. M. C. A. April 11. Titles will be awarded both the first and second divisions. William Herschke, manager of the meet, reports that last year's entry of 112 gymnasts, representing eighteen institutions, will easily be passed.

The Pilsen Sokols, 1922 champions, are again entered with their star men, George Vesely, J. Kristufek, and V. Stransky. The Lincoln turners, second last year, will furnish tough opposition.

PURPLE GOLF CARD COMPLETE

The schedule for the Northwestern University golf team announced yesterday follows:

May 4—University of Michigan at Evanston.
May 8—University of Chicago at Evanston.
May 15—University of Illinois at Urbana.
May 19—University of Wisconsin at Madison.

The western conference tournament will be held early in June. Hayes is captain of the purple team and the two others are Matson and Isterlund.

ALL-ROUND SWIM RESULTS IN TIE OF I. A. C. STARS

Detroit, Mich., March 31.—[Special.]—Harold ("Stubby") Kruger and Johnny Weissmuller, Illinois Athletic club aquatic champions, tied for first place in the national senior indoor swimming champion pentathlon with eight points each at the Detroit Athletic club tonight. Rhinehold Thomas, Detroit A. C., finished third.

This pentathlon, an all around swimming test, is scored on points in the order of finish in the five events.

Weissmuller placed second in the life saving event, third in the breast stroke, first in the back stroke in 1:08 4-5, first in the 100 yard free style in :54 4-5, and first in the 500 yards in 6:06 for his eight points. Kruger was first in the life saving event, second in the back stroke, second in the 500 yard free style, first in the breast stroke in 1:17 3-5, and second in the 100 yard free style.

Following are summaries of other feature races:

220 yard free style junior championship—Won by Otis Troubridge [I. A. C.]; Dennis McKenzie [Buffalo], second; Charles Bacon [D. A. C.], third. Time, 2:32 4-5.

O'LEARY STILL WINNING RACES

Lincoln, Neb., March 31.—Dan O'Leary, who half a century ago was walking champion of the world, last night won a walking race staged here against three roller skaters. O'Leary walked one mile while each of the three skaters skated one mile. He won the race by three yards and completed the mile in 9:02.

GUTHRIE, OKLA., GIRLS WIN.

Audubon, Ia., March 31.—The Guthrie, Okla., High school girls' team won their second straight victory over Audubon here last night, 26 to 16, in an intersectional basketball contest.

FIREWORKS TODAY IN K. OF C. LEAGUE AS 4 TEAMS SEEK TITLES

With the championship of the north section at stake in the De Soto-Columbus clash at Broadway armory and south section runner-up honors involved in the Calumet-Auburn clash at Eighth Regiment armory, plenty of fireworks are promised for the finale of the Knights of Columbus basketball league schedule this afternoon.

The north section tie has existed since Feb. 4. The south side's feature game at attracting equal attention, because the team defeated in the Calumet-Auburn clash will be eliminated from the round robin tournament beginning next Sunday to decide the league championship.

Besides these two games, Dowling and Loyola and Englewood and La Rabida will come together in south section, while O'Connor meets University, and Hennepin tackles Setters on the north side.

SKELTON SWIMS TO WORLD MARK FOR 220 YARDS

Harrison, N. J., March 31.—Robert Skelton of Illinois A. C., Chicago, established a new world's record of 2:53 3-5 for the 220 yard breast stroke swim in a 75 yard pool in winning the national A. A. U. title at a water carnival tonight in the pool of the Edison Lamp works.

COBB'S 300 CREW MAY CARRY FAIR STAFF TO TITLE

BY HUGH FULLERTON.
ARTICLE XV.

Augusta, Ga., March 31.—[Special.] Detroit is back in the championship ranks in baseball. The team which Cobb has formed will be right there at the top all season, and if the pitching staff can hold out to within 15 per cent of the Yanks in performance and within 10 per cent of the Browns, Detroit may slip through to represent the American league in the world series.

TY COBB.

There is one wabbly position, the hole in the infield now filled by Derrill Pratt more or less satisfactorily, and another place not too well filled at short by Rigney. Nor is the catching staff quite up to the standard of pennant winners, although better than the one which helped the Tigers to three championships.

Hustling, Fighting Team.

Yet this team, in spite of imperfections which impress an outsider, is one of the greatest hustling and fighting aggregations in the game, on its toes all the time, inspired by the spirit which has carried Cobb along at the top so many years. St. Louis is stronger in some respects, the Yankees stronger in sheer mechanical ability, but the Tigers look better to me than either. With Sisler out, they look better than the Browns, and their spirit is in sharp contrast to the lack of hustle and interest shown by the Yankees.

Ty Cobb has shown that he is a real manager, a real leader. He has ideas which a lot of managers lack; he has weeded out of this team all of the fellows who could not go along with him. Pratt, however, may not be able to work in the Cobb system. They are antagonistic in temperament and style, although at present Del is going along well with Cobb and has shown the Georgia peach enough to win him the regular position at second. George Cutshaw, one of the smartest of all ball players, and Brady, a fine young prospect, are on hand as further insurance for this position.

Cutshaw Cobb's Right Hand.

Cutshaw will act as Cobb's lieutenant and coach, and direct the strategy from the line with the aid of Fred Carisch, former Cleveland catcher and Sioux Falls manager. This pair gives Cobb one of the smartest boards of strategy in the game. Cutshaw is a whiz at directing play.

Cobb is carrying a double infield. Blue, who ranks second in the American league to Sisler, will play first base, with Beun, a corking prospect, as his substitute. Blue is a corking lead off man and a good hitter. His one fault seems to be overanxiety to hit in tight places. He is improving steadily; is only 25 and a star. This spring he looks faster and handles himself better than ever before.

Rigney, who will play short, is not a finished man, and one inclined to get balls while out of position, but all his faults are curable, and he can hit. Kerr, secured from Denver, will understudy him. Jones is the third baseman, with Haney his understudy. Jones is in better health this spring, heavier, and he has lost the stomach trouble which affected his work last year.

Have Great Outfield.

The outfield will be Cobb, Veach, and Heilmann, with Manusch and Fothergill as substitutes. Flagstead is to be sold or traded, which is a hint to clubs needing a classy outfielder who can hit. Cobb is a revelation this spring, a bit heavier in shoulder and hips, light waisted, and in magnificent condition.

Heilmann today weighs 197 stripped, and is fully twenty-five pounds lighter than he has been in three years. Veach always is in condition. Manusch has shown a lot this spring, but of course only an accident can let a youngster into such an outfield.

The catching staff is not great. Bassler has developed into a very competent handler of pitchers and will do the bulk of the work. Woodall will be second man; a catcher improving very rapidly. Manion probably will go to the minors for further seasoning.

Holloway Looks Like Find.

Cobb tried to arrange this, but the New York Giants refused to waive, and, rather than let them have him, Cobb will keep the youngster, who some day will be a star, but who now needs work. If Manion is kept Spencer will go. If Manion is placed for further seasoning Spencer will remain with the team.

The pitching staff will be Pillette, Johnson, who is much better than last season; Dauss; Rip Collins, who is getting good; Olsen, speedy right hander who was Cornell's star and who shows a great burst of speed; and Holloway. All are right handers.

Holloway is a rangy lad who pitched for University of Alabama, and who, after one year of minor and major experience, looks too good to be true. He has a fine flash of speed cracking curve.

The left handers are just left handers. Bert Cole is improved. Roy Moore, secured from Philadelphia, has shown nice form this spring and his pitching is aided by ability to hit. Ray Francis, secured from Washington, is not much more promising than he was.

Staff Not Overly Strong.

The pitching staff is not strong, nor is there an outstanding star who can be figured to win twenty or more games. But the average pitching should be better than last year, and this team can make enough runs to cover up moderate pitching weakness. Moore ought to win a lot of games from the Browns and Yankees, the contenders, and a left hander who can stop those teams can boost Detroit's pennant chances immensely.

Cobb intends to shift his batting order and avoid getting a run of left handed batters together. His left handed crew can be crippled by left handed pitching, but Heilmann can bust it, and Blue has the advantage of hitting from either side of the plate.

The big improvement of the Tigers is in their spirit. They are entirely inspired by the belief that they will win.

Cleverest Team Visited.

In fact, Cobb declares that if they don't win this year they ought to get out of the game. The spirit with which the Tigers are playing is desperate. They are forcing the attack, watching every point, and playing the best team ball of all clubs I have visited. The players also show a finer understanding of why they are doing smart plays. Without disparaging any other outfit, this is the cleverest team visited. After a glimpse of this team's inside stuff, one is convinced Cobb is a smart field leader and his lieutenants and privates intelligent enough to carry through his directions.

The condition of the men, excepting perhaps Pratt and Dauss, is extraordinarily good. They were favored by excellent weather until rain struck them about a week ago, and they are going at top speed. This team is going to be hard to stop. Given equal pitching, it will beat out any team in the circuit.

BLANKENSHIP, YOUNG SOX HURLER, ACCUSED OF ABANDONING WIFE

DALLAS, Tex., March 31.—[Special.] — Ted Blankenship, young White Sox slab ace, this evening was summoned to answer a charge of wife abandonment. Papers were served on the athlete while he was on the rubbing table after his workout in today's battle with the Giants.

The complainant is Mrs. Nellie Blankenship of Dallas, who alleges the pitcher draws a salary of $400 a month and refuses to contribute to the support of herself and child.

Blankenship was in the custody of the sheriff tonight and efforts were being made to reach a settlement in the matter. Lewis Blankenship, father of the pitcher, who was here to see today's game, was looking after his son's affairs.

O'BRIEN TAKES OVER NORMAL BALL CLUB

Chris O'Brien, promoter of professional football and manager of the Chicago Cardinals, has thrown his hat on the baseball diamond and will promote semi-pro ball on the south side this year. Chris and a syndicate of south side business men have taken over Normal Park, 61st street and Racine avenue and have let a contract for rebuilding the park.

The club will be known as the Normals and already O'Brien has a lineup that looks strong. At least seven of the men on the team are ex-big leaguers or recent college diamond stars.

"We have champions and will give the south side some high class ball," declared Chris. "It is the aim of the club to join the Midwest league. The park will be open for practice Saturday, April 7."

ZACK WHEAT AND ROBINS SETTLE; CONTRACT SAME

New York, March 31.—Zack Wheat, veteran outfielder-captain of the Brooklyn Robins, has signed his contract for 1923 and today rejoined his men in New Orleans. Wheat was reported to have come to terms in Clearwater, Fla., yesterday after he had been flatly refused a $500 raise over last season by President Ebbets of the Robins. Conditions of the 1923 contract were not revealed, but it was reported that Zack's team mates had pledged themselves to make up the $500 bone of contention to keep their captain.

DE PAUL ISSUES BASEBALL CALL FOR TOMORROW

The first baseball practice of the De Paul university squad will be held tomorrow afternoon at De Paul field. Coach Frank Haggerty looks for a large squad to turn out and expects a strong team.

Among the players who will report is Edward Hanley, catcher, who was one of the winners in THE TRIBUNE amateur tryouts for major league clubs in 1915.

CONLON, EX-PILOT OF HARVARD, GIVES SOME THRILLS TO BRAVES

BOSTON, Mass., March 31.—The training camp performances of Jocko Conlon, captain of the Harvard college nine last year, now trying to make good as an infielder with the Boston Nationals, have impressed observers at St. Petersburg, Fla., more than the work of any other recruit.

His batting has been consistently good. He made hits off a fast ball right-hander, a southpaw and a right-handed spitball pitcher in one game the Braves played with Washington. He made three two-base hits in as many times at bat against Brooklyn Saturday and made them to all fields.

In the field he made several sparkling plays at shortstop. When shifted to third, he was equally good.

TWO "K" CUEISTS DROP TO REAR IN BILLIARD RACE

BY JOE DAVIS.

Two of the trio of cueists who have been contenders for the championship of the Chicago Billiard league all season were relegated to also ran positions last week. These were Augie Kleckhefer and Leonard Kenney, each incurring two defeats. Loren Kendall of Charley Schaefer's room, who scored a win over Kleckhefer, is holding top place in the stretch race for the Blake championship trophy.

Heine Grauman of Smith and Brunner's climbed to second place, one game behind Kendall, and Jess Jacobs of the Jackson Park room is third, one game behind Grauman. The standing:

	W.	L.	HR.	BG.
Kendall [44], Schaefer's	18	9	7	51
Grauman [47], Smith & B.	17	10	8	43
Jacobs [45], Jackson Park	16	11	9	49
Kleckhefer [60], Kleckhefer's	17	12	10	46
Kenney [50], Reid [47], Kleckhefer's	17	12	6	57

Magnus [46], Radio	8	20	7	64

Tomorrow night McClure will play Grauman at Smith and Brunner's and Kendall will meet Tredick at McGarrys.

Layton Meets Kleckhefer.

John Layton of St. Louis, the national three cushion champion, who just finished first in the Interstate Three Cushion league series, and Augie Kleckhefer will start play in their 720 point three cushion match at the Kleckhefer Recreation room tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. They will play two blocks of 60 points each tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday, and then go to St. Louis for the second half of the match.

The stakes are $600, besides the whole of the net gate receipts, making a total of about $1,800 at stake.

The meeting of these experts is one of the most attractive matches of the season. Kleckhefer won the last national tournament at Pittsburgh, but lost to Layton in the first challenge match by a few points.

Held Two Leading Players.

Layton has held the title since then and as he was one of the first four players to finish in the Interstate race, he will compete in the final series, in which these four players will take part.

Local players recall Kleckhefer's fine performances in 1919, when after winning the three cushion title from De Oro, he defeated Cannefax, Maupome, Otis, McCourt and Maupome in turn, and eventually lost to De Oro by two points.

By many experts Kleckhefer and Layton are rated as the two leading three cushion players of the world, both having skill and nerve. The tickets are on sale at the Kleckhefer room at 55 cents, including war tax.

By taking two games from Charles McCourt last week, John Layton of St. Louis took first place in the Interstate Three Cushion league. He won 39 games and lost 13. Bob Cannefax of New York, who is second with 36 wins and 14 losses, has two games to play with Reiselt. Tiff Denton, who is third, has finished his schedule, winning 37 games and losing 15.

Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, who is fourth, has series to play with Hahmen of Cleveland, McCourt of Pittsburgh, Cannefax at New York and Moore at New York. He has won 30 games and lost 14. Clarence Jackson of Detroit has won 31 games and lost 19, so has little chance to finish any higher.

MAKIN' THE BLUEBIRDS FEEL AT HOME.

THE popular bluebird has such a good reputation that he is a favorite when it comes to attracting birds about a home. As far as is known no one has ever been able to prove that the bluebird is a crop destroyer. You can lure a pair to nest in your cherry tree without worrying that your fruit is going to be eaten up by these birds. They are insect eaters and as such are mighty valuable residents of your garden or orchard. It is comparatively simple to induce bluebirds to camp on your place for the summer. They readily take to birdhouses, and if you will stick up a few of the right kind and in the right places you are apt to have some of the prettiest little bird neighbors a-going.

A bluebird nesting box is not difficult to make. Hundreds of boys in manual training classes throughout the United States have been turning them out in great numbers. Make a box about eight inches high with a floor in it that is about five inches square. The entrance hole diameter of one and a half inches should be six or seven inches above the floor. A bird box with a removable cover is highly desirable, although not absolutely necessary. You can make a removable cover without using a hinge by putting a cleat across the back with another on the under side, which will press against the front of the box. The roof should extend two inches over the entrance hole.

If you don't want to bother with the cover business and make a simpler box, four shingles and two bits of board, with a few nails will make a simple bird home. Cut an entrance hole in the upper right hand corner one and one-half inches in diameter, and then you are ready to wield a paint brush. All nesting boxes should be painted for protection against rain and sun. Brown and green are the best colors. Place the boxes in full sunshine about six feet above the ground with long axis vertical. Good spots for bluebird boxes are—on exposed limbs of trees in orchards, or on fence posts around a garden or orchard, on pergolas, rear of garages, or other buildings, always remembering that this bird likes open places. Face the box, if possible, to the south. Don't worry about the bluebird or the wren eating the fruit in your orchard — "they ain't" that kind of birds.

If you want to be sure that cats and other climbing enemies of birds don't get after your bluebird residents you can fit around the post or tree a funnel-like strip of tin or galvanized iron, which will prevent most any animal from ascending the tree or post.

QUIRK FAVORITE TO WIN CALERTON CLUB SKATE RACE

BILLIARD BODY DECIDES TO JOIN OLYMPIC BOARD

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—It was learned today that the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players has decided to join the American Olympic committee. This was accepted in billiard circles in this city as meaning that this country will be represented in the Olympic billiard matches in Paris next year. It is the result of the drive started shortly after the last Olympics to include billiards on the Olympic program.

WILLIAMS TO PILOT BADGER BASEBALL TEAM

Madison, Wis., March 31.—Rollie Williams, captain of last year's University of Wisconsin football team, was chosen today to captain this year's university baseball nine. Williams was elected in place of Pitcher George Ruedinger, who was barred in the recent "purity wave," which lost to Wisconsin five stellar players.

Williams, one of the greatest all around athletes ever produced at Wisconsin, will captain the team from the outfield.

HUNTERS SURE OF FALL SPORT ALONG ILLINOIS

BY BOB BECKER.

The annual spring migration of birds, which has been under way for several weeks, has brought millions of ducks and geese into Illinois, and, judging from great flocks of birds now loitering along the Illinois river, the shotgun fans are assured of some great sport next fall when the birds return from their northward journey.

There is no question about the abundance of waterfowl. A jaunt through the flooded lowlands along the Illinois shows birds galore. Fat mallards and pintails (sprigs) have invaded the ponds, ditches, and flooded areas in droves and in many places are so tame that it is possible to drive within a few yards of them without scaring the flocks into flight.

The sight of such numbers of game birds is a welcome one to the sportsman, but many of the bottom land farmers are not so keen about playing host to these hungry travelers from the south, as winter wheat is in several localities disappearing rapidly under the attacks.

Plenty of Mallards.

Besides the mallards and pintails there are also on the job thousands of bluebills and other species of waterfowl which the gunners like to take a crack at in the fall.

With so many ducks around it is a big temptation to do some shooting in spite of the law, which says "No spring hunting of waterfowl," and the game wardens are kept on the jump trying to "bag" the outlaws who are not obeying the statute.

Besides the state wardens on the job the presence of federal wardens in the lower Illinois river country has helped keep down the illegal shooting, although this season, as in the past, there has been more or less of it. To adequately patrol all of the bottom lands, with their hundreds of ponds and sloughs, would take a force of wardens ten times the size of that now operating.

Federal Matter.

The fact that the migratory bird ousiness is now a federal matter is the thing that has put teeth into the enforcement of present regulations. As one professional hunter near Beardstown put it, "This game of shootin' out of season is not worth the risk now.

"In the old days if you were caught it means only a small fine, as it was a state matter. Now if you get pinched it means you are soaked several hundred dollars, with the possibility of going to jail."

GARDINI DEPENDS ON WRIST LOCK TO BEAT LEWIS

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Renato Gardini, idol of local Italian mat fans, who will attempt to take the heavyweight title from Ed (Strangler) Lewis in the main event of the wrestling show of the Midwest A. C. at the Coliseum Tuesday, generally is considered one of the headiest grapplers in the heavyweight division.

DICK DAVISCOURT.

Although many close followers of the mat game believe Gardini too small and light for the champion, the Italian is deceiving. He will scale close to 220 pounds and is solid. He is smaller in stature but will offset this handicap in speed and cleverness. He claims to have a defense for the champion's deadly head lock and says he thinks he can weaken Lewis' arms with his own punishing holds in such a manner that Lewis' head holds cannot be applied with any degree of effectiveness.

Few Have Broken Hold.

How successful the Italian's efforts will be, only the match will tell. Many other challengers thought they could break Lewis' head hold, and do things to Lewis' arms, but the results have always been the same—the champion has pinned them with his head lock whenever he made up his mind to turn the trick.

Since he won the championship from Stanislaus Zybyzko, the present title holder has met every man Manager Billy Sandow has selected and showed no hesitancy to wrestle Gardini when given the compensation due a champion.

Lewis is a college bred athlete who started out as a boxer and wound up as the world's heavyweight wrestling champion.

Gardini to Use Locks.

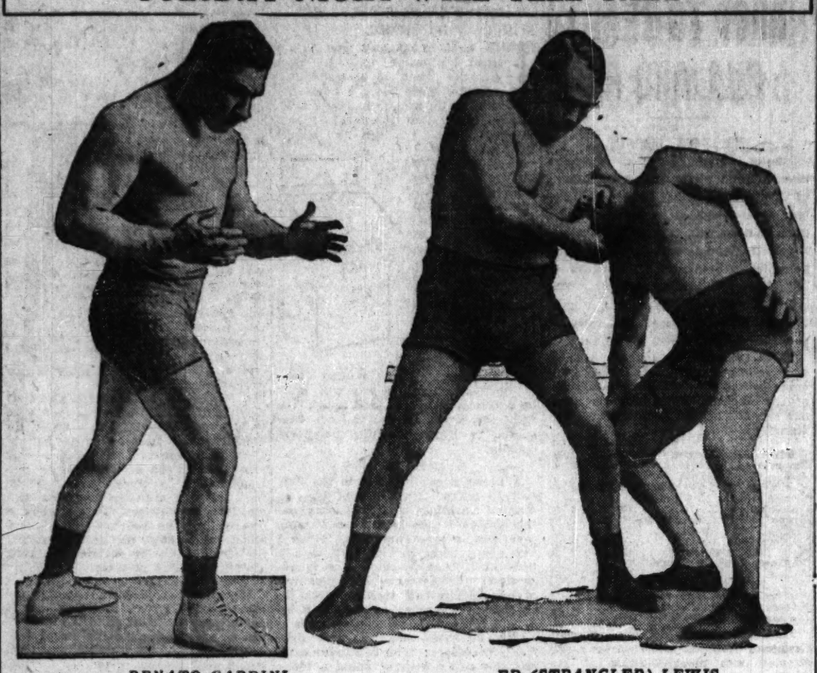
With Lewis relying almost entirely on the head lock, Gardini will try to throw or wear down his opponent with numerous locks. The Italian is a past master of the crippling double wrist lock and short arm scissors. He can apply the double wrist lock from a standing or underneath position. He also uses the reverse double wrist lock to good advantage and knows something of the toe hold. In several of his matches he has weakened opponents with head locks, and it is almost a certainty Renato will not overlook any lock in his attack.

Dick Daviscourt and Jack Roller, two California heavyweights, will go on just ahead of the main bout. They will wrestle one fall to a finish, with a time limit of one hour. Daviscourt has wrestled in Chicago before and many were impressed with his showing.

Faggi's Opponent Not Selected.

In the opener Mazzuno Faggi will take holds with a grappler yet to be selected. The Italian is a light heavyweight who served with the American forces in the world war. Charley Lavine will referee all matches. The first bout is scheduled to go on at 8:15 o'clock and the main event will be staged at 10 o'clock.

TUESDAY NIGHT WILL TELL TALE



RENATO GARDINI. ED (STRANGLER) LEWIS.

Italian followers of the mat game are a unit in the belief that the man pictured on the left will lift the crown from the head of the fellow pictured on the right. The latter is shown clamping on his deadly headlock, with which he won the title from Stanislaus Zbyszko. Gardini, whose father-in-law is underwriting the $10,000 guaranteed Lewis, win, lose, or draw, is a past master in the use of the double wristlock and the short arm scissors. He expects to win with one of these holds.

LANGFORD KAYOS MEXICAN CHAMP IN FIRST ROUND

[Copyright: 1923: By New York Times.]

Mexico City, March 31.—Sam Langford, after many years of fighting, finally has won a championship. The Tar Baby was crowned heavyweight champion of Mexico this afternoon, when he knocked Kid Savage, holder of the title, for a goal in one minute and fifteen seconds, with a right cross followed by a left hook. Savage slept for twenty minutes.

Langford is said to be leaving soon for New York, where he may help to train Firpo.

Savage is a 24 year old white lad. The battle was staged in the Chapultepec bull ring and Langford was a 3 to 1 favorite to win the title.

OPPONENT TERRIFIED

Mexico City, March 31.—[United News.]—Only a few punches had been exchanged when Sam Langford crashed the young Californian down for the count.

It was apparent before the bout started that it wouldn't go far and that Langford would win the title as champion of Mexico. Savage was trembling visibly in his corner and was an ashen color.

Savage kept retreating around the ring from the big colored fighter until Sam cornered him.

Hail Langford as Hero.

When Savage had been counted out the crowd swarmed into the ring and gave Langford the ovation of a hero. He was hoisted on shoulders and to the yells greeting him as the new champion he just smiled and smiled.

"I'se a champeen now," was his comment.

Promoters promised to get him a match with Balsacs, the champion of Spain, within a short time.

"This is a great place. I like to stay here where I'se the champeen," Langford said after he came from the dressing room. He said he knew nothing about the reports that Tex Rickard had engaged him as a sparring partner to help train Luis Firpo, the South American.

The crowd was 3,000.

CHAMPION!

SAM LANGFORD.

The dusky pugilist, who often has been near a championship, finally has annexed a ring crown—that of Mexico—and 'lows as how he's going to stay there and enjoy all the good things that go with it.

NATIONAL RIFLE CHAMPIONSHIP IS WON BY T. K. LEE

Washington, D. C., March 31.—T. K. Lee of Birmingham, Ala., winner of the title last year, has again won the national individual gallery rifle championship conducted by the National Rifle association. His score was 594 out of a possible 600. H. W. Gerrans, Balboa, H. T. S., Canal Zone, made the same aggregate score, but was outranked by Lee's higher score in the standing position.

GLEN VIEW CLUB MARKSMEN WIN AFTER SHOOTOFF

Following the shoot-off of a tie, Glen View won the weekly shoot of the Country Club league held yesterday over the traps of Oak Park Country club. At the end of the regular program, Glen View and South Shore were knotted with team totals of 467. In the shoot-off, Glen View won by three targets.

According to conditions of the match, each shooter shot at 100 targets, 16 yards rise, added target handicap. As many members who wished could shoot for the same club, but only the five highest counted in the team total. R. W. Keyes of Glen View had high net score of 95, while H. C. Bartholomay and George Henneberry tied for high in the practice event of twenty-five targets with totals of 24. Summary of team shoot:

GLEN VIEW—R. W. Keyes, 95—2—97; J. A. Rushton, 79—16—95; J. H. Quinlan, 76—16—92; R. B. Upham, 76—16—92; George Henneberry, 86—5—91. Total, 467.

SOUTH SHORE—L. A. Bell, 78—16—95; R. W. Clancy, 93—1—94; W. C. Peacock, 91—2—93; E. O. Judd, 90—3—93; H. C. Bartholomay, 85—7—92. Total, 467.

USHER TOPS GUN FIELD

Charlie Usher was high gun in the 50 target distance handicap event at Lincoln Park traps. Usher took first trophy, breaking 44 targets from 20 yards. Frank Hughes and E. C. Buchan tied for second trophy, each breaking 43 targets from 22 yards. In the shootoff Hughes defeated Buchan, 20 to 19.

A. J. Usher won the doubles event, breaking 44 of the 25 pair. Deane Bergen and H. M. Rowley tied for second honors, each getting 43 targets. At 10 o'clock this morning the Lincoln Park diamond trophy team will shoot against a challenging team, 100 targets per man. Leading scores:

50 TARGETS, DISTANCE HANDICAP—C. Usher, 44; Hughes, 43; E. C. Buchan, 43; W. J. Burghardt, 42; C. E. Kinsman, 42; W. F. MacGill, pro, 41; L. Schultze, 40; C. McGary, 40; H. M. Rowley, 39; Dan Zel, 38; A. J. Usher, 38; Jay Graham, pro, 37; Deane Bergen, 36; A. G. Hanson, pro, 34; C. W. Irrgang, 33.

The Old Copyreader

"Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten."

BEG PARDON.

("Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten.")

"Why so pessimistic, brother?"
Asked a reader in a note
After I, somehow or other,
Gronched in something that I wrote.
He objected to the spirit
Of the slogan under which
I oblige, expressing fear it
Was a little out of pitch.

There are folks of somber feature,
Glum and gloomy-thinking men,
And each grim, embittered creature
Wields a maple-sirup pen;
They have chosen to be cheerful
For to hoard the shekels spare;
So, although by nature tearful
They are optimists for fair.

Now, if they, to get the money,
Have the right to wear a pose
It would certainly be funny
If I hadn't, goodness knows!
What if I'm a Pollyanner
When I lay aside my quoins
And sophisticated manner?
Would that suit you? . . . Well, I shy.

Still, I'm not so blamed ungracious
As perhaps I seem to be;
But I've always been voracious
And it really seems to me
That Humanity's more sour
Than it's sweet; and then, forsooth,
When my picture of it's dour
It is pretty near the truth.

TAYLOR AND GENARO TO WORK OUT TODAY

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of Tribune boxing representatives are:

At Mexico City—Sam Langford knocked out Kid Savage, [1].

Bud Taylor, the Terre Haute, Ind., bantamweight, who meets Frankie Genaro, flyweight champion, at the Coliseum on Wednesday night, arrived in Chicago yesterday and will work at the Arcade this afternoon. Bud is considered one of the greatest little scrappers ever developed in the Hoosier state.

The flyweight king, accompanied by Manager Bernstein, will arrive this morning on the Century and immediately will establish training quarters at a loop gymnasium. Genaro will be met at the station by an Italian delegation led by Judge Bernard Barasa and Renato Gardini, the wrestler.

Smith Comes with Genaro.

Midget Smith of New York, who will trade punches with Joe Lynch, kingpin of the bantams, in the other ten round bout, will arrive on the same train with Genaro. Harry Neary, manager of Smith, will be in the party. Lynch himself is due to arrive later in the day.

With such a delegation of prominent boxers in our midst the pugilistic rialto will hum with excitement for the next few days. Other boxers on the card who have been training here will have to fall into the background and permit the champions to occupy the spotlight.

Taylor is brimming with confidence. He realizes he has the chance of his pugilistic career, and has left nothing undone to be in the best of condition. He has done allll his preliminary training at home. He is through with road work. A little boxing with big gloves and heavily bandged hands will wind up his training.

Taylor Down to Weight.

Th Hoosier said he weighed 115¼ pounds after his workout yesterday afternoon. He had little trouble getting down to this figure and claims he is just as strong as if he weighed 118. Taylor has agreed to weigh 116 pounds at 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. Genaro is not expected to scale more than 114 pounds.

Eddie Long and Eddie Kane, who look after the interests of Taylor, are sure Bud will go the route, and each believes Bud has an even chance to win the popular verdict. At the same time they give Genaro credit for being a great little fighter who can hit with either hand and take a lot of punishment. In fact, both Genaro and Taylor are hard right hand punchers and they like to mix.

Besides the two ten rounders, Jack Elle of the west side and Patsy Flannigan of St. Louis will engage in an eight round bout at 124 pounds. Joe O'Hara of Fort Dodge, Ia., and Mike Snyder, local 138 pounder, will open the show in a six round contest.

Capacity Crowd Assured.

Considering the demand for tickets, which are on sale at the usual places, a capacity crowd will see the bouts. Joe Coffey is matchmaker, and net proceeds will go to St. Mary's orphanage.

Charlie White, local lightweight matched to meet Johnny Williams of Brooklyn at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium on April 9, started training at Ferretti's. Williams has been working for the last week at the Arcade.

Pal Moore, the bantam, will be at the ringside on Wednesday to challenge the winner of the Genaro-Taylor bout.

Howard Carr, owner of the Arcade gym, whose team won the Chicago amateur boxing championships conducted by The Tribune A. A., gave his boxers and friends a dinner at the gymnasium last night to celebrate the first amateur tourney any of his teams ever won.

Dick Kayo, a Duluth welterweight, is in town and has placed himself under the management of Eddie Stanton, who wants to match him with any of the local 145 pounders.

Pink Mitchell Deposits Forfeit with Comish

Milwaukee, Wis., March 31.—Pinkie Mitchell, champion junior welterweight boxer, today deposited a bond of $2,000 with the commission chosen last December to have supervision over the championship belt which goes with the title. Mitchell left today for Philadelphia to meet Bobby Barrett on Monday night, the contest to be his first eastern engagement in defense of his title.

GREB TO CHALLENGE TUNNEY AND WILSON FOR TITLE BATTLES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 31.—Harry Greb, former light heavyweight champion of America, announced tonight before he left for Hot Springs, Ark., that he would file challenges with the New York boxing commission for a return bout with Gene Tunney, light heavyweight titleholder, and Johnny Wilson, the middleweight champion. He said he would post forfeits of $2500 with each challenge.

Greb will condition himself at Hot Springs for his bout with Jeff Smith at Atlanta, Ga., on July 10.

PELL LOSES IN BRITISH MEET FOR RACQUET TITLE

LONDON, England, March 31.—[Associated Press.]—Clarence C. Pell of New York was eliminated in the semi-final of the British amateur racquets championship today after a hard match, by E. M. Baerlein, of England, former champion. The score was 12—15, 15—8, 17—14, 15—9.

Lafayette 'Y' Valley Team Wins Intercity Meet

Danville, Ill., March 31.—Lafayette, Ind., Y. M. C. A. volleyball team won the intercity meet here, defeating the University of Illinois coaches three straight games and winning two of three from Danville. Danville won two of three from the coaches for third honors.

New N. Y. License Body to Curtail Muldoon Power

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—The appointment of a new license committee to work in conjunction with the New York State Athletic commission will probably be announced by Gov. Smith within the next few days. Such appointment will markedly curtail the power of William Muldoon, present chairman of the boxing board, who has been serving as license commissioner.

BRICKIES CLASH WITH THISTLES AT SOCCER TODAY

One of the main attractions of the local soccer schedule today will be the meeting of the Bricklayers and Thistles in a major league battle at 35th street and Wentworth avenue at 2:30. These old rivals have had three great games this season, meeting twice in the national cup competition and in the fall in a league game, which ended in a 1 to 1 tie.

The Olympia team departed last night for St. Louis to meet the Vesper Buicks, with whom they played a tie game recently here. Following is today's complete schedule:

MAJOR LEAGUE.

Bricklayers and Thistles at 35th street and Wentworth avenue.

AMATEUR NATIONAL CUP.

Swedish-Americans and Harvey at Harvey.

CHICAGO DISTRICT LEAGUE.

British Legion and Sparta Union at 97th street and Kostner avenue; Ulster United and Jugo-Slavia at 79th street and Drexel avenue; Danish-Americans and Western Electric at Humboldt park.

PEEL CUP.

North Shores and Y. M. H. A. at 16th street and Avers avenue.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE.

Norwegian-Americans and Sture at 46th and Fullerton avenues; Sparta Union II. and Victoria at Greenview and Wrightwood avenues; Hungarians and Swedish II at Winnemac and Robey; Luxemberger and Victoria II. at Greenview and Wrightwood avenues [1:15 p. m.]; Sparta II. at Lake Forest.

SONS OF ST. GEORGE LEAGUE.

Sunflower and Snowdrop at 79th street and Drexel avenue [10:30 p. m.]; Laburnum and Mistletoe at Winnemac and Robey.

All games start at 2:30 p. m. unless otherwise noted.

DRAFT SCHEDULE FOR PUBLIC LINKS TOURNEY IN JUNE

James D. Standish Jr. of Detroit, chairman of the public course committee of the United States Golf association, recently visited Washington and conferred with Col. C. O. Sherrill, officer in charge of public buildings and grounds, regarding arrangements for the national public links championship at Potomac park, starting June 26.

A tentative schedule, under which players will be qualified from the various districts of the country and thus made eligible to compete in the championship, was announced by Standish, as follows:

New York, 15; Chicago, 15; Washington, 15; New England, 20; Newark, 4; Philadelphia, 6; Cleveland, 4; Wilmington, 2; Baltimore, 6; Buffalo, 4; Pittsburgh, 6; Atlanta, 4; Detroit, 4; Toledo, 6; Denton, 4; Indianapolis, 4; St. Louis, 8; middle west, including St. Joseph, Des Moines, Kansas City, 8½; Pacific coast, 6; scattering, 17.

This would give a total of 150 players, so allowing that some of the districts may not send their full quotas, it looks as if the field will be fully 100.

The United States Golf association will permit contestants to accept railroad transportation to and from Washington and $5 for expenses without endangering their amateur standings.

CELTICS WIN SCOTCH TITLE.

GLASGOW, March 31.—The Celtic team today won the Scottish association football cup by beating Hibernians, 1 to 0.

IRISH LINKS KING TO LEAD 'ARCTIC' GOLF BUGS TODAY

Unofficially the local golf season, which promises to be the biggest in Chicago's links history, will open today. Most of the contracts of the professionals date from April 1, so, despite the existing frigidity, most of the experts will be at their clubs this week.

WILLIAM J. BELL.

A real exhibition is carded for 2 o'clock this afternoon at Westmoreland, where Capt. E. F. Carter, the Welsh and Irish champion, will play with A. J. Allen, a former Flossmoor member, against A. K. O. Cochrane of Lincoln park and J. J. Healy, a local professional.

There will be informal play on several other courses by "arctic" golfers.

Only Two Newcomers.

All clubs in the Chicago District Golf association, with the exception of the Chicago Heights Country club, have engaged their professionals. Although a number of changes have been made, the only newcomers to the Chicago district are Jack Patterson, who will be at Midlothian, and Don Morrison at North Shore.

William J. Bell, who comes to Edgewater from Sioux City, was formerly at Exmoor, who went to Aberdeen, Wash., last year, will be at Bob o' Link, while Forbes Leith, assistant to Gow at Edgewater last year, will be with Briergate. Eddie Garre, formerly at Windsor, succeeds Jim Carbery at La Grange, the latter going to Shore Acres.

Who's Who Among Pros.

Following is the list of professionals:

Aurora C. C.—Spencer Meister.
Beverly C. C.—Ralph Healy.
Briergate G. C.—Forbes Leith.
Bryn Mawr C. C.—Cliff Booth.
Bob o' Link C.C.—Earl Dean.
Butterfield C. C.—Bert Sturus.
Chicago G. C.—Alec Duncan.
Edgewater G. C.—William J. Bell.
Evanston G. C.—Laurie Ayton.
Exmoor C. C.—Stewart Gardner.
Edgewood G. C.—Matt Kelly.

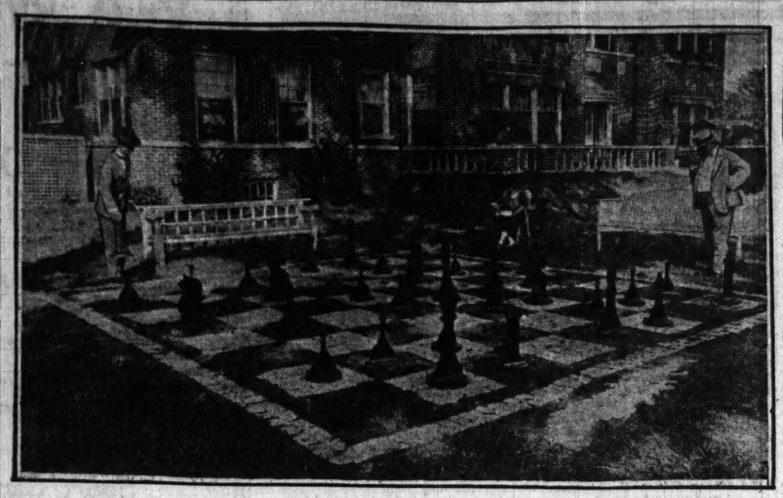
Glen Oak C. C.—Dave McIntosh.
Green Valley C. C.—R. Link.
Hinsdale G. C.—Dave Foulis.
Indian Hill C.—Joe MacNerran.
Idlewild C. C.—Al Naylor.
Lake Shore C. C.—Eddie Loos.
La Grange C. C.—3rd Garre.
Midlothian C. C.—Jack Patterson.
Northmoor C. C.—Arthur Fovargue.

GIANT CHESS BOARD



Huge chess board, sixteen feet square, laid out in the garden of the home of R. F. Goodlett at Tupelo, Miss. This board is practically a duplicate of the board which will be used on the floor of the Hamilton club gymnasium on which the moves of the Edward Lasker-Frank Marshall championship match, beginning tomorrow, will be recorded. The "men" used on the board are two feet high. The moves will be made as the masters play.

Local Golf

Cliff Booth severed his connection with the Henrici school and will report at Bryn Mawr today. Frank Walsh will remain at Henrici's until April 15.

Bryn Mawr club directors have adopted a plan to elect fifty more members at the regulation fee of $1,250, with a payment of $250 on application and $100 every three months until paid. The club, which is located at Devon and Crawford avenue, now has a membership of 250.

Manager Tom Walsh will pilot a party of members and friends to the Dixmoor course today, leaving over the Illinois Central at 1 o'clock. The club has engaged George Miller, formerly with the Union League club and Rector's, as manager.

Capt. Carter visited Glen View yesterday and shot a 78, using the regular tees and temporary greens.

North Shore G. C.—Don Morrison.
Onwentsia club—Willie Hunter.
Old Elm C.—Alec Piris.
Oak Park C. C.—James Lindsay.
Olympia Fields C. C.—Tom Kennett.
Park Ridge C. C.—Alfred Hackbarth.
Ridgemoor C. C.—Howard Davis.
Ridge C. C.—Alec Dickson.
Ravisloe C. C.—James Wilson.
Skokie C. C.—Phil Gaudin.
Shoreacres—James Carberry.
South Shore C. C.—James Herd.
Westmoreland C. C.—Joe Roseman.
Westward Ho G. C.—Frank Adams.

CHESS MASTERS OPEN PLAY HERE TOMORROW

Chicago chess fans will have their first opportunity to see national championship play when Frank J. Marshall of New York, United States titleholder, and Edward Lasker, Chicago challenger, resume their series for the title at the Hamilton club tomorrow night.

The series of eighteen matches was started in New York last month and three games were completed. Four matches will be played in Chicago and one match at Milwaukee will follow. The rest of the series of eighteen matches will be played in other cities throughout the country, St. Louis, Memphis, and New Orleans being three places on the circuit.

In the three matches in New York Lasker won two and one was drawn, leaving the score: Lasker, 2½, and Marshall, ½. Chicago fans are of the opinion that Marshall will have to extend himself to the utmost to defend his title, which he has held for fourteen years.

The matches at the Hamilton club will be played on a regulation board at the north end of the gymnasium.

Tickets for the Chicago series are on sale at the Hamilton club, Thomas E. Wilson company, and Von Lengerke & Antoine's. The tickets are $5 for the series of four matches and $2 for a single match.

MULLINS, BOSTON PRO, BEATS CHICAGO STAR AT SQUASH RACQUETS

BOSTON, Mass., March 31.—[Special.]—James Mullins, the Boston Tennis and Racquet club professional, formerly instructor at Tuxedo Park, N. Y., defeated Harry Boakes Jr. of the University club, Chicago, at squash racquets this afternoon on the Tennis and Racquet club court. Mullins won by a score of 15—7; 15—8; 15—8. Mullins was defeated by Boakes at Chicago three games to one a few days ago, but this afternoon he took full advantage of his familiarity with his home court and outplayed the visitor.

HAGEN VICTOR IN NORTH AND SOUTH DESPITE SLUMP

Pinehurst, N. C., March 31.—Slumping during the last round of the tournament today, Walter Hagen, British open golf champion, let his lead of seven strokes slither away to two, but today won the North and South open championship with 289 for the seventy-two holes of play.

On the eighteen holes of the morning, Hagen maintained his seven stroke advantage. In the afternoon, however, Cyril Walker of Englewood turned in a 69, and jumped from fourth to second place with a total score of 291.

Jim Barnes of Pelham, who took third place, wound up five strokes behind Walker. Jock Hutchison of Chicago, who had been closer to Hagen than any of the others, dropped to fourth place with 298.

Scores of the leaders with their totals for today were:

Walter Hagen, New York	151—289
Cyril Walker, Englewood	146—291
Jim Barnes, Pelham	148—296
Jock Hutchison, Evanston	153—298
Harold Calloway, Rome, N. Y.	149—299
Michael J. Brady, Detroit	152—300
Joe Kirkwood, Australia	152—301
Bobby Cruikshank, Shackamaxon	153—301
Alex Ross, Detroit	156—302
Marty O'Loughlin, Plainfield, N. J.	157—302

Emmet French, Youngstown; Bill Mehlhorn, Shreveport; Clarence Hackney, Atlantic City; Willie Hunter, New York, and several other widely known players trailed far to the rear with scores ranging from 302 to 328.

MAROON CHESS TEAM DEFEATS ILLINI IN MATCH

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

GAME IS THE DEFINITE OBJECTIVE OF EVERY DEAL.

It is true that opportunities for big penalties sometimes overshadow even the importance of winning a rubber, but such things do not often occur among good players.

While it is desirable to make as big a score as possible one is never warranted in making a play which might jeopardize the winning of the game. An excellent illustration of this point occurred in a deal in the last week.

West secured ten tricks.

The play of the deal consisted entirely of the refusal by north to trump the first three rounds of hearts. There was a grand slam in sight provided the adversaries' trumps were equally divided, but the hand was a freak, and had north trumped and consequently found that either adversary had five trumps he could only make two odd.

He therefore showed admirable restraint and by allowing the singleton spade to remain in dummy prevented a fourth lead of the heart suit, thus securing a well earned game. The fact that he was discarding winners on the first three rounds of hearts only adds to the merit of the play.

Failure to count causes more losses than any one thing in auction. It is inexcusable when the evidence is plain.

West secured ten tricks.

West should have allowed his partner to play clubs and east would have easily secured a small slam, but west had great confidence in his own ability and the results apparently justified him. North, of course, threw the game away at trick ten by failing to put up the queen of diamonds.

This play would have resulted in a loss for east and west on the deal. North, of course, thought he was going to take all the remaining tricks for the reason that there was no diamond in dummy and therefore his nine should hold the trick. The reasoning of north from the beginning of the deal should have been as follows:

At trick two when the declarer failed to follow suit in clubs, north should have marked three measley clubs remaining in his partner's hand.

As south never had an opportunity to discard at any stage of the game those clubs were still in the south hand when north played the nine of diamonds at trick ten.

Thirteen spades had been played up to that time, and there were no hearts remaining except those which north held in his own hand; therefore the one other card in the south hand must be a diamond, probably the jack or ten as the declarer would have been unlikely to lead the little diamond had he held both honors.

ENGLINSH POLOISTS WIN OUT.

Fayetteville, N. C., March 31.—The English international polo team defeated the Fort Bragg army officers' team today, 13 to 11, by staging a sensational rally with the game one-third played and the officers leading, 8 to 1.

FOREIGN STARS LOSE IN INDOOR NET TITLE PLAY

New York, March 31.—Elimination of four of the five foreign entrants and brilliant play by Vincent Richards today featured the opening of the national indoor singles tennis championship at Seventh regiment armory.

F. T. Hunter, the 1922 champion, and Richards each won two matches.

Other "seeded" stars came through successfully, although Percy L. Kynaston of Rockville Center, N. Y., was forced to a three set battle to defeat A. L. Bruneau of Brooklyn, 1—6, 8—6, 6—4. S. Howard Voshell, former champion, and Herbert L. Bowman, New York state champion, advanced to the third round.

Kei Okuno of Japan was the only survivor of the foreign contingent. Those eliminated were P. C. Hart of Montreal, Can., Augustus Stone of Roehampton, England; P. R. R. Murditch of India and Princeton university, and R. W. Garbutt of South Africa.

HOPPE IS SEEN AT TOP FORM AS HE BEATS PETERSON

Champion Willie Hoppe closed the greatest week of exhibition balk line he ever has shown in Chicago by defeating Charley Peterson of St. Louis, 250 to 67, in three innings at Mussey's room last night. His high run was 94.

Hoppe won the afternoon game, 250 to 43, in five innings, getting runs of 121 and 112. Through the series he scored 4,094 points and with a grand average of approximately 60 points. Experts who have seen him play here for years agree he never has shown better billiards. He had one run of 300 and two of 241.

Hoppe won the afternoon three cushion game, 30 to 12, in twenty innings, getting a high run of 10 in the fourth inning. He scored 24 points in eleven innings. He won the night game, 30 to 7.

Hoppe and Peterson will play at the Rainbow room, Roseland, on Tuesday.

Buick Authorized Service

A Valuable "Part" of Every Buick

Equally important with the universally admired performance ability of Buick cars is Buick Authorized Service.

The insurance that the nation-wide Buick Authorized Service system provides for every Buick owner increases the confidence that comes through testing Buick dependability in every kind of motoring.

Buick Authorized Service of the same uniformly high standard, no matter where it is found, has resulted in conviction on the part of automobile owners that Buick Authorized Service is in itself a valued part of the Buicks they purchase.

Two New Measures Proposed to Aid Wisconsin Roads

Hirst Says Highway Cost to Motorist Is Half Cent a Mile.

MADISON, Wis.—Wisconsin's 473,000 automobiles in 1924 will travel 1,900,000,000 miles, and their owners will spend $212,140,000 in operating and upkeep.

A. R. Hirst, state highway engineer, made this statement before the joint highways committee of the legislature Wednesday in urging that the tax burden of the automobile owners be boosted by about $6,000,000 a year.

Eighty-nine dollars on automobiles is spent per capita for every person in the state, he said.

"Development of the automobile is the most marvelous economic fact in history," Hirst said. "This state spends on motor vehicles—a development of the last fifty years—an amount equal to all state, local, and federal taxes, plus $50,000,000."

The spenders of this $212,000,000 a year, he said, now spend only 3.5 per cent of this amount, or $7,640,000, in paying taxes to maintain the highways for their vehicles.

"Putting it in another way, they pay only four-tenths of a cent a mile of travel," Hirst declared. He said the two bills drawn up by the committee, a weight tax bill to raise $8,000,000 annually and a 2 cent a gallon gasoline tax to raise $3,000,000 annually, would increase this expense to only seven-tenths of a cent a mile a motor vehicle.

He emphasized the growth of the motor vehicle industry by declaring that when he first came to Wisconsin, fifteen years ago, there were only 3,700 motor vehicles in the state. The rate of taxation per mile traveled, however, was ten times what it is today.

At the same time as the hearing the legislative leaders of the Wisconsin League of Municipalities and the Wisconsin Association of County Boards announced that a separate bill drawn up by them would be introduced in the senate by Senator John Polakowski, Milwaukee.

The Polakowski bill is aimed to replace both bills drawn up by the highways committee, which, it is claimed, do not give the localities enough money.

The bill provides three kinds of motor vehicle taxation—an automobile license tax based on weight, much lower than that proposed in the committee bills; a 2 cent a gallon gasoline tax, the same as the committee bill, and a 2 per cent tax on the value of the automobile.

The gasoline tax on an estimated annual state sale of 150,000,000 gallons will raise $3,000,000; the license tax paid to the secretary of state, to levy about 50 cents to the hundredweight for automobiles and $1 a hundred for trucks, will raise a total of $5,312,000, and the 2 per cent valuation tax will raise between $2,500,000 and $4,000,000, although no definite figures on the value tax are available.

The auto license taxes would run from $8 to $24.

Trucks under 1,900 pounds would pay the 50 cent a hundred license fee, while trucks over 1,900, which, the drafters of this bill say, cause most of the damage to the roads, would pay $1 a hundredweight.

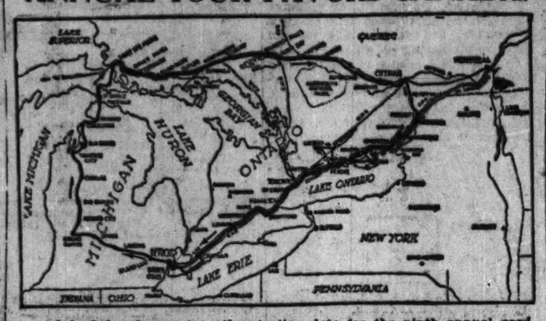
The state will pay the expenses of collecting this tax, and will return approximately $300,000 to the cities of more than 2,500 population, based on the amount of truck taxes turned in by each city.

The $4,445,000 paid for auto licenses would be divided 25 per cent, or about $1,380,000 to the counties, and the remaining 75 per cent to the state.

The state would get all of the $3,000,000 gasoline tax, but none of the money raised from the valuation tax, which would be divided, 70 per cent to the city and 30 per cent to the surrounding counties.

The bill will give the state approximately $8,000,0000 to carry out its program of extending the state trunk highway system from 7,500 miles to 10,000 miles, meet all federal aid available, and maintain the present system.

ANNUAL TOUR FAVORS CANADA.



July 8 has been set as the starting date for the ninth annual good roads tour of the Michigan Pikes association. The caravan, made up of Michigan enthusiasts under the direction of Capt. W. S. Gilbreath, president of the association, and W. D. Edenburn, tour manager, will leave Detroit on that date, follow the 1,700 mile route outlined, and finish in Detroit again July 23. It is expected that more than 200 highway fans will make the trip.

They Argue That—

A large proportion of automobiles in the United States are actual creators of wealth.

The automobile industry is going to continue to break records.

There can be no saturation point—there can only be a saturation ratio.

The limitations of the city are not and will not become serious limitations of ownership of cars.

Automobile prices have recently flowed in the opposite direction from the general price level.

ROCKY ROAD.

"The road to the police court," mused the motorist, "is paved with good pedestrians."—The Passing Show (London).

REMEMBER THIS TALE IF YOU CHANCE TO STICK IN INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—It was not so many years ago the farmer found that pulling an automobile out of the mud was a lucrative sideline. In fact, in some localities in Indiana it cost a motorist anywhere from $2 to $10 to get started on his way again after being mired.

Now the old order has changed. So, too, has the farmer's heart. Improved roads, both state and county, and new drainage systems have tended to make almost any part of Indiana accessible to the automobile driver.

Time was when the farmer looked rather belligerently upon the motorist. Few farmers ten years ago owned automobiles and looked upon them with scorn. And there were not a few of them who took great joy in being called upon to pull a machine out of the mud and then asking a fancy price for it.

It is seldom that a motorist gets stuck in Indiana now. When he does, however, he is most likely to find the farmer willing to drag him out of the mud, help him repair his machine if necessary, and not take a cent for doing it. The automobile apparently has done a lot toward bringing a real feeling of democracy between the farmer and the city man.

Expensive Spree.

For operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated in New York the penalty is a fine up to $500, imprisonment up to one year, or both. A car owner employing an intemperate driver may be fined $5 for each day of such employment.

Corn Belt Split in Battle Over Meridian Trail

Clinton in Arms Against Safety Plan of Officials.

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., March 31.—[Special.]—An acute controversy over the location of the Meridian highway through De Witt county, which climaxed in a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the state highway department to change the routing through the cities of Clinton and Wapella instead of skirting the edge of both, has developed another angle. Farmers who reside along the road selected by the state engineers have served notice that if the route is shifted they will institute suit for damages against all those responsible. The threat illustrates the growing appreciation, especially in the rural districts, of such boulevards and a greater realization of the loss should they be routed in another locality.

There has been an interminable controversy at Clinton over the question of route, one faction preferring that the bond issue road should go through the heart of the city and another favoring that passing to the west, as preferred by the state engineers. Finally a vote was taken and the majority favored the routing through the city. The writ of mandamus followed when it became evident that the highway department, due to engineering problems and elimination of dangerous railway crossings, insisted upon the west routing.

That the decisions of the state engineers are being made from the standpoint of general welfare rather than local preference was again illustrated this week when the authorities of Rock Island county reluctantly decided to abandon their fight to secure the state bond issue road over what is known as the scenic route, following the Mississippi river for many miles. The state engineers contend that this route, while picturesque, is menaced by high waters when the river is on a rampage and that there would be constant danger of undermining the concrete slabs. A route less attractive and farther east has been decided upon and will be constructed if the right of way is furnished. The county must supply a strip of land sixty feet in width and six miles in length.

Better License Light.

In the attempt to make auto license tags legible at night the bureau of standards of the department of commerce is conducting a series of tests to make possible the establishment of a practical standard of illumination, so that license tags may be readable at night as well as in day time at a reasonable distance.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

BY A. B. DAWSON.

MANUFACTURERS of automotive equipment are agreed that there is a real need for a better understanding among car owners and their caretakers of the reasons why certain motor troubles are more general during winter operation than in summer. These troubles are dilution and contamination of the oil in the crank case and water accumulation in the engine base.

Admixture of fuel with the lubricating oil in the crank case of the motor is an evil which will be encountered in all classes of cars regardless of make or model. It is always present in some degree, and must be tolerated. Careful observation for the detection of its first symptoms, together with a few simple precautions will, however, avert real trouble.

The underlying cause of dilution is traceable directly to the rather heavy motor fuel in use today, fuel containing ingredients which are slow burning and hard to ignite. The thinning of the motor oil is due to unburned fuel which has worked past the pistons into the crank case in the form of fuel vapor and which, in coming into contact with lubricating oil, is absorbed, thus reducing the body of the oil and impairing its lubricating qualities.

All motor oils are susceptible to dilution. With a given percent of fuel admixture, heavy grades of oil are reduced in body more rapidly than are lighter grades. Consequently, in a motor designed to handle a light or medium grade of oil the use of a heavy oil will not appreciably retard this tendency but, on the other hand, may lead to other more serious difficulties.

Other causes of dilution, more difficult of detection—namely: those due to mechanical defects—are as follows: Scores cylinders or bad fitting rings and pistons; poor ignition due to dead or fouled spark plugs, incorrect timing, weak electrical circuit. Incomplete combustion of the fuel is due to over-rich carburetor adjustment, flood of raw gasoline caused by "choker" or restricted air intake to carburetor, failure to provide a suitable radiator cover to allow the motor to run warm.

Avoid excessive use of the "choker." After starting give the engine time to warm up somewhat before driving. Use a radiator cover to allow the motor to warm up more rapidly and also to run at a higher operating temperature. Avoid idling for long periods or excessively slow driving. Keep the motor in good mechanical condition. The oil consumption will indicate whether or not it is.

If, in both low and high speed service the oil gauge indicates no apparent oil consumption, the rate of raw fuel dilution is reaching a dangerous stage and the only remedy is to have the pistons and piston rings refitted. If the cylinders are out of round, tapered, or scored, they must be reground. New rings or pistons alone are not sufficient unless the cylinders are true.

When excessive wear has once set in, the use of a heavier oil will not alleviate the condition. In fact, such practice temporarily acts as a narcotic, only to invite trouble of a different nature later on. It is not possible to replace metal that has worn away with a heavy bodied lubricant.

Last, but by no means least, drain the oil pan frequently, at least every 300 miles and replace with fresh oil of the correct grade.

Info. by Radio.

The condition of highways in Massachusetts and bordering states is broadcast by radio every Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock by the Automobile Legal association. This service gives motorists up-to-the-minute information on the condition of trunk line highways.

Open Glacier Trail.

With the opening of the 1923 automobile tourist season, the Glacier Trail association, through its varied activities, will play a big part among the transcontinental highways of America.

The trail is now marked from St. Louis through the Twin Cities to Glacier National park in Montana, and will maintain information bureaus in St. Louis, Mo.; Marshalltown, Ia.; St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn.

Fight Michigan Tax.

On a telegram sent to Gov. Alex J. Grosebeck last week the name of virtually every auto manufacturer in Michigan appeared, urging him to veto the 2 cent gasoline tax if passed by the senate. The proposed bill has passed the house. The governor's idea is to tax cars by weight only, or as a second choice make the tax only 1 cent a gallon.

Gov. Grosebeck, at a meeting called by the automobile manufacturers, reiterated his thought that a passenger car flat rate of 70 cents per 100 pounds would suffice to raise all the funds required to finance the state highway program, and would yield $12,500,000 in 1924. The present system of taxation netted the state $8,385,000 in 1922. The 2 cent levy would net about $13,000,000, a sum far greater than is required by the state highway program.

Worthy of Its Praise

If you have ever wished for a car with an engine that would grow quieter, smoother and more powerful at five and ten thousand miles than at five hundred; that would never need valve-grinding; that would gain and not lose compression through carbon—

You have wished (whether you realized it or not) for the new Willys-Knight. The Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine actually improves with use. Many owners report 50,000 miles of brilliant performance without an engine adjustment. And a Willys-Knight engine has never been known to wear out.

This extraordinary engine, and the striking streamline beauty of Willys-Knight body designs, have won country-wide endorsement. Sales are astonishing. Come and see the new models.

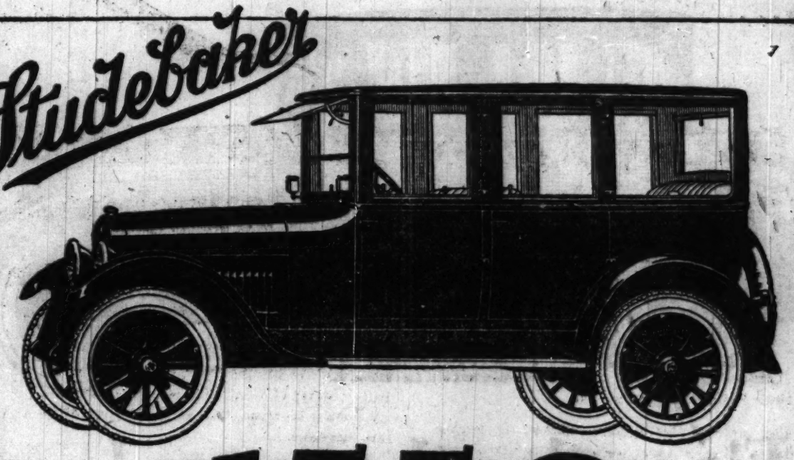
Studebaker



$1550

Good for Years of Service

The well built car and the poorly constructed car look very much alike on the salesroom floor. Paint and varnish can cover a multitude of weaknesses in closed car construction.

But you can't ride on the paint.

The superior product begins to prove itself on the first day of use and strengthens its proof every day thereafter. At the end of a year the one car is ready to be traded in at a big depreciation. The Studebaker may not even need a fresh coat of paint.

In a Studebaker Sedan the quality is built into the job. The body will not begin to rattle or squeak after thousands of miles of hard usage. It will continue to be comfortable and easy riding and will present a fine appearance month after month as when new.

The mohair velvet plush upholstery—which is all-wool instead of cotton as generally used—will not be worn "shiny," the windows will still fit tightly and operate smoothly and the fittings will still be firmly in place even after thousands of miles of use.

There are closed cars that do not include heaters. Yet, you cannot be comfortable unless you are warm. Every Studebaker Sedan is completely equipped including a heater.

Studebaker's quantity production of cars of quality is responsible for the low price of this Sedan.

Four wide-opening doors. Eight-day clock. Quick-action cowl ventilator. Attractive coach lamps. Heater. Mohair velvet plush upholstery. Glare-proof visor and windshield cleaner. Thief-proof transmission lock. Dome light.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

MOTORDOM

Huge Increase in Autos Registered Swells Road Fund

IN 1922 motor vehicle registrations more than maintained the rate of rapid increase which has caused the total registration to grow from 3,580,000 in 1916 to 12,238,375 motor cars and trucks at the end of 1922, according to the bureau of public roads. Last year the increase amounted to 1,775,889 registrations, as compared with an average yearly rate of approximately 1,390,000 for the preceding five years.

The table issued by the bureau gives registrations by states which total as follows for the whole United States:

Private passenger cars	10,890,112
Taxicabs, busses, and cars for hire	69,459
Motor trucks and commercial cars	1,278,804
Trailers	29,328
Motorcycles	182,714

A comparison of the truck registration figures with those for the preceding year shows an increase of 30 per cent, indicating that this phase of highway transport is undergoing rapid development. The increase in truck registration is not confined to industrial sections. Such agricultural states as Virginia, Indiana and Florida show increases of 32 per cent. 30 per cent and 29 per cent respectively, which seems to indicate that many farmers are changing their method of hauling as a result of road improvement.

The total gross registration revenue amounted to $152,047,822, of which $117,093,116 was applied to road work under the supervision of the state highway departments. Eighteen states taxed gasoline, deriving a revenue of $11,923,442, not all of the states reporting for a full twelve month period. Of this amount, $6,474,178 was spent under the supervision of the state highway departments.

Bearing Lore.

In case one of the ball bearings is lost provide a new one as soon as possible. If you have a supply of old ones that look to be about the same size measure them with a micrometer. A ball one or two-thousandths smaller can be used, but never one the least bit larger. As it stands up above the others, it will carry the load too long and so be in danger of breaking.

On the "Line."

It is shown by the annual report of F. M. Spencer, manager of the Texas State Automobile Theft bureau, that during the year 1922 more than twice as many automobiles were stolen in Dallas than in any other Texas city. This high record is explained by Mr. Spencer by the statement that Dallas is on the main route of organized bands of automobile thieves.

Arkansas Busy.

A compromise highway bill, the product of the labors of a joint committee from the state senate and house of representatives of Arkansas, was recently introduced in the lower body and early action upon it is expected. It provides for an honorary commission, with the state highway commissioner as chairman and four members to be appointed by the governor to serve without pay and to have no employes paid more than $4,000 a year. It would create a state highway fund and appropriate $1,500,000 for the year ending July 1, 1924, and $1,800,000 for the next year, and would levy a tax of 4 cents a gallon on gasoline, a tax on automobiles of 12 cents per horsepower, and 55 cents per 100 pounds gross weight, a tax on trucks ranging from $25 to $500, and on motorcycles, $10 flat. The minimum tax for automobiles would be $15. The state fund would get 35 per cent and the several counties the rest of the receipts. Later a compromise of three cents a gallon on gasoline is said to have been agreed upon.

ALL STANDARD.

More than 250 various parts of automobiles, including such parts as ball bearings, carbureter flanges, bolts, nuts, tires, rims, etc., have been standardized by the Society of Automotive Engineers.

At Your Service!

The Tribune has increased its free service to readers of Motordom and to the general public this season by establishment of a new free touring information department in The Tribune Public Service Bureau, 11 South Dearborn street. The new department, supervised by the touring information organization, which has dispensed up-to-the-minute touring and highway data for the last decade, is in charge of Miss Nina Baker, a recognized authority on national road conditions.

Call at the new bureau and ask her help in planning your 1923 trips. Maps and information are free. If a personal call is inconvenient, write to Motordom, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, and inclose a 2 cent stamp or stamped envelope for maps and information. The new department will be open for service Monday morning, April 2.

58-Day Run of 26,165 Miles Without a Stop Proves Hupmobile Staunchness and Reliability

High Opinion of Hupmobile Stamina and Durability Justified by Its Splendid Condition after Gruelling Test

Perhaps no motor car ever before was given such a reliability test as this.

Day and night for 58 days, without the engine being stopped once, and without the official seals on its hood being broken, a stock Hupmobile was driven 26,165 miles by drivers working in three shifts about Salt Lake City and over a maze of Inter-Mountain highways in Utah, Idaho and Wyoming.

The starter was removed before the run began. Oil was taken on through a special tube in the side of the sealed hood. This intake for oil, as well as the intakes for gas and water, were all securely sealed, and were broken and re-sealed only under official inspection.

The route of the car, for the most part, was over a maze of mountain highways. Part of the course led the car into the precipitous mountain canyons of Heber, Provo, and Parleys, in the Wasatch range.

The "high spots" of the test included trips into many of the steepest canyons of the west, including Brighton, at the head of Big Cottonwood and American Fork Canyon, generally conceded to be the steepest incline in the west. During the last 14 miles of this trip cars are forced to climb from a 4400 to an 8700-foot elevation.

The engine was brought to a stop only after the fan belt had broken, at 26,165 miles. The car then completed its 60th day with a mileage of 27,096

It was immediately torn down and inspected under direction of Prof. A. LeRoy Taylor of the Automotive Department of the University of Utah. He reported that the engine—with 33,000 miles to its credit—showed only slight wear, that the life of this stock Hupmobile had only just commenced.

Prof. Taylor's detailed report contained the following significant statements:—The amount of carbon deposited on the pistons and cylinder block was surprisingly small. The pistons showed, by micrometer caliper measurements, the maximum 'out of round' of .0005 (five ten thousandth) inch. The second and third rings showed practically no wear. The first rings on three of the cylinders had worn .002 (two thousandth) inch. The crankshaft bearings were in excellent condition and showed practically a perfect fit.

The qualities revealed by the car in this test—its economy records—the way it stood up in continuous service such as not one motor car in ten thousand is asked to give—these things are not remarkable or unusual for the Hupmobile.

They are the daily portion of every Hupmobile owner. He counts upon them confidently. They are his interpretation of reliability.

The Reliability Record

Days without Engine Stop	58
Total non-stop mileage	26,165
Average Miles Per Day	449
Gas—ave. miles per gal.	21.5
Oil—ave. miles per gal.	1,218

Replacement

At 22,106 mi.—Brake lining
At 24,955 mi.—Head lamp tie rod
At 26,165 mi.—Fan Belt

The first engine stop was necessitated by the breaking of the fan belt. The run was then continued two days, the total mileage at the end of 60 days being 27,096, on which the daily average is computed.

DORT SIX

Recent performance records clearly illustrate the supremacy of the Dort Six. In an economy test at St. Joseph, Mo., the Dort Six averaged 26 miles per gallon of gasoline. In a get-away test at Oklahoma City it picked up to 25 miles per hour in 4¾ seconds from a standing start. A Dort Six went from Flint to Minneapolis—934 miles—without replenishing oil or water. Another made the famous Uniontown Hill on high. Still another climbed the Palisades at Dykeman's Ferry on high. Usually records in other places mean little to Chicagoans, but we will gladly match these records in a demonstration any time to show what a really remarkable motor the Dort has.

Liquid Rubber Now Imported for Auto Tires

THE word "latex" is likely soon to take its place among the well known words of the English language. It is the correct name for the liquid form in which rubber comes from the rubber tree.

Rubber is now being transported to this country from the East Indies in the form of latex instead of in the blocks and sheets known to the rubber business since the beginning of its history. Tank cars for latex will soon be a familiar sight on the railroads.

Latex is a white liquid. Wherever a bark of the rubber tree is cut the fluid runs forth, possibly a plan of nature's to heal the wound in the same manner as blood comes from a cut on our bodies. This juice is not the sap of the tree. Sap flows through the wood, but latex is contained in an inner bark, a thin layer directly beneath the outer bark.

As is commonly known, most of the rubber of the world today comes from vast plantations in the far east. Close to $500,000,000 has been invested in these plantations, the largest single plantation being that owned by the United States Rubber company.

Egypt Progresses.

Motor transportation in Egypt, particularly with regard to taxicabs and commercial vehicles, received a considerable impetus during 1922. In Alexandria there are over 1,000 passenger cars, 234 being taxis and 120 trucks; in Cairo there are about 2,200 passenger cars and 110 motor trucks. Motorcycles in these two cities number about 350 and 900, respectively.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question John P. Blaeser, 2512 West 69th street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Does the loop traffic squad favor the one way street system?

Where Asked.

First District police station.

The Answers.

Lieut. G. H. Weideling, 152 West Illinois street—In an emergency the one way traffic system is fine, probably the best. But I don't approve of it as a regular system. There are many thousands of out of town vehicles in the city every day, and we would have an awful time handling them. The biggest nuisance in the loop is the street cars—they make too many turns getting in and out of the loop.

Officer Charles Peterson, 1018 North Trumbull avenue—No, pedestrians would have even less safety than they do now. People get half way across the street at present and the whistle blows. That's the signal for the race to start. Every motorist tries to beat the other fellow—just like a race course with every body competing. But where's the unlucky pedestrian?—He's in the middle of the street.

Officer Tom Murphy, 939 West 76th street—I hardly know. There are advantages on both sides. The traffic is fairly evenly distributed on the various streets in Chicago—one street is about as busy as the other. But there should be a rule or law or something whereby the pedestrian has to obey the whistle the same as the motorist. They ought to obey the whistle willingly, and it would be a great help if they did so.

Officer J. C. Gilbert, 1737 North Meade avenue—I am in favor of the one way traffic system, and believe it would relieve congestion in the loop considerably. And stop left hand turns in the loop; make them all right hand turns. If must make left hand turns, then they should come to the center of the street as they are supposed to do, and not try to cut off the other fellow, who is trying to make a turn. The street cars; make them all right hand turns. The pedestrians should stop "jay walking"—that would help.

Officer Joseph Bender, 5623 South Wood street—Yes, I believe most of the traffic squad does. It would stop a lot of the congestion we are now having. It would be a good system to cut out left hand turns, and turning in the center of the block. Street cars should not make left hand turns in the loop. Pedestrians should wait for the whistle the same as moving vehicles do.

Backfire Secrets.

Several conditions that cause backfiring through the carburetor may be remedied easily. When the coil is weak there will be such a backfire. The only remedy for this is a new coil. With a fuel mixture too lean there will be a backfire whenever there is an extra load on the motor.

If there is a backfire through the carburetor when the motor is cold or when the driver first starts the motor, this is no cause for worry, as that is as it should be. One should not drive with too rich a mixture.

Leaky inlet valves also will cause the annoying backfiring through the carburetor.

In driving through sandy soil fine particles of sand are drawn into the carburetor intake. That will cause repeated backfiring. The way to remedy this is to open the drain cock at the bottom of the carburetor and at the same time shake the needle valve of the carburetor gently. That will dislodge any small particles of sand or grit that may have settled under the valve. The gas running out through the main cock will wash away those particles. Close the drain cock and see if the backfiring has discontinued. If not check all wires, battery and coil.

"Look and Live."

Following closely after another car when crossing a railroad track is bad policy. The driver of the car ahead may not take the simple precaution of looking to see whether the coast is clear. He may get over just in time. Thus the man who follows directly behind him may be a moment too late, and if he does happen to know how to shift into second quickly and speed up he will find the road ahead blocked by the other car.

EFFECT SAVING.

Engineers estimate that 15 per cent is saved yearly through the use of standardized parts and materials which can in no way be considered as limiting individual design.

Will your car match these Oakland upkeep figures?

Accurate records kept by Oakland in Cleveland showed an average upkeep cost on Oakland Six-44's of $8.06 per year

If you would know the quality of a motor car—look to its 'upkeep' costs! It is the money spent in addition to the purchase price that determines the actual value of a car!

In Cleveland last year—based on accurate records—it cost an average of only $8.06 per year for upkeep expense on Six-44's! Other cities report similarly low averages!

Another excellent indication of quality is found in a motor car's resale value. Try to buy a used "Six-44"—and you'll be surprised at the high price it commands.

These definite and actual evidences of the superior quality of the Oakland car explain—in large measure—why Oakland is enabled to offer its remarkable "Mileage-Basis" Plan!

Before you buy a car this spring—investigate the Oakland carefully. You will find it unusually beautiful, extremely comfortable, powerful, dependable and genuinely economical—and you'll know the minimum number of trouble-free miles you can expect it to give you!

The "Mileage-Basis" Plan

Main Bearings—40,000 miles or more without attention.
Valves—15,000 miles or more without need of grinding.
Connecting Rods—40,000 miles or more without attention.
Cylinders, Pistons, Rings—Guaranteed in writing 15,000 miles.
Gas Mileage—20 to 25 miles per gallon.
Tires—15,000 to 25,000 miles per set.
Transmission, axles, and major parts—Life of the car.

Irish Car Market Struck by Latest Import Tax Duty

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 31. — [Tribune Radio.] — British automobile manufacturers are much alarmed at an announcement that after today British cars imported by the Irish Free State will pay 33⅓ per cent duty, the same as foreign cars. If the tax is persisted in it will eliminate British cars from the Irish trade.

At this moment this is not serious, as no one thinks of buying cars in Ireland now, in view of the fact that they are likely to be seized by rebels, but Irish trade in normal times is well worth fighting for. If British cars have to pay the same tax as American cars it means that the trade will become monopolized by America, for even now the cheaper grades of American cars are able to compete on even terms with British cars in Great Britain and Ireland in spite of the duty.

A curious side of the issue is the position of the Ford factory at Cork. Ford is now making most engines and many parts of cars in Cork, which are sent to Manchester for assembling for European trade. They will become automatically liable to a 33⅓ per cent duty on their entry to Great Britain, which will impose a severe handicap on their competition with cheap British cars and French cars, like the Citroen, which is becoming increasingly popular in the British market.

It is unlikely that the tax will be continued. It is an automatic result of the separation of British and Irish customs under the treaty, and the whole Irish fiscal policy is open to consideration by the free state parliament. It is believed that special cases like this will be dealt with promptly, leaving the wider question of the general policy to be dealt with later.

The public sentiment of both countries favor absolute free trade. Any discrimination by the Irish against British manufacturers would expose Ireland to British retaliation on her agricultural produce, whisky and stout, which would be far more harmful to Ireland than anything Ireland could do to the British trade. The Irish realize that Ireland's only market for agricultural produce is England, and America's prohibition has cut off any chance of repairing the loss of the English trade in liquor in that direction.

Inventor Claims Power Advantages in New Engine

WELCH, Va., March 31.—[Special.]—A revolution in gasoline motor engine construction is promised through the completion by S. B. Collier, of a new internal combustion engine.

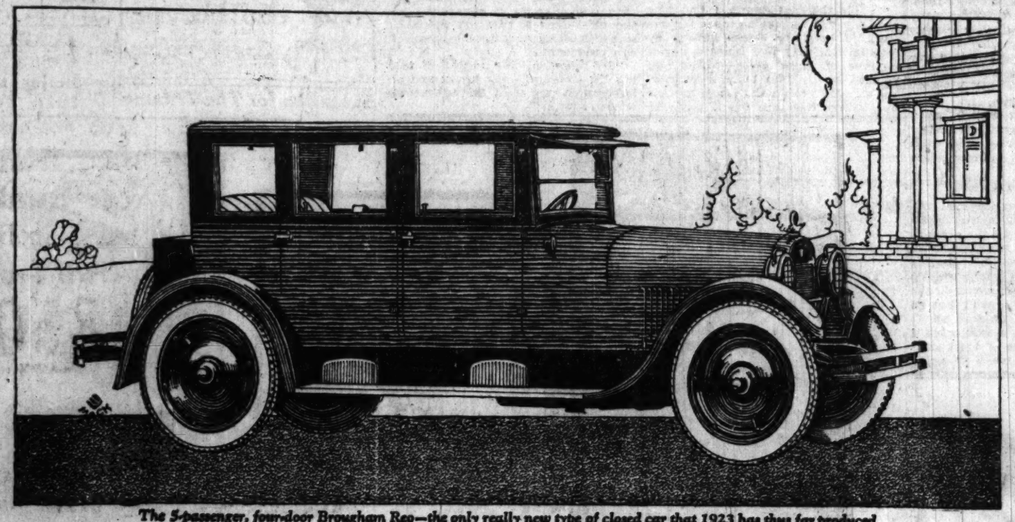
Collier and other engine experts who have been studying his invention, assert his new motor will attain an efficiency of approximately 65 per cent, as compared with from 15 to 20 per cent attained by motors now in use. The inventor is said to hace solved the problem of applying the power of a motor, not to the piston, but to the run of the wheel. He has thus brought about increased leverage which is reflected in efficiency.

Collier says his motor, which is the result of seven years of experimenting, will reduce displacement and fuel consumption to a great extent. It will enable an automobile to travel from fifty-five to sixty miles on a gallon of gasoline.

The motor, however, is not strictly a gasoline engine. It may be operated with steam, oil or compressed air, and by reason of its high efficiency a motor weighing 125 pounds will be large enough for any automobile. The new motor has one spark plug, no pistons, no crankshaft, no gears. It contains only 117 parts, while a Ford motor, 352. Due to its simplicity, Collier is of the opinion it may be sold at from $50 to $75, when made in quantity.

"But the greatest improvement of the period was the introduction of the Brougham" Encyclo. Brit. vol. 5, page 403

THE FIRST BROUGHAM REO



The 5-passenger, four-door Brougham Reo—the only really new type of closed car that 1923 has thus far produced

Close-coupled to provide the new luxury of central seating—commodious—and with four wide doors

History was repeating itself when twos and threes and groups dropped out of the Coliseum crowds to admire the first Brougham Reo.

Nearly a hundred years ago in London, similar people for similar reasons stopped to marvel at Lord Brougham's delightful carriage.

He had achieved a revolution in carriage design by changing the location of the seats to provide a comfort before unknown; and in so doing he had made his carriage unusually roomy and unusually handsome.

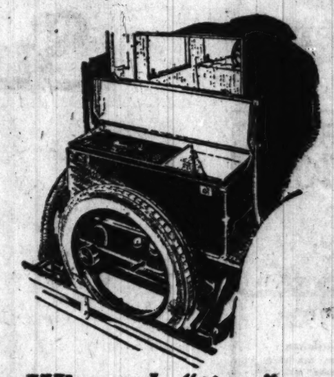
The first Brougham Reo won its triumph of interest and purchase at the Coliseum because it successfully utilized the principles of Lord Brougham—providing unusual roominess, unusual comfort, and unusual smartness.

To move the seats centerwards the body is close-coupled, thus making the rear seat more comfortable, just as the central berths of a Pullman are more comfortable than those at the end.

In addition, the Reo design makes both seats exceptionally wide. Even the front one can accommodate three. Ample leg-room is made possible by the Reo dual control, which eliminates the brake lever by controlling the service brake with the clutch pedal.

So commodious is the entire interior that four wide doors make entrance and exit as easy as in the longest of Sedans—and without the use of a single hinged or folding seat.

To the motoring family the result of this seemingly simple but actually revolutionary achievement—the only really new type of car that 1923 has thus far produced—is that the occupants of the back seat ride as steadily, easily, and smoothly as those in front—and that entrance and exit are made as convenient as they can possibly be.



Where the "tiger" sat

Where in the time of Lord Brougham a century ago, a "useful trim servant, known as a tiger" had his seat, the Brougham Reo has a capacious trunk, bound in nickeled brass, and containing a large suit case. The character and quality of this trim and useful luggage is typical of the completeness and excellence of the Brougham Reo's entire equipment.

Among the conveniences are: an electric clock, an electric cigar lighter, a tonneau heater, dome and corner lights, a trouble light socket, a stop signal light operated automatically by the service brake pedal, an automatic windshield cleaner operated by vacuum from the engine, an adjustable sun and storm shade of fabric-covered steel, two three-bar bumpers of heavy spring steel, nickel-finished, and dimming lenses accepted by all the states.

Because these and many other things are built in, they are provided at manufacturer's prices so that in little things—as well as in the famous fundamentals of Reo value—every one of the purchaser's dollars is enabled to do its very best.

FARM AND GARDEN

Railroad Vision Turns South from One Crop System

By Frank Ridgway.

PEERING through the window of a Dixie train from Chicago, looking across the broad fields of cotton, a railroad representative kept turning over in his mind a sentence he had just read—"A people without a vision die."

"Vision," he repeated, "is what these planters need to get away from their one crop system of farming.

"Cotton, cotton, cotton," he said over and over to himself as the train puffed on across the sunny south and thousands of acres of fleecy covered fields slid by. "These farmers need more and better cows, hogs, and hens so they will be sure of enough food to carry them over to the next season if their cotton crop fails."

Eight Years Ago and Now.

Scheme after scheme presented itself as he tried to plan something to diversify farming along the southern system of the railroad, and make farmers more prosperous. Before he had reached the end of the line, cotton fields in his imagination became green pastures dotted with contented cows.

That was eight years ago. Today, as a result of that man's vision, thousands of cattle are grazing in fields along the tracks in many of the communities where cotton once grew. The movement is rapidly spreading. Diversified farming, based on dairying and other live stock systems, is taking the place of the exclusive cotton crop.

Bulls Given in Prizes.

A train was loaded with ninety-nine bulls, which were bought by the railroad company within a few days after the representative had returned from his trip through the south. Half of the bulls were of the beef type and the other half of the dairy breed. Twenty-five of them were turned over to farmers in southern Illinois, and the others were sent south.

Bulls of the beef breed were given as prizes to farm boys and girls, members of the baby beef club organized in Mississippi under the direct supervision of the federal department of agriculture. The dairy bulls were given as prizes to members of dairy clubs, some of which were organized by the railroad's development bureau in Tennessee and Mississippi.

When this movement began only one creamery was to be found along the line in the south, and the total amount of the cream checks that were returned to farmers was only $6,000 a year. Fifteen creameries are now established along the road, and last year the cream checks totalled $1,483,947.21.

Improving the Strain.

Some of the original ninety-nine are still in use, and at the head of herds. They have been crossed year after year with southern grade cows, and their offspring have proved to be much superior to their dams. In this way farmers have been able to increase the quantity and richness of the milk.

In every instance in Illinois, Tennessee, and Mississippi these animals are being replaced as soon as they reach the end of their usefulness. The dairy cow now has a permanent home in these communities where dairying was unknown a few years ago.

The addition of more than $1,000,000 distributed among these communities every year has been so far reaching in its influence that thousands of business men and planters are joining the movement, which is still being fostered by the railroad. Twenty more pure bred Jersey bulls have recently been distributed among farmers by the railroad company. All of them are from registered dams and grand dams that can be traced back for more than fifty years, coming from the Financial Interest family of dairy cows.

Loaned Free of Charge.

The railroad company has changed its system of distributing the animals. Instead of giving them away as prizes, it retains the ownership and loans them free of charge. All that farmers are asked to do is to feed and care for the bulls. Dairymen with six or more cows are given the benefit of a pure bred sire in building up their herds.

This is done in communities where bankers and other business men agree to assist farmers in buying good cattle by loaning dairymen money at a low rate of interest and permitting them to liquidate the notes by monthly payments from cream or milk receipts.

Evidence of the way business men regard the movement was shown a few days ago when commercial club members at Senatobia, Miss., agreed to finance the buying of fifty heifers and cows to be scattered among farmers in that section of the state. This action followed the demonstration and lectures given in connection with the Pure Bred Jersey Sire Special, carrying the twenty bulls which stopped at Senatobia. Demonstrations were given at thirty-nine other towns along the line where the special carrying the bulls stopped.

Care to Prevent Inbreeding.

From one to three bulls are placed in each community and several hundred cows will be served each season by the twenty sires. To provide for line breeding and to prevent inbreeding, the bulls will be shifted from one herd to another every third year. They have been selected with reference to breeding, so that female offspring may be crossed with any of the other nineteen bulls without inbreeding.

"How can a railroad company afford to spend money in buying cattle to give or loan to farmers? That is a frequent question put to me when I tell what we are doing for planters along our southern systems," says H. J. Schwietert, general development agent for the railway company that has this vision.

Bound by Selfishness.

"The vision of most men is bound by selfishness on every side. They ask 'What am I to get out of this action, or is someone to get more immediate returns than I myself? Men like that are bound to be near sighted. They can see the nickles, dimes, and dollars within easy grasp, but fail to see the hundreds of thousands, yes, millions perhaps that may be had beyond the bounds of their sight. We need today men who have a community as well as personal interest at heart. We cannot help ourselves without helping others. Progress based on selfishness never was permanent.

New Wealth Affects All.

"This idea is back of our movement to improve live stock and farming systems and methods in sections reached by our railroad. Of course, it has an element of selfishness—it isn't solely a philanthropic movement. But the farmer is the first to prosper by being given a chance to raise better cows, hens, hogs, and live stock of all kinds. We are aiding him to build up his herds and flocks and soils to greater productive capacity. This increases his buying power—he is then able to buy more shoes, gloves, implements, groceries, and other articles from business men in local towns. Bankers' loans to farmers are also made safer.

"This new wealth affects every one for miles around. Even business men in cities like Chicago are becoming interested in movements of this kind because the towns around these communities furnish a big outlet for goods made and shipped out of big manufacturing centers. The railroad naturally comes in as the carrier of the products and will consequently share in this permanent prosperity."

WHEN THE JERSEY BULL SPECIAL CAME TO TOWN—Planters for more than twenty miles around came in to meet the pure bred Jersey sire special at Brookhaven, Miss., the other day. The planters are shown here on the station platform listening to Hugh G. Van Pelt, national dairy authority, lecture on how to select good dairy sires. In his demonstration Mr. Van Pelt is using Financial Adelaide King, second bull on the right, one of the twenty Jersey sires recently distributed among cotton farmers of the south. The bulls are all owned by a railroad that runs from Chicago through several southern states, and they are loaned without charge to Dixie plantation operators.

GARDEN NOTES

Back lotters have trouble every summer with chiggers, especially when they are mowing their lawns, working in the garden, picknicking, or golfing. A good scheme is to fill a talcum powder can with flowers of sulphur and keep it where the sulphur can be peppered around the shot tops and bottoms of trousers to keep these tiny red pests away. After they once "dig in," paint the inflamed spot with tincture of iodine.

If you haven't room for cucumbers in the regular garden, make a few hills along the border of the plot and train the vines to run over the fence. Cucumbers are also successfully grown by planting them in hills in the main part of the garden and training on trellises to conserve space. Heavy watering is necessary where this method is followed, for with the vines kept up off the ground the soil soon dries out.

Under New Management.

Tomorrow morning Fred Blizzard of New York, former general manager of the Borden company, will take over the management of the Chicago Milk Producers' Coöperative Marketing company. The new general manager will have executive charge of business affairs. This concern, according to its January report, handled more than 10,000,000 pounds of milk through two pools—6,043,773 pounds in fluid and 5,418,592 pounds in manufactured milk.

Dairy Marketing Changes.

Coöperative dairy marketing association representatives from all parts of the United States will attend the ratification conference to be held here on April 9 for the purpose of considering the plans of a national coöperative sales agency drafted by the committee of nine. The meeting will be held at the Hotel Sherman.

Cattle Feeders Day in Iowa.

Cattle feeders from all parts of Iowa and many from the cattle raising and feeding sections of adjoining states will attend Cattle Feeders' day, which is to be held at Ames, Ia., on April 25. In addition to reports of cattle feeding experiments conducted by H. H. Kildee at the state college, there will be practical and scientific discussions by farmers, scientists, feeders, buyers, and packers.

Modern Methods of Feeding Baby Chicks Explained

PSYCHOLOGY plays a fairly important part in the modern, scientific method of feeding baby chicks. Teaching the chicks while they are young that there are certain kinds of feeds they will be expected to eat when they grow older, and putting them through a routine they will follow later are practices of many poultrymen, just as dietarians train infants certain habits of eating and sleeping when they are but a few days old.

A successful midwest poultry keeper, who is manager of a big plant that produces thousands of baby chicks each year, says it pays to familiarize young chicks with the feed they are to have later.

"On the second day after I start to feed my chicks, I scatter on a newspaper every kind of feed they are to receive during the next week," he said. "I do the same thing at the beginning of the second waak."

Warm and Foodless.

Like other good raisers, he keeps the chicks in a warm brooder without feed for the first seventy-two hours. The first day chick feed is given three times, and scattered so it will attract attention.

"I use a newspaper to scatter the feed, to keep it out of the litter. It can be folded up and removed quickly, making cleaning easy," explains this man. "Sour milk is kept before them all the time after the third day, and water is not offered until they are two weeks old.

"Just for effect, on the second day I scatter before them a mixture of mica, bone meal, charcoal, starting mash, a few rolled oats, and flaky bran. I never feed wet or moist mash or cooked eggs in any form. After the second day the chicks know what feeds are in the pantry, and feeding becomes easier."

Keeping Peepers Active.

Chick grain is fed morning and evening, and a mash mixture is given three times a day up to the seventh day. Newspapers can be replaced with 12x18 inch bread pans for feeding mash. To keep the little peepers active, chick grain is scattered on the floor in a layer of clean sand, but no more than the chicks will clean up.

"At the end of the second week I throw several handfuls of 'hen size' cracked corn in the mash in order that they will become acquainted with larger grain, so that later, at the age of two months, they will recognize and eat this feed," adds the practical feeder. "Otherwise, they will refuse the larger grains and, consequently, their digestive organs will not properly develop."

Keeps Them Hungry.

If leg weakness is noticed in his broods, he adds to the mash 1 per cent by weight of precipitated calcium phosphate. The chicks are supplied with green feed until they can be put on the range.

"After the first month I find it a good thing to remove all mash for one week. I keep the chicks hungry by feeding sparingly five times a day a mixture of chick grain—wheat and cracked corn. This induces activity, and as they are on the range at that time where they are fed it tends to eliminate coccidiosis, a common poultry disease.

"If my chicks refuse to leave the brooders, I drive them out and keep them there until they take to the range by choice. Between the fifth and sixth weeks I feed the original mash in outdoor hoppers for three or four hours a day at first, gradually increasing the length of time and introducing a growing mash.

Sign to Remove the Mash.

"At the beginning of the sixth week chick grain and wheat are withheld, using instead sifted cracked corn—all they will eat night and morning.

"When the birds are about four months old I introduce a laying mash mixture with the growing mash, which may become all laying mash at four and a half months. I use this feed until the combs of the pullets show the first distinct coloration, but before the comb has increased its size. This is the sign to remove the mash entirely, as the pullets have now received all the frame growth and should be allowed to increase in weight. To retard early laying and prevent fall moulting, they are fed only cracked corn and given all they will eat. This takes the pullets up to the time they are removed from the range to the laying quarters and the end of the twenty-fifth week.

Delays Egg Production.

"I keep leghorns, and it is a fact that birds of this breed will lay when they are 4½ to 5 months old, but it is my experience that it so saps their strength that they cannot go through the winter months with high egg production. When my layers go into the laying houses, they are hungry for the laying mash so long withheld, and they will take to it ravenously, although I feed it to them gradually, rather delaying than forcing them into egg production.

"By following this method of feeding I get exceptionally heavy and uninterrupted egg yield throughout the winter months."

Dairymen's Jottings

A ninety day trial at the Iowa experiment station, comparing alfalfa hay with timothy hay, shows the former is much more palatable.

"The alfalfa was not only more palatable but 22 per cent more valuable than timothy hay," the investigators say in their report of the tests. "This figure entirely justifies the practice of feeding alfalfa hay to dairy cows and it, together with the much greater yields of alfalfa than of timothy that can be obtained from a given area, proves the desirability of growing alfalfa."

The gross value of dairy products in the United States in 1922, at farm prices, was $2,090,455,000, according to federal government reports. In 1921 the value of dairy products in this country was $2,352,000,000, and the year before, 1920, the top year, $3,015,000,000.

Highway Refund Payments Reveal Favored Counties

BY J. L. JENKINS.

SEVEN Illinois counties, and seven only, bask in the full favor of Gov. Len Small's highway administration, according to the latest report on the amount of state money refunded to counties for state aid road construction already completed.

Each of the seven counties shown to have received their full share appropriated in house bill No. 766 for the completed roads built jointly by state and county, political experts point out, are preadministration territories. Some of them hold political leaders closely identified with administration policies. Some have figured prominently in political engagements of the Small régime. The list is already forming a basis for protest on the part of county boards whose refund, although appropriated, has not yet been released to them.

Two refund appropriation bills were passed by the fifty-second general assembly. The first, No. 766, to take care of state indebtedness on roads already built; the second, No. 867, to care for refunds on state aid roads then under contract and building. Both appropriations were made July 1, 1921. Only one county in the state, Kankakee, the governor's home, had received its full amount of $76,120.83 from both refunds by Feb. 1 of this year, the report shows.

The seven lucky counties under the "completed roads" refund head included Lake, where the Small trial was staged; Du Page and Kane, known as Senator Barr's political district, and Senator Kessinger's territory; Kankakee, Gov. Small's home county; St. Clair, home of State Treasurer Miller and Clarence Spivey; Winnebago, home of Fred Sterling, and Bond county.

Lake county leads the list with $351,681.43 refunded from both appropriations and but $180,961.15 due for either roads completed or under contract. Cook county, which was voted $1,180,610.85 in the two bills, has received but $361,489.85, the report shows.

The "completed road" appropriation totaled $3,889,282.23, and the second appropriation $2,869,289.87. In some cases technical questions of road construction are delaying state approval of the state aid highways built under the joint arrangement. Generally this work is said to be so hedged about by conditions imposed by the state administration that the standard is set by the time contracts for the work are let. The refund system as it now exists is said to offer another powerful lever to the political party in power. All counties need the state money to meet their construction pay rolls, to pay off county bond issues, voted in order to rush construction work; to hard surface other needed highways, and to generally carry road expenses.

Following is the report on the distribution of the appropriation for roads already completed to Feb. 1, 1923:

BOOMING HIS BUSINESS.

Companions of Barleycorn in Dayton, O., have joined with nervous traffic officers in condemning the principle of this two-way flivver. It is the novel conveyance used by a Dayton undertaker in working off his humorous complex, and its reaction on convivial spirits late at night is said to be startling. It travels in either direction without a reverse.

Speedway Heads Plan to Smooth U. S. Race System

UNQUALIFIED indorsement of the newly organized National Board of Speedway Managers was given yesterday by William Schimpf, chairman of the contest board of the American Automobile association, when the plans of the new organization were formally presented to him by A. M. Young, chairman of the new body.

"Although the new organization is an important one, it must not be confused in any way with the contest board of the A. A. A., which is the real governing body of automobile racing and has complete control," said Young in an interview.

"The board of speedway managers is really a wheel within a wheel. It is formed of the managers of the speedway associations throughout the country and every speedway manager is eligible to membership. It will attempt to iron out any differences that might arise between various speedway organizations; will try to arrange dates for races harmoniously and for the best interest of all concerned, special efforts being made to work out a speedway circuit, whereby drivers and race officials would not be subject to long cross-country jumps for one race and then back to the starting point again for the next event, both climatic conditions and geographic location being taken into consideration. Nothing done by this body can be final until approved by the contest board of the A. A. A., which of course controls all matters pertaining to racing affairs. However, we believe that we can do much to smooth out all friction and bring about a condition which will win the increased favorable comment of drivers, public and speedway officials.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

MOTORDOM'S silver anniversary—the twenty-fifth year following the delivery of the first American built car to a purchaser—will be featured tomorrow by the opening in the Allison-Rood company's showrooms, 2518 Michigan avenue, of an educational exhibit covering in detail the progress of the huge transportation industry. The exhibit includes the first experimental Winton car ever built, dating back to 1896; the first Winton delivered in 1898, the first eight cylinder car, and the first American car of the four horizontal cylinder type. The value of the exhibit is estimated to be $150,000.

Public appreciation of the new Cole merchandising plan, announced during the Chicago show, resulted in an increase of 30 per cent in Cole's March production over the month a year ago, Eugene Silver, president of the Chicago Cole company, reported yesterday that, despite this huge production increase, the factory is running fully a month behind in its orders. Cole decided last winter to eliminate the used car business among distributors and gave the public the benefit of this saving in lowering the purchase price of new cars.

A train load of Maxwell cars which reached Chicago last week were all delivered to new owners upon arrival, according to officials of the Maxwell-Chalmers Sales company.

Walter C. Davis, general sales manager of the George W. Davis Motor Car company, announced yesterday that factory shipments in January were 500 per cent greater than those in the same month last year and February shipments were 390 per cent greater.

Rolls-Royce of Chicago is moving this week to new and finer quarters at 2512 Michigan avenue. The entire organization of both new and exchange cars will hereafter be housed under the same roof.

Make "Low Price" Buy Something Worth While

Have you got the idea a low price means you must sacrifice on service and luxury in a closed car? If so, then you haven't seen this fine 6-cylinder Auburn Touring Sedan at $1465.

It's a typical Auburn, with a wonderful engine that has amazing power and life. Out on the road it has the speed to keep ahead of the line. In traffic it has snap and response that make it dart through!

All of this driving superiority plus a finely built, comfortable, luxurious Auburn body. Full metal paneled—not a fabric makeshift, even though the car costs little more than an open model.

Come and see for yourself. Your first ride in this car will astonish you. Then check up on each detail of the construction—the axles, transmission, drive system, frame, steering, ignition, controls! You'll find everything you want!

VELIE

VELIE TOURING SEDAN COMPLETELY EQUIPPED, $1995—F. O. B. MOLINE—WHERE CAN YOU MATCH THIS VALUE!

Regular equipment includes: Disc wheels, Cord tires throughout, with 2 extra tires and covers. Aluminum steps, or running boards; aluminum body rails; touring trunk at rear containing 2 suitcases and hat box; bumpers, front and rear. Rear-vision mirror; windshield wiper. Silvered flower vase, 8-day clock. Dome light; vanity case. Smoking set; cigar lighter. Like all Velie models, the Touring Sedan is powered by the famous Velie-Built Motor which is vibrationless at all speeds and is automatically lubricated even to the piston pins. This motor is the sensation in its field and is without counterpart in any car that sells within hundreds of dollars of the Velie price.

A Most Remarkable Value at the Present Price

When you buy your next car why not take a lesson from experience and select one that will serve you and your family comfortably every day in the year?

The Velie Touring Sedan has been designed and built to do that very thing. A snug closed car for stormy, blowy days—an open car that lets in all the rush of clean, cool air in spring, summer and early fall.

At the present price, $1995, f. o. b. Moline, this car offers a truly remarkable value, for it is actually $100 to $300 lower in price than most closed cars that sell near Velie's price in the open models.

Over 60% of Velie owners buy another Velie when they choose a new car.

No other car in any price class, we believe, has built up such a sound following. It is a wonderful endorsement of Velie's faithful performance.

Why not decide now to take this opportunity to buy this beautiful car at a rock-bottom figure?

Every time we sell a car we make a friend.

CHICAGO TO HAVE FIRST REFINERY FOR CANE SUGAR

Only City in Interior of the U. S. to Have One.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago is to be the first American city in the interior of the United States to have a cane sugar refinery. A huge plant, with an initial capacity of 100,000,000 pounds annually, which it is expected will be doubled in the near future, is to be operated on the Calumet river at Indiana avenue by the Midwest Sugar Refining corporation, recently organized and headed by Theodore W. Bunte, president of Bunte Brothers, one of the largest candy makers in the world.

Another large manufacturer of candy, Paul F. Beich, president of the Paul F. Beich company, is on the directorate, which also includes Arthur R. Dike, president of the Fox & Dike company, who will be vice president of the sugar concern, and Harry M. Muller, president of the Muller Brokerage company.

Will Operate Year 'Round.

The beet sugar plant at Riverdale, comprising fourteen acres, was bought from the Charles Pope estate and its fireproof main buildings and mill construction warehouses will form the initial unit in the Midwest establishment. During the lull between beet sugar seasons the refinery will be run full time on cane sugar.

About $125,000 will be expended at once for machinery installation and building reconstruction on the first unit. The second unit, it is estimated, will cost $1,050,000. It is expected that eventually several other units will be built.

Control of extensive beet producing districts in Illinois and Wisconsin has been obtained and the Illinois Agricultural association is coöperating with the midwest concern.

To Compete with Coast Plants.

Ira H. McKinney, general manager of the Midwest corporation, has discovered an economical process for refining raw sugar, and with a water route and connection with all railroads refining can be done as cheaply as at seaboard ports, according to officials. The slicing capacity of the present beet sugar plant is 600 tons of beets daily.

The site was bought for an undisclosed consideration through Hodge, Chandler & Nicolson, who represented all parties. Frederick C. Hack of Winston, Straw & Shaw, cared for legal details for the estate and Warren H. Pease for the purchaser.

Some Residence Sales

Dr. Dan U. Cameron, who lives at 23 East Goethe, has bought the residence next door, at No. 21, lot 20x125, from Mrs. Hattie Bush Simmons, widow of Francis Simmons, for $30,000. Mrs. E. G. Tracy represented all parties.

Frank J. Johnson, president of the American Hoist and Derrick company, has bought from Mrs. Bertha Bucklen the residence at 5211 University avenue, lot 130x168, for $50,000. J. Graften Parker & Co. also report selling for Allen Miller the residence at 7121 Paxton, lot 75x125, to Walter G. Wareing of Armour & Co., for $25,000.

The James Dole residence, a north side landmark, at 1009 North Dearborn, was sold to Belle and Sadie Croffoot, through Crowe Bros. & Co., for $75,000.

The four brick residences at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Superior, 80x76, were sold by the First Trust and Savings bank, trustee, to David Prevus, through Cremin & O'Connor, for $62,500.

GLENCOE PRIVATE SCHOOL BUYS.

Miss Susan Dickinson Stone, sister of the Rev. John Timothy Stone, founded the Hawthorne private school in Glencoe in 1921. Yesterday the school purchased the Women's Library club at Greenleaf and Hazel, which it has been occupying for $13,500 and will enlarge it.

SINCLAIR BUYS MAYWOOD CORNER.

The Sinclair Refining company has bought the southeast corner of Washington boulevard and 5th avenue, Maywood, 155x98, from Louis Landsman, for $15,000, for a gas station.

REICH CANDY COMPANY BUYS PLANT.

Paul E. Reich has bought the factory property at 126 South Green street, his company now uses for candy making, from Albert Dickinson, for $75,000. The site is 82x136.

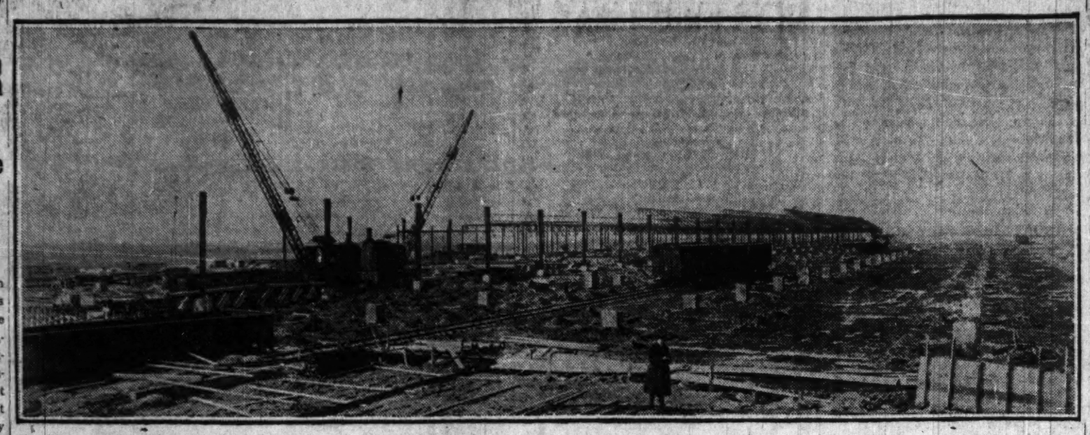
How Mr. Ford's $6,000,000 Hegewisch Plant Is Growing



Above is a photograph taken yesterday and supplied us by the Lonnquist company showing how Chicago's big flivver factory is getting along. The view is north from 130th street and Torrence avenue, just across from Mr. Lonnquist's Ford City subdivision. It won't be many weeks before Henrys will be rolling about the country which could legitimately bear the stamp "Made in Chicago," for the Hegewisch plant will be in operation within a few weeks.

More "Co-Op" Apartments

The eighteen apartments of four and five rooms at the northwest corner of Greenleaf and Greenview have been sold by Jacob Cohn to Harry T. Carlson for a reported $155,000, subject to $90,000. Gubbins & McDowell represented all parties. It is proposed to sell the building to tenants on the coöperative plan.

H. H. Decker & Co. announce two more coöp. flat projects. They have bought the eighteen apartments at the southeast corner of Ashland and Juneway terrace from J. Wronsky, for a reported $158,400, subject to a first mortgage of $90,000. It has twelve five room and six four room flats. This is the eighth building organized by Decker & Co. on the coöperative plan.

Last week they formed the Greenwood Building corporation, which took title to the twenty-one apartments at 4720-26 Greenwood, from H. E. Miller, at $238,000, subject to a first mortgage of $115,000. This is to be sold on the coöp. plan.

PLANS BOAT LINE FROM MUNICIPAL PIER TO LAWRENCE

Karin E. Walsh, connected with Paschen Bros., has bought the southeast corner of Lawrence and Clarendon, with riparian rights, from Peter Costa, for $25,000, through Thomas E. Sullivan & Co., and will erect a $20,000 pier from which he will operate a line of fast launches to and from the Municipal pier. He figures on a 25 cent fare for a twenty-five minute run.

NINE MILES OF FRONTAGE TO BE SOLD IN CALUMET

Snow & Co. Plan Rapid Fire Cut Rate Campaign.

Bargain shoppers in real estate are going to have the time of their lives—if they're looking for property on the far south side. Yesterday it was announced that approximately nine miles of street frontage formerly owned by the Calumet and Chicago Canal and Dock company is going to be sold at once, as rapidly as possible, and at "slaughter prices," state Edgar M. Snow & Co. The property to be sold has a retail value placed at $1,350,000.

All of this property was recently taken over by Cleveland interests, and Hodge, Chandler & Nicolson appointed to liquidate it quickly. It had been held by the Canal and Dock company for several decades at prices so high that little of it moved.

Most of the larger industrial sites have been sold. Fourteen smaller manufacturing sites, some as large as five acres, and upwards of 2,000 lots of business and residence frontage are now to be marketed by Edgar M. Snow & Co. within the next few weeks regardless of the former price set by the old owners.

Along Torrence avenue, which leads to the new Ford plant, there is a mile of frontage suitable for Ford employes, to be sold. Three miles of the nine miles of frontage to be sold are paved. Sewers, water and sidewalks are in practically the entire frontage. The properties are for the most part in the great Calumet industrial district at South Chicago, Burnside, Dauphin Park and South Deering.

Hotel Sherman Rents More Space for Food Business

Requiring additional space for the expansion of its College Inn food business, which now has a national distribution, the Hotel Sherman company has leased the property across the alley at 129-31 West Lake, 40x181, improved with a four story building, for ninety-nine years, at an average annual rental of $7,644. Albert F. Madlener and Angelina Leight are lessors. Albert H. Wetten & Co. and Samuel P. Carter negotiated the lease.

Golf Club for Masons Gets Thirty-eight More Acres

The Acacia Country club, a Masonic golf club, which recently bought eighty-eight acres at Wolfe and Joliet roads, found it needed additional space and has leased from Robert P. Henry thirty-eight acres adjoining for twenty years at $12,000.

Kresge Leases 25 Feet in So. Chicago at Top Value

The Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee under the will of the late Mary Duffy, has leased for fifty-two years and two months, the twenty-five foot frontage at 9130 Commercial avenue, to the S. S. Kresge company, from March 1 at a net annual rental the first twenty-seven years of $2,850. Capitalized at 6 per cent this gives a value of upward of $2,000 a foot for the mid-block frontage, said to be a top value for that district. On or before April, 1930, the lessee agrees to erect a two story building for mercantile or office purposes.

PLAN TWENTY STORY "MACHINERY ARCADE" FOR NEAR WEST SIDE

A twenty story building, covering an entire city block, is rumored as a probability for the near west side. It will be called "The Machinery Arcade" and space will be leased to machinery firms and allied branches for show rooms and offices. It will be open every day in the year and guides will conduct visitors through the machinery exhibits.

Club rooms, dining rooms, a limited number of sleeping rooms, swimming pools, etc., are contemplated for tenants. A site is said to be under option and architects will be chosen in a few days, so it is reported. All leases are to be approved by a representative committee selected from the machinery industry. Complete details will be announced in a few days.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

ELIEL SAARINEN DECIDES TO MAKE CHICAGO HIS HOME

Prize Winning Architect to Practice Here.

Eliel Saarinen of Helsingfors, Finland, winner of the $20,000 prize in THE TRIBUNE architectural contest, who arrived in Chicago a short time ago, stated last night that he intended to make this city his permanent home. He sent a cable to Finland yesterday morning and Mrs. Saarinen and his son and daughter are expected to be on their way to America within a couple of weeks.

ELIEL SAARINEN.

Dwight G. Wallace, Chicago architect, announced that he has formed an association of architects with Mr. Saarinen and Bertel Grenman his associates.

Interested in Chicago Plan.

"Mr. Saarinen is deeply interested in the problem of design of high buildings and hopes to take an active part in such buildings in Chicago," said Mr. Wallace. "He also is a thorough student, as well as an authority on city planning, and the Chicago plan is probably the large factor in drawing him to this field. He is very much interested in the development of the plan and believes it is progressing along the right lines."

Mr. Grenman has been in various architectural offices in Chicago for the last seventeen years.

May Design "Prize" Type Skyscraper.

Negotiations are said to be under way for the erection of a building similar in type to THE TRIBUNE prize winner by a large corporation in this city.

Mr. Saarinen will close his country home near Helsingfors, an unusually attractive residence, designed by himself, and probably live later on in some north shore suburb.

PAYS $290,000 FOR BLOCK ON SHERIDAN ROAD

Dr. Samuel M. Edison yesterday bought the entire block of Sheridan road frontage, between Brompton and Cornelia, from the Chicago Title & Trust company, trustee, for $290,000. The property has a depth of 150 feet and a frontage of 304 feet. Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson were the attorneys. Baird & Warner were brokers.

I. Whiteson to Build 30 Apartments in Evanston

I. Whiteson has bought from Thomas P. Roberts the 100x178 at the southwest corner of Sherman and Washington, Evanston, for $29,000 cash, and will start work at once on thirty apartments designed by Thomas Bishop, to cost $250,000.

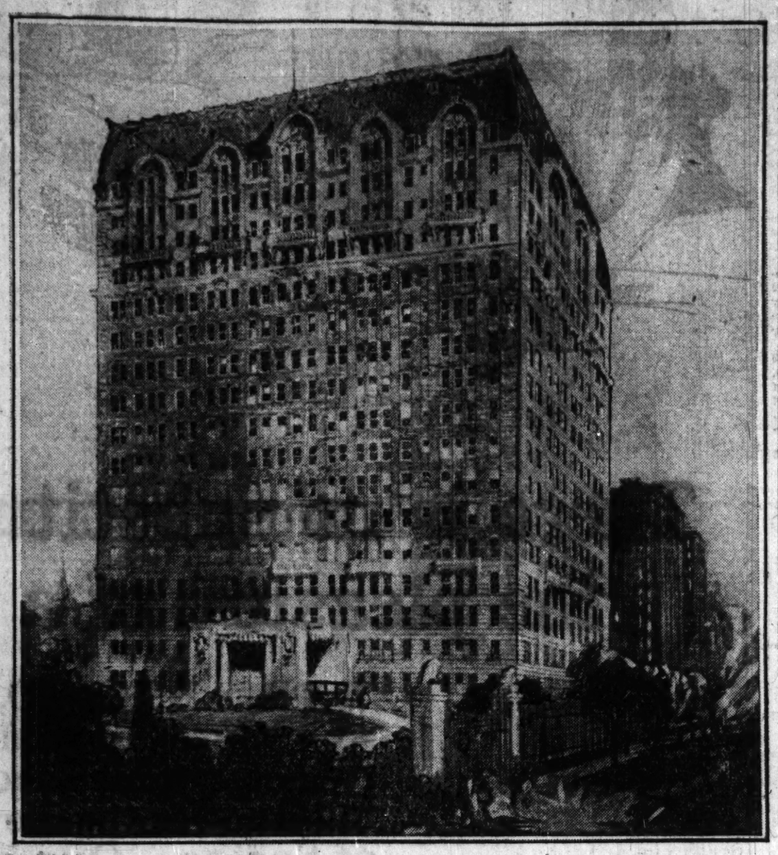
Chicago's Biggest Co-Op. Apartment Project



Here is a coöperative apartment building to be erected on the huge scale which has been so successful in Manhattan for years. Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc., designed it. It is on Sheridan road, 100 feet south of Grace street, and will be eighteen stories and cost more than $2,500,000. Anton Wille is the owner. George M. Forman & Co. have underwritten a $1,600,000 bond issue. More is told in another column.

News of the Architects

William K. Fellows of Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton will talk to the members of the Chicago Women's Drafting club on "Chinn" at its next meeting, to be held in the building of Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton, 814 Tower court, on Thursday at 6:45 p. m., according to Miss Florence Wright, secretary of the club. Any woman employed in architectural or allied offices caring to attend or join the club should phone Miss Wright, Central 4925.

New Subdivisions

Thirty-five acres at the northwest corner of Foster and Cicero, with Forest preserve on the east and north, are to be put on the market by H. W. Elmore & Co. as Elmore's Forest Gardens. The lots will be 30x150 and will sell for $1,090 and upwards, which includes sidewalks, gas, water and sewer. The two blocks on Foster will be restricted to business. Other parts of the subdivision will be restricted to various kinds of residences. There are rumors, only rumors so far, that a golf course may be installed in the nearby preserve.

Elmore & Co. yesterday opened a subdivision of fifteen acres between West 83d and 84th, Wood, Lincoln, and Honore, for John Bain, called Elmore's Beverly View. Lots sell at $995; corners in the neighborhood of $2,000.

Building Permits

Fourteen building permits, for a total valuation of $454,750, were issued yesterday, among them being the following:

2544-60 E. 72d-st., 3 story brick. Southern Arms, owner; Hendrickson & Esser, archs.; Nelson & Lind, Masons and carps.....$200,000

1414-24 Devon-av., 3 story brick stores and flats. Oscar Travis, owner; A. M. Ruttenberg, arch.; Modern Builders and Investment Co., masons and carps.....150,000

8254 Loomis-st., 2 story brick flats. Carl Wennerdahl, owner and carp.; A. G. Lund, arch.; Axel Bergland, mason.....11,000

7747 Cornell-av., 2 story brick. Mrs. Veula Peterson, owner; Kocher & Larson, archs.; Alberts Bros., masons; George Little, carp.....10,000

8230 S. Ada st., 2 story brick flats. H. Liltand, owner and carp.; A. G. Lund, arch.; Axel Bergland, mason.....10,000

Realty Briefs

Robert McKnight, formerly a Chicago newspaper man and at various periods associated with various advertising agencies; a graduate of the University of Chicago and an air pilot over seas, has been appointed by the Central Manufacturing district as publicity manager. He succeeds John R. Boyd, who was transferred to the Los Angeles offices to assist in the Central Manufacturing district development there. Mr. McKnight has been active for some time and will continue as associate editor of the Central Manufacturing District magazine, of which John Blair Whidden is editor.

ROBERT McKNIGHT.

John T. Redmond, formerly building manager for one of the McCormick estates and for the last year manager of the Corn Exchange and Temple buildings, has been appointed by S. W. Straus & Co. to take charge of their new building at Michigan and Jackson, work on which has just started. He will assume active direction of the renting office, already established in room 702 of the present Straus building, Clark and Madison, about April 15. He will have charge of both the rental and operation of the new Straus building.

On account of the election there'll be no speaker at the real estate market of Chicago on Tuesday. Trading will be in operation from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. in the Cook County Real Estate board rooms.

FURNITURE COMPANY TO BUILD.

The Fischer Furniture company, makers of library suites, has bought 23,000 square feet in the block bounded by Kinzie, Austin, Racine, and May from the C. & N. W. R. R. for $29,852, and will improve with a factory building from plans by Davidson & Weiss. The buyer now owns practically the entire block.

Beg Your Pardon

This isn't a legitimate "Beg Your Pardon," but we're glad to mention that W. J. Boyd of the Union Realty company represented the seller in the purchase of the northwest corner of Greenwood and 54th place by Congregation Rodfei Zedek, from Mary J. Giles, reported in this department last Sunday. The broker who represented the buyer failed to mention Mr. Boyd's name when reporting the deal.

Here's a "Beg Your Pardon" made the public by Harold Bradley & Co., which we pass along, for the mistake unintentionally made by the broker was also unintentionally made by this department last Sunday. Lawrence Cuneo and not Frank Cuneo bought the residential property at 2824 Sheridan road. Frank Cuneo was attorney.

SHERIDAN ROAD 18 STORY CO-OP GETS UNDER WAY

$2,500,000 Project to Be City's Largest.

Construction has started on what is claimed will be Chicago's largest co operative apartment venture — an eighteen story structure, on Sheridan road, 100 feet south of Grace street, to cost more than $2,500,000. Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc., is architect. Anton Wille is the owner.

It is expected the new building, as yet unnamed, will be completed by May 1, 1924. It is also expected that apartments will sell for $30,000 up to $50,000, though definite prices have not yet been made public. However, five already have been sold, it is stated.

Mr. Alschlager's plans call for a flexible room arrangement so that apartments of from four to eleven rooms can be arranged for prospective buyers. The standard subdivision of apartments, however, calls for four on a floor, consisting of two six room suites, with three baths, and two five room apartments with two baths.

This big project was first announced in this department on Feb. 15. Anton Wille was then honeymooning in Hawaii and no definite announcement as to time of starting could be given out till his return.

The entire site is 156 feet on Sheridan and 490 feet deep. The building has its main entrance on the south, overlooking a lawn, instead of on Sheridan road. There'll be a playground, with tennis courts in the rear, as well as private garages for the tenant-owners. George M. Forman & Co. have made a $1,600,000 loan on the project, and we humbly suggest that if you're interested in this coöp project, you call them instead of the real estate editor. We were deluged for weeks with phone calls about the last big coöp project we pictured in this department.

BEGIN THIS WEEK UPON EXTENSION OF GRAND BLVD.

Actual work on the widening of South Park avenue into a continuation of Grand boulevard from 35th to 23d street will start this week when the American House Wrecking company will begin demolishing fifty residences on the west side of South Park, between 33d and 35th. The South Park board was paid $5,350 for the houses. It will take ninety days to tear them down.

Willis & Frankenstein Take Over Hulbert & Co.

Willis & Frankenstein have taken over the business of C. E. Hulbert & Co., of 175 West Jackson boulevard, and will add to their organization a special department devoted exclusively to renting in the wholesale district. C. E. Hulbert and Esther L. Hulbert will be connected with this department, in association with J. H. Goldsmith.

$17,600 CHICAGO CATTLE CLAIM STIRS HOT FIGHT

Vicious, Unjust, Declare Tuberculosis Foes.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

In an expose of the "inside story" of a bill recently introduced in the house at Springfield by Representative C. E. Mariner [Rep., Chicago], asking the state to pay H. Van Gelder, a florist at 30 East Randolph street, Chicago, an indemnity of $17,600 for reacting cattle (those infected with tuberculosis), federal and state veterinarians declare that the bill comprises the most vicious and persistent attempt to collect an unjust claim they have ever known in the state's campaign to eradicate tuberculosis.

According to the bill, "H. Van Gelder, acting under an agreement with the state department of agriculture, submitted his herd of cattle to tubercular tests to further the work of stamping out tuberculosis among cattle. The department of agriculture refuses to reimburse said H. Van Gelder in accordance with said agreement and justice demands that he should be reimbursed for his loss."

U. S. Inspector Assails Claim.

"You can form your own conclusions, but why should Mr. Van Gelder be favored over other men who have experienced losses in this way?" asked Dr. J. J. Lintner, the federal inspector in charge of Illinois eradication work, in a letter to Representative C. A. Bruer [Rep., Livingston], revealing the facts connected with the Van Gelder case.

According to Dr. Lintner 110 head of cattle on the Van Gelder farm at Crystal Lake were tested for tuberculosis in the fall of 1921 by Dr. W. W. Welch of Elgin, assistant state veterinarian, and 82 of them reacted—that is, showed signs of tuberculosis infection. Before the cattle were tested Dr. Welch had the owner sign the usual agreement, which requires him to tag, brand, and isolate all of the "reactors," and the testing is done at the owner's expense.

There is only one plan of testing cattle in Illinois by which an owner may receive an indemnity on infected cattle, and that is by submitting his herd for a test under a cooperative state and federal plan.

Van Gelder Makes Protest.

"Some trouble was experienced by the state department before the cattle that responded unfavorably to the test were branded and placed under quarantine," said Dr. Lintner. "Mr. Van Gelder called and told me about his troubles. As this herd had not been tested under the accredited plan directed by this office, the case did not directly concern me, and I paid no further attention. But in January, 1922, I received an application blank signed by Mr. Van Gelder, submitting 110 head of Holstein cattle for the state-federal test. In offering a herd under this plan the owner agrees not to submit any animal which has at any time previous reacted to a test. Yet Mr. Van Gelder offered 82 known "reactors" to avail himself of the state and federal indemnity."

Approximately one-half the cattle which are under question and which are covered in the bill pending before the legislature have not been slaughtered, it is declared.

"No Basis for Claim."

Referring to the bill before the legislature, Dr. F. A. Laird, chief state veterinarian, said there is no basis for Van Gelder's claim; that the state had not agreed to pay for the cattle, and that its officials have no authority to agree to pay owners for such losses.

"Even if the cattle had been tested under our state-federal plan, and all of them had been pure breds, the maximum indemnity on the eighty-two animals would not have been more than $100 a head, or a total of $8,200," added Dr. Lintner.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1923: Fairchild News Service.]

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Wage negotiations in the Rochester clothing market are deadlocked. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union, left for Chicago without making arrangements for further conferences, manufacturers say. They declare they will "sit tight" and oppose any wage advance.

NEW YORK.—Local bathrobe manufacturers are optimistic over the outlook. Whereas years ago spring and summer seasons meant marking time, they are now developing business of considerable volume. Offerings of numerous warm weather novelties, especially beach robes, are believed to explain the change.

BERLIN.—Increasing numbers of German men's clothing manufacturers are planning to send collections to Great Britain and the United States. Several of them will leave Germany during April and May. Some manufacturers have sent representatives to both countries to study styles. Garments are made of British and Polish fabrics, especially gabardines.

NEW YORK.—A surplus of overcoats for the next heavyweight season, predicted in some quarters, is declared unlikely by local manufacturers. They believe supply and demand will be pretty evenly balanced. The mills' control of overcoatings obtainable will also tend to make overproduction improbable.

NEW YORK.—The first mothproof suits are offered in the retail market here by a department store [John Wanamaker]. The store quotes a price of $34.75 on a limited quantity of men's suits with two pairs of trousers.

BELFAST.—Owing to the fact that continental spinners are now booked up far ahead, there is a slightly better demand for Irish yarn. Spinners here, however, are still buying flax conservatively.

Southern Pacific Owns Only 527 Miles Trackage

San Francisco, Cal., March 31.—The Southern Pacific company owns but 527 miles of the 7,110 miles of trackage in its Pacific system, F. L. Burckhalter, general manager of the northern division of the company's system, testified today at the opening of a session of an interstate commerce commission hearing of proposed rail carrier groupings under the transportation act of 1920.

The Central Pacific system owns 2,207 miles of the trackage, while the remainder is owned by other lines, Burckhalter said. He emphasized the necessity of the present grouping of the system remaining intact in order that there shall be no possible harmful upheaval of present shipping arrangements.

Burckhalter explained that he was putting the evidence in as a supplement to the company's showing before the commission hearing in Washington recently, which considered consolidations throughout the country generally.

Gasoline Production Sets New Record in January

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Establishment of a new monthly record for production of gasoline in the United States during January was announced today by the interior department. Production aggregated 623,823,237 gallons, the department statistics show, representing an increase of 29,000,000 gallons over the previous record month. Reports from the 301 refineries operating indicated the national stock on Feb. 1 amounted to 1,002,857,000 gallons, the largest ever recorded.

HUGE MERGER OF PUBLIC UTILITIES ASKED OF STATE

Springfield, Ill., March 31.—[United Press.]—Approval for a merger of properties valued at $97,000,000 to bring under the head of a single directing corporation one of the world's largest public utility groups was asked of the Illinois commerce commission today.

The commission was requested to confirm the consolidation of the McKinley Illinois traction system properties and the Studebaker Illinois Light and Power company utilities. The consolidated company will be known as the Illinois Power and Light company. It will control the longest continuous trunk line electric railway system in the world, as well as other public valuable utility properties.

The Studebaker properties were controlled by the South Bend family of that name and the McKinley interests by United States Senator McKinley.

Fifty separate corporations organized under laws of various states and most of which have been individually developed and capitalized will be brought together, according to the petition.

As a result, it is asserted the 172,000 electric light users, 67,500 gas users, and the patrons of the 240 miles of street railway and the 550 miles of main track electric railway included in the merger, will be benefited by increased efficiency.

Why Comlossy Bonds Are Preferred

It cannot be denied that there is actually a very strong and growing preference for Comlossy Bonds.

Hundreds upon hundreds of investors in Chicago and throughout the country are convinced that Comlossy First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds are the very best securities they can possibly obtain.

Our own desire and intent from the outset of this Company, years ago, has been to earn for Comlossy Bonds just that precise reputation.

We have always specialized in one particular kind of a real estate bond.

Every bond issue we have brought forth is secured by a high grade fireproof apartment building, and in each case, the property is located on Chicago's Great North Side, within three blocks of the lake.

It is now freely admitted that no better type of security is obtainable for conservative investors.

There is no substitute for the pleasure of a car

MR. ANTONIO, the Hurdy-Gurdy Man, and the cheerful notes of his hand organ used to be one of the inevitable signs of Spring. Our civilization changes. Now, Dad out behind the garage overhauling or painting the car means that the season of violets and good roads is at hand.

Spring, to most people, is synonymous with pleasant all-day auto jaunts into the country with the whole family. Where can you find so much wholesome, healthful enjoyment at such insignificant expense as with an automobile? And a good, reliable little car is not beyond the means of anyone who really wants a car.

If you cannot buy a new car, buy a good used car on which most of the depreciation is already written off. You can find the best cars and the best bargains in the Automobile Want Ad Columns of The Tribune. Look now for the particular car that you desire.

NEARLY thirty thousand copies of this valuable booklet have been distributed to date, each in response to a request from a Tribune advertiser. We are holding a free copy for you. Merely send your name and address. No obligation.

WARTIME TAXES IN DAY OF PEACE "STING" PAYERS

BY SCRUTATOR.

Figured in money, the American taxpayer is handing over nearly one dollar out of every six earned between the two seas to tax collectors. Figured in time, over eight weeks of every year is being devoted to the production of wealth for the suport of federal, state, local, and city governments, their legion of special tax districts, and their bondholders.

"What's it all for?" will soon be audible. That question is always a danger signal. But men are beginning to ask it. Radical publications, which formerly advocated bond issues galore, as a means of stripping the rich of their wealth, are beginning to print analyses of the tax burden upon the worker. On their premises that labor produces everything, it is plausible to tell the workingman that he pays the nation's tax bill. They also tell him that most of the money goes to hire cops and soldiers to keep him down.

If not intelligently, this sort of propaganda will not get very far, but it is too plain a symptom to be ignored. Business men understand that no enterprise can charge more than the traffic will bear. The bankruptcy courts conduct a continuous school teaching this principle. Governments are subject to the same law. Revolutions are history's state bankruptcies.

Statesmen of the nineteenth century, especially in Britain and America, bore these things in mind and shaped their tax laws accordingly. They strove to make the burden light. The war smashed the fiscal tradition, already weakened by the growing American idea that history is old stuff, only quoted by reactionaries and the Supreme court. Now politicians either do not understand that the war is over or that taxation in war and taxation in peace are entirely different.

"To provide for the common defense" will produce billions with ease, where it is next to impossible to extort a cent to "promote the general welfare." This may be sad, but it's so. In war, governments function in the primitive appeal to the roots of race consciousness. They can take the last dollar and then carry on without a real dime. Men know instinctively that defense is the real business of governments, the other functions are more or less luxuries. That's why pallid gentlemen are not getting far with their statistics about $5 or 90 per cent of federal expenditures going for past and future wars. Subconsciously our reaction to that sort of stuff is, "And why not—what's the government for?" The heart pumps faster at the sight of striped bunting.

Even a fireman or a cop in action can wrench the heart strings of a normal man. But there isn't a cheer in forty volumes of school board reports, nor an extra heart beat in fifty miles of drainage canal. Whoever stopped to wish Godspeed to a contractor's concrete mixer going down the street? Who but a dead one fails to turn around when he hears a fire engine's gong?

That government has been charging all the traffic will bear, since the armistice, ought to be pretty evident by now. Proof aplenty came on March 15, when the income returned for taxation showed an increase over the year before. This increase came on the very first return day, that the reductions of the 1921 revenue amendment were effective. It also followed a consistent reduction of federal expenditures since 1919.

Taxpayers are showing the natural response. However, it is easy to be too optimistic. The purchasing power of the dollar this year is greater than that of the dollars with which taxes were paid before, so the burden has not been really lightened as much as the figures show on their face. However, if such moderate reductions stimulated collections, it is proof enough that the policy of taxing the rich to the limit under the war revenue law defeated its purpose.

How strongly the war revenue law taxed the rich is evident from the 1920 figures, which show that 10 per cent of the income tax payers paid 84.6 of all the income taxes collected. The richest 27.8 per cent of the income tax payers paid 92.3 per cent of the taxes collected.

Only 17.4 per cent of the persons engaged in gainful occupations in the United States filed income tax returns. Thirty-four million workers out of a total of 41,000,000 did not even report any income for taxation. Of the 7,000,000 who did, the vast majority paid almost nothing, because of exemptions.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report that in spite of the continued cold weather the traffic was handled in good shape, and that the loadings of revenue freight continue to test the capacity of the roads. Officers of southern roads report little change for the week, the operations of the leading lines being at about full capacity under existing conditions.

Applications for authority to construct two new railroad extensions were filed yesterday with the interstate commerce commission. The Northern Pacific proposed to build a branch of thirty miles in Rosebud county, Montana, to gain access to the Rosebud coal fields. The Arkansas Short Line Railroad company proposes to build thirty-two miles of line from McDonald, Ark., to McCormick, Ark., connecting with the Missouri Pacific.

February earnings statements of forty-eight railroads handling three-fourths of the country's business showed a gain of more than 11 per cent in gross revenues, compared with the corresponding month last year, but a decline of 18 per cent in the net operating income. These returns indicate for all class 1 railroads in the United States a net operating income of approximately $30,200,000 for the month of February, which would compare with an actual net operating income of $47,710,897 for the corresponding month last year.

Shortage in freight cars of all descriptions on March 14 totaled 74,442, which was a decrease of 4,828 compared with the total on March 7, according to reports received today from the carriers by the car service division of the American Railway association. Surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for use amounted to 12,461 on March 14. This was a reduction of 768 since March 7.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Answers are based upon information which THE TRIBUNE believes correct, but beyond care in securing it THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer. Answers of public interest will be published, those not of general interest will be mailed if stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letters to Investors' Guide.

Investors Should Organize.

Investors should unite to protect their investments. Holders of railroad securities throughout the country have organized and formed an association for the protection and stabilization of their securities. This association, the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, which we described in a recent article, now represents, through its membership, some $11,000,000,000 of railroad stocks and bonds. It is of equal importance to owners of securities of all sorts to combine for the protection of their investments. Not alone among the railroads is the necessity for unified action imperative. As individuals, the investors can accomplish little or nothing. By organizing and working for the common interests of all, they can become a real force.

People who save their money and invest it are the cream of the nation. They are the worth while citizens who are looking ahead—who are building for the future. But they should not build blindly. It is not enough to purchase a security and then let it shift for itself. It must be watched, and watched intelligently. The success or failure of an investment should not be left to chance or to depend entirely on the management of others. It should not be allowed, without contest to be subject to biased or partisan legislation of the vote-getting type which may impair or ruin its value. The same quality of foresight which prompts the investor to save and invest should be used to watch and safeguard the investment after it is made. Coöperation is the watchword. Only through organization and unity of action can these things be accomplished.

The machinery for such an organization already exists in the form of investment banking houses. These institutions are deeply interested in the question. They underwrite securities issues. They sell them to the public and invest their own funds in them. They make or mar their reputations on the future success or failure of the securities they handle. The reputable investment houses endeavor to maintain a market for the securities they sell and do all they can to assist the companies which issue them, so that the investments of their clients may prove good. Such houses have won the confidence of their clients. They understand the investment game, are in touch with business conditions, and know the various influences which affect securities. They have a developed and trained organization. They should initiate the movement.

Following the strong to 5c higher start, bulk of the hog supply at 15,500, which included 3,700 "directs" and 7,495 held over from previous day, moved slowly at a shade below Friday's general market, average dropping off 5c at $8.15. Practical top equaled previous day at $8.50, although a part load, averaging 199 lbs, reached $8.55 on the early strength. Shippers absorbed 2,500, with 4,000 left unsold at the close.

Last week's receipts of hogs at 196,900 were larger than any corresponding period in over ten years, being 10,500 larger than previous week, 63,400 larger than a year ago, and 84,200 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 240 lbs stands heaviest since October, showing 2 lbs gain over previous week, equaling a year ago, and standing 7 lbs above the ten year average. The week's average price dropped back to a level with two weeks ago at $8.20, being 5c under previous week, and $4.00 under the ten year average.

Comparatively small receipts and an improved local and shipping outlet helped last week's cattle trade, while calves, due to largest arrivals of the year, closed fully $2.00 lower than the previous Saturday. Bulk of beef steers closed around 25c higher than a week ago, with average price of good steers at $9.05, against $8.90 previous week, and $7.75 a year ago. Butcher stock and feeding steers showed little change compared with a week ago.

Lambs Close Steady.

Ten cars of Colorado fed lambs sold yesterday at $15.00@15.15, on shipping account, being generally steady with closing prices previous week. After the break Monday and Tuesday, lamb trade ruled on a strong undertone, regaining part of the decline, with eastern demand and export buyers helping to strengthen values. Genuine native spring lambs sold readily for Easter holiday festivities, upwards to $22.00, with bulk California springers at $15.50. Aged and yearling sheep were scarce, and sold steady, with the year's high point.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 55,000 hogs, and 21,000 sheep, against 14,559 cattle, 53,332 hogs, and 24,760 sheep a week ago, and 16,280 cattle, 43,799 hogs, and 17,876 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 52,000 cattle, 170,000 hogs, and 76,000 sheep, against 49,241 cattle, 121,902 hogs, and 87,686 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 52,000 to 55,000. H. H. Moore and F. W. Waddell marked 52,000, Lester Armour and E. R. Gentry 53,000, W. H. Overman 54,000, W. S. Nicholson 55,000, E. Roads Ask Injunction Against Mileage Books

Boston, Mass., March 31.—The railroads of the east, in a petition filed in the federal court here, ask a permanent injunction against the interstate commerce commission's decree for the introduction of interchangeable mileage books at a 20 per cent reduction in rates. Judge Morton issued an order of notice yesterday returnable April 6. The commission has ordered virtually every road in the country to place the new script on sale May 1.

The petitioning railroads estimate their net loss in operating income from the proposed reductions at $30,000,000 a year, which is said to be about one-half the loss for the railroads of the country as a whole.

It is contended that the order requires the carriers to perform service at rates that are noncompensatory. The additional cost entailed by the use of the proposed mileage books is placed at $1,600,000 a year. It is asserted the order is discriminatory in that it creates an undue preference in favor of the holders of the special form of ticket.

DERBY BANKRUPTCY PETITION FILED.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Three holders of notes totaling $327,150, secured by stock of the D. G. Dery corporation, silk manufacturers, now in the hands of receivers, today filed petition in bankruptcy against D. G. Dery, president and principal owner of the corporation.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

A winter wheat crop of 634,000,000 bu, compared with 580,000,000 bu harvested last year, was suggested by the J. A. Taylor-National Ginner report as wired to J. R. Bennett & Co. Condition of winter wheat is 82.4 against 79.5 last December. Indications are that there will be an average abandonment of acreage. Condition of winter rye is 84.8 against 84.3 in December.

R. O. Cromwell in his report to Lamson Bros. & Co., from McCook, Neb., says general conditions in that territory are for a 40 to 60 per cent crop promise. Rain is needed now and would save numerous fields, but plants are dying daily.

During the past week crop expert E. W. Snow examined many wheat fields in north-central Illinois, and the general condition is such as to warrant serious apprehension. Only a small percentage of the fields have a strong show of life. Ten days of warm weather is needed before the actual condition can be determined. No oats have been seeded.

Crop expert George M. Le Count has entered the dry section of western Kansas and in his report to Stein, Alstrin & Co., from Dodge City, Kas., said from Great Bend west fields get poorer every mile, and from Kinsley, west, there is very little indication of wheat ever having been planted, fields being perfectly bare. Lots of wheat never germinated. From Bucklin, Kan., he wired: "Wheat through this territory very poor. Some fields show a little green color, but stand is very thin and getting thinner each day. The soil is dry. Wheat is dying."

A crop expert for a Kansas City firm who has covered Kansas by automobile, estimates the condition of winter wheat in forty-three counties in the eastern division of the state at 84 on 2,374,000 acres. In the thirty-one central counties with 6,046,000 acres the condition is 67 against 71.5 last year, while in the western part, with thirty-one counties and 3,810,000 acres, the condition is 30 against 51 last year. Average prospective abandoned acreage for the state is 28 per cent against 20.5 per cent last year.

NAVAL STORES STRONG.

Savannah, Ga., March 31.—The naval stores year for 1922-1923, which came to an end today, found the statistical situation at Savannah stronger than for several seasons. The receipts have been good, the shipments large and the prices obtained during the season were satisfactory. The year ended with spirits quoted at $1.51 a gallon, compared with 81 cents a year before. The rosin market is much stronger than a year ago with prices correspondingly higher.

PRODUCE MARKETS

An advance of ½c in butter and ¼c in egg prices with a good call for both and offerings well absorbed featured the trading on Saturday. Poultry sold well at unchanged prices. Potatoes moved off freely at the recent advance. Arrivals were 50 cars, with 180 cars on track.

How Long Could Your Family Live on Your Estate?

7% GOLD BONDS

Could they live one year or five years or would they be comfortably "fixed" for life?

Whether the answer is a few months or several years, it is doubtful if your present estate is as large as you would like it to be.

To help you to quickly build up a substantial estate the Beak Method of Estate Building has been developed.

It combines the two greatest investments known – real estate bonds and insurance – creating a sizable estate after the first small payment.

This method will go further to create a larger estate in a shorter period than any other form of investment yet devised.

For example, after the first monthly payment of $50.00 toward the purchase of a $500.00 bond, the average man would have a total estate of about $1,700.00.

Write now for our new booklet, "Estate Building," and learn what the Beak Plan will do for you. It is free and there is no obligation.

GRAINS ADVANCE AT A RAPID PACE ON CROP SCARE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A crop scare has developed in the winter wheat belt and, with a broadening in the outside trade, prices advanced sharply, with the close at the top with net gains of 1¼@2c, with July leading. Corn was up ⅝@½c; oats, ½c, and rye, 1¼@1½c, largely in sympathy with wheat.

Grain values fluctuated rapidly the last week within fairly narrow limits. Liquidation was on early, but the losses were more than recovered later, and at the last wheat showed a net gain of ⅝@¾c, as compared with the finish of the previous week. Corn gained ⅝@1¼c; oats, ⅛@⅜c, and rye ⅞@1⅛c. Provisions were weak, and lard lost 25@30c, and ribs 37½@47½c.

Crop News Main Factor.

Local crop experts sent bullish reports on the condition of winter wheat in parts of Kansas, Nebraska and Illinois, and with continued cold weather, which is delaying spring wheat seeding, it took but little buying to start values upward. There was no material pressure on the market at any time except from scattered longs, while commission houses had a fair run of outside buying orders, largely in small lots.

Owing to the Easter holidays, export demand for wheat was rather slow, with sales of 300,000 bu claimed at the seaboard. There was some buying of May, which was attributed to removing hedges against the Greek order, which was presumably filled last week. Monday's statistics are expected to be bullish, with small world's shipments forecasted.

Wheat Strength Helps Corn.

Strength in wheat was the main influence in corn, and with local buying the advance was easily attained. In the last week around 150,000 bu cash corn was sold from here to eastern industries. Basis on spot was firm, with bids to arrive advanced ¼@1c, the latter on No. 3 grades for ninety day shipment. There were export bids at the seaboard close to a working basis, with sales of 200,000 bu in addition.

Cold weather continued to delay seeding of oats in the central west, and the country was a fair buyer of July and September during the day. Strength in other grains was also a factor.

During of July rye against sales of July wheat at 33c difference by a local cash house featured the trading during the day. There was some rye sold for export, but quantities were not given. The two northwestern markets had 26 cars.

Provisions Close Weak.

General evening up in March contracts was under way in provisions, and with scattered selling a decline was easily attained with the finish at net losses of 15@17½c on lard and 25c on ribs, with the finish about the bottom. Strength in hogs failed to have much effect. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date aggregate 604,000, against 563,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 300,000 bu wheat and 200,000 bu corn were reported at the seaboard. Demand was not urgent, as continental markets were closed and the Easter holidays there were being closely observed.

Chicago handlers sold 5,000 bu wheat, 85,000 bu corn, 45,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu barley to the domestic trade.

Demand for cash wheat at Chicago was fair, with No. 2 red 58@12c over and No. 2 hard 1¼@1½c over May. Receipts 40 cars. Outside markets 1@2½c higher, with Omaha leading.

Basis on cash corn was firmer and offerings were quickly absorbed. No. 3 grades sold at ⅝@2c over. No. 3 grades ¼c under to 1c over, and No. 4 grades ½@¾c under May. Receipts 161 cars. Outside markets unchanged to 1c higher.

Offerings of oats were fair and demand moderate, with the basis unchanged. No. 2 white sold at ½@¾c over and No. 3 white at May price to ¾c under. Receipts 145 cars.

Choice hay sold well and the common grades which have been slow were taken more freely. Arrivals were 39 cars timothy, 1 car southwestern prairie, and 1 car wheat straw. Choice timothy, $23@24; No. 1 at $21@22, No. 2 at $18@20, and No. 3 at $13@16. Light clover mixed, $16@21, with heavy $13@18. Alfalfa $16@23. Southwestern and Nebraska prairie, $15@18; feeding, $12@14, and packing $9@11. Rye straw, $11@12; oat, $10.50@11.50, and wheat, $9.50@10.50 per ton.

RAW SILK MARKET.

NEW YORK, March 31.—SILK—Raw unchanged.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The wheat traders were mixed over the action of the market. Those bullish were undecided as to whether the advance with increased attention given the new crop futures meant that an upward movement had really started, or whether it was a false start like similar ones of late. The most sanguine operator in the trade who favored the buying side said at the close that the upward movement in values was on for good. Bears, however, were skeptical.

Enough uncertainty regarding the wheat crop was given in the private crop reports yesterday to scare the shorts and they were good buyers. It was also claimed that buying in the hedges against the 1,100,000 bu Manitobas sold to Greece last Wednesday had not been completed until yesterday, and that it was a big help in getting prices up. At no time was the selling pressure enough to make shorts comfortable.

Corn did not act well considering the advance in wheat, as there was little new buying of futures and enough pressure from a few commission houses to satisfy all demands which come mainly from pit shorts. The cash basis afforded consolation to those who were bullish, as offerings were licked up at good premiums.

"The bad spots in the Kansas wheat crop are from Colby west and to the southwest," said a Kansas City man. "There has not been enough moisture there, while in the northwestern sections they had a great deal of snow. The western third of Kansas has around 3,000,000 acres in winter wheat, and the state has between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 acres. Allowing for a loss of 3,000,000 acres and giving the state 10,000,000 acres, with 12 bu per acre, Kansas would have 120,000,000 bu. As to the export demand, there was 10,000 bu sold Thursday to go to Galveston to fill out an order. They have tightened up on the grading there and little business is being done."

Indiana feeders are buying corn in Chicago to a limited extent. It costs them around 78c laid down in northern Indiana points. Indianapolis has also been a buyer here the last week.

An Oklahoma man wired that he had driven 250 miles over the wheat country on Thursday and found the wheat crop never looking better.

An increase in the investment buying of new crop wheat futures was reported by commission houses. It was based on the cold weather, which promises to continue for the coming week.

An easier car situation exists for grain throughout the leading sections. There has been an increased call of late, however for loading grains at Missouri river terminals, largely for movement to Chicago and the gulf. Chicago received 3,867,000 bu of grain last week, an increase of 270,000 bu for the week, and of 1,146,000 bu over last year. Primary receipts for the week were 13,291,000 bu, compared with 13,289,000 bu the previous week and 11,422,000 bu last year. Corn receipts were the smallest in four years, and oats the largest for this period in five years, while the wheat movement was the largest in five years except for 1921.

Let Experience Guide You In Your Investment Problems

With its nation-wide organization and its highly trained personnel, the American Bond & Mortgage Company is especially well fitted to counsel with you in the solution of your investment problems. Many men and women, primarily interested in safety with maximum return, have found that this counsel quickly solves their problems.

Today, thousands of investors from every walk of life are placing available funds in First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds — whose popularity is largely due to safety and attractive return. Individuals enjoy this investment opportunity because most large office buildings, apartments and hotels are financed through bond issues.

The funds to purchase these bonds are derived from many sources —the wages of the working man, salary of the office employee, profits of the farmer and earnings of the professional man—all contributing to the success of these building enterprises.

Your own funds, like those of thousands of others scattered throughout the country and engaged in many occupations, should be invested to yield the highest rate of interest consistent with safety. Solve your investment problems by writing today for literature describing our many services and our long record of success.

Number Two

Securities—Inception

WITH increasing recognition and protection of individual property rights, in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Centuries, companies came into existence.

In their early beginnings, their organization was crude, but the system of shares or stock was soon invented and a marvelous period of expansion and development ensued.

This system afforded a means of gathering together the resources of many persons and of returning to them their proportional share in the profits of the enterprise.

Big business was born. The financial machinery was provided which made possible the factory, the railroad, the steamship, public utilities and other essentials of civilization.

The benefits of this new idea to the public —to the thrifty individual—were no less remarkable and important.

There was no such word as "investor" in the English language in its present financial significance as late as 1776, when Dr. Samuel Johnson wrote his dictionary.

Prior to this period, securities had existed, but they were little more than certificates of indebtedness and were practically non-negotiable.

Thus, until the Seventeenth Century there was no convenient way of investing money in gainful enterprises, except those in which the investor took a personal part, as in a sea venture, or the banding together of a small group of craftsmen.

Now the purchase of securities is open to everybody with equal rights and equal advantages. The money of the laborer now has the same usefulness and power, in proportion, as that of the capitalist.

For more than a century, the New York Curb Market has provided a market for the securities of large enterprises—some still in the formative period of their corporate existence, others which have become important and successful factors in the business world.

Growing with the need for financing the nation's marvelous industrial progress, it is now America's second largest stock market.

And Jones & Baker, who offer brokerage service exclusively in New York Curb Exchange securities, have kept pace with this growth. Equipped with every modern facility for gathering information, they have developed this department which makes them widely known as "information headquarters" on these securities.

It is significant that nearly 40% of their new customers come from old customers.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Heavy buying of Marland Oil and Phillips Petroleum, each of which established new high records for the year, were the features of yesterday's stock market. Marland was pushed up 3½ points to 58¾ and Phillips closed 1⅝ points higher at 69⅝. The run-up of Marland was associated with reports of its possible merger with the Cosden Oil company. The usual leaders closed slightly higher than Thursday's final quotations.

The poor showing made by some of the principal railroad systems in the February earnings reports because of the heavy expense incidental to the severe storms that month, with the prospect that the March returns will be similarly affected, resulted in a moderate liquidation of some of the railroad shares.

The advance of $1.40 a ton last week in the average price of eight leading steel products as compiled from the Iron Age brings the price level up to $59.48. This compares with an average of $56.08 in the previous week and a high level of $53.21 for 1923 reached last September. The advance of $6.27 a ton over the maximum of last year has been recorded despite the fact that pig iron is now selling $3 a ton less than it was at that time. The price of $35.77 a ton for pig iron last year, however, is classed as an emergency price as it was brought about by the situation which resulted from the combined railroad and coal strikes.

Although automobile manufacturing companies all reported small profits during the first half of 1922, the earnings rolled up during the last half of the year were so large that the net results for the year make a favorable comparison, according to the annual reports which have come to hand since Jan. 1. The small profits early last year were caused by the necessity of the industry to adjust itself to the new price levels. This took some time, but when completed the industry was in much better shape.

For the first time since December, 1921, an increase in the number of stockholders of the United States corporations is reported. Dividend checks have been mailed to 94,198 individuals, as compared with 93,789 at the end of last December. The high record was in December, 1921, when 107,439 individuals held the common stock.

Textile workers in nearly every plant in eastern Connecticut will receive wage increases April 30. Notices have been given in many plants and others are to announce increases tomorrow. The plants in the district employ about 16,000 persons. An increase of 10 per cent in the wages of all its employes was announced by the Toledo Shipbuilding company. The increase is retroactive to March 26.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending March 28, by 266 banks in thirty-five leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,068,435,000, a decrease of 9.1 per cent compared with a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 237 banks in thirt-one clearing houses amountd to $1,050,057,000, an increase of 9.5 per cent compared with the corresponding week of last year.

A new Chicago national bank is planned for the north side. W. J. Klingenberg, president of the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank, has made application at Washington for permission to organize the Sheridan National bank, to take over the commercial business of the former bank. The new institution will have a capital of $250,000. The trust and savings bank will continue in operation, doing the lines of business indicated by its name.

Although the population of the United States is steadily increasing, the mileage of its railroads is steadily decreasing, according to figures supplied by the Railway Age which points out that from 1916 to 1921 inclusive there was a net decrease of 2,206 miles of track. With the 1922 figures included, it is quite possible that the torn up trackage will reach the 3,000 mile mark.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Hayes Wheel company that its sales for February had amounted to $1,430,000. January sales amounted to $1,350,000, and March is expected to show close to $1,500,000.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in local unlisted securities was rather evenly distributed over the entire list, and while a few showed some reactionary tendency, the majority ruled firm. Butler Bros. was active, although little net change in price occurred; sales being made between 38¼ and 38⅝. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply declined 1 point to a close of 52 bid, offered at 53. By-Products Coke common, after selling at 73½, broke sharply to 69½ bid, offered at 70¼.

Ford of Canada at 454 bid, 456 asked, was off some 10 points. Paige-Detroit was slightly lower, closing at 21 bid, offered at 21½. Timken-Detroit and Motor Wheel each improved a full point at 12¼@12⅜ for the former and 11⅝@11¾ for the latter. Fairbanks Morse common changed hands between 57½ and 58¼. Northwestern Yeast sold at 200. Hurley Machine common was rather neglected at 44½ bid, 45 asked. McCord Manufacturing common was a point lower at 6 bid, offered at 8⅝. Offerings of the preferred at 45 failed to attract buyers. Packard preferred changed hands at 93⅛@94. Firestone Tire and Rubber common improved to 84 bid, 85 asked, while the 6 per cent preferred showed little change at 96½ bid, 97½ asked.

Sullivan Machinery was quoted 60 bid, 62 asked. National Grocer common was fractionally higher at 6¼ bid, offered at 7; while 85 was bid for the preferred without attracting sellers near current quotations. Burroughs Adding Machine was quiet with a few sales taking place between 131 and 133. Albert Pick preferred changed hands at 96⅛@98, ex $1.75 dividend. Chicago Railway Equipment closed at 33 bid, 33 asked, and the preferred at 26 bid, 27 asked, with few actual transactions. A few sales were made in Wahl preferred at 93⅛@94¼.

Sugar issues were extremely quiet, with little change in values. Closing bid and asked prices follow: Columbia, 6⅝, 7⅛; Godchaux preferred, 89, 92; Holland-St. Louis, 5⅜, 5¾; Michigan, 5¼, 5⅝; Utah-Idaho, 3⅝, 3¾.

Price movement in public utility shares was irregular, advances in most cases being offset by equal declines in others. American Gas and Electric common gained some 4 points at 186 bid, 189 asked. Fractional improvement was noted in American Power and Light at 179 bid, 181 asked. American Light and Traction at 128@130 was 1 point lower. Commonwealth Power Railway and Light common, after selling at 35, reacted somewhat at the close to 33⅜ bid, 34½ asked. The new Commonwealth Power corporation preferred again sold at 71@71½. Northern Ohio Electric common was wanted at 9, with sellers at 10. The preferred was quoted 31 bid, 33 asked, with no reported sales. Sales of Standard Gas and Electric common ranged between 32¾ and 31, closing at 31½. The preferred was quiet, all transactions being recorded in the neighborhood of 50¾. Trading in the United Light and Railway shares was dull, and prices inclined to be fractionally easier. The common was quoted at the close 100 bid, 110 asked; 6 per cent preferred 78 bid, 79 asked.

FOUR RAILROADS GET O. K. TO ISSUE NEW SECURITIES

Washington, D. C., March 31.—Four railroads got permission from the interstate commerce commission today to issue new securities. The Pere Marquette will put out the largest issue, a total of $12,826,000, in first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, to be sold at not less than 91 per cent of par. The corporation was further authorized to use $9,995,000 of the first issue as collateral for loans.

The Norfolk and Western was authorized to issue $3,000,000 in equipment trust certificates, to be sold at not less than 95.5 per cent of par. The Pittsburgh, Youngstown, and Ashtabula got approval for an issue of $3,785,000 of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds, payment for which will be guaranteed by the Pennsylvania company. The Illinois Central and two of its subsidiaries were authorized to issue $3,168,900 of 5 per cent joint bonds.

To purchase new equipment the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad asked for authority to put out $7,875,000 in 5 per cent equipment trust certificates. The road will buy fifty-eight new locomotives and 2,000 cars for coal.

The New York Times.

New York, March 31.—[Special.]—With the stock market's movement little more than nominal and the cotton market closed again for a special holiday, such interest as Wall street took in the course of prices today was largely directed to foreign exchange. The recovery of the German mark was the outstanding occurrence. Having fallen, as measured in ten-thousandths of a cent, from 43 at last week's close to 46 on Friday, it closed at 47¾ today, or near the "pegged price" of the last few weeks.

That the movement of rates had no relation to the supply of this inflated currency was proved with more than the usual emphasis by today's Reichsbank statement for the third week of March, which reported an increase in note circulation for the week of 683,000,000,000 marks.

Fixed Germany with Marks.

Considering that the highest previous achievement of inflation was the addition of 450,000,000,000 in the second week of February, it will be seen that, whatever may be happening to the mark's value on foreign markets, the home market is getting as much of them as it could expect and more than an ordinary government printing outfit could provide.

The statement also shows that 100,000,000 gold marks, or one-tenth of the Reichsbank's whole reserve, have been transferred to foreign banks, presumably to acquire foreign currencies with which to support the mark. The proposed new "gold loan" for 200,000,000 will produce, even with the bank underwriting, only about 100,000,000, so that the Reichsbank was evidently called on to make up the difference from its own reserve. These are the financial expedients of public men who are lost in the forest.

Stocks Dull and Irregular.

Business on the stock exchange was perfunctory and meaningless; transactions were the smallest in two months and movement of prices entirely conflicting. There were as many advances as declines, each running in some instances to several points, but with the larger changes mostly on the side of losses. Comparison of the week's closing prices with those of a week ago shows considerable irregularity in results, but a prevalence of net declines.

Bond market prices make somewhat similar comparison, the exception being the more active Liberty bonds. These, although they reached the year's low prices during the last week, ended mostly at fractional net advances for the week, with the Fourth 4¼ per cents nearly a point above the week's low figure.

New York Bank Loans Rise.

On increase of $81,412,000 in loans of the New York clearing house banks is disclosed in the weekly statement of actual conditions, made public today. Deposits are about $46,000,000 higher than last week. Surplus reserves show a decrease of $656,960. Reserves in excess of legal requirements now stand at $4,489,500. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

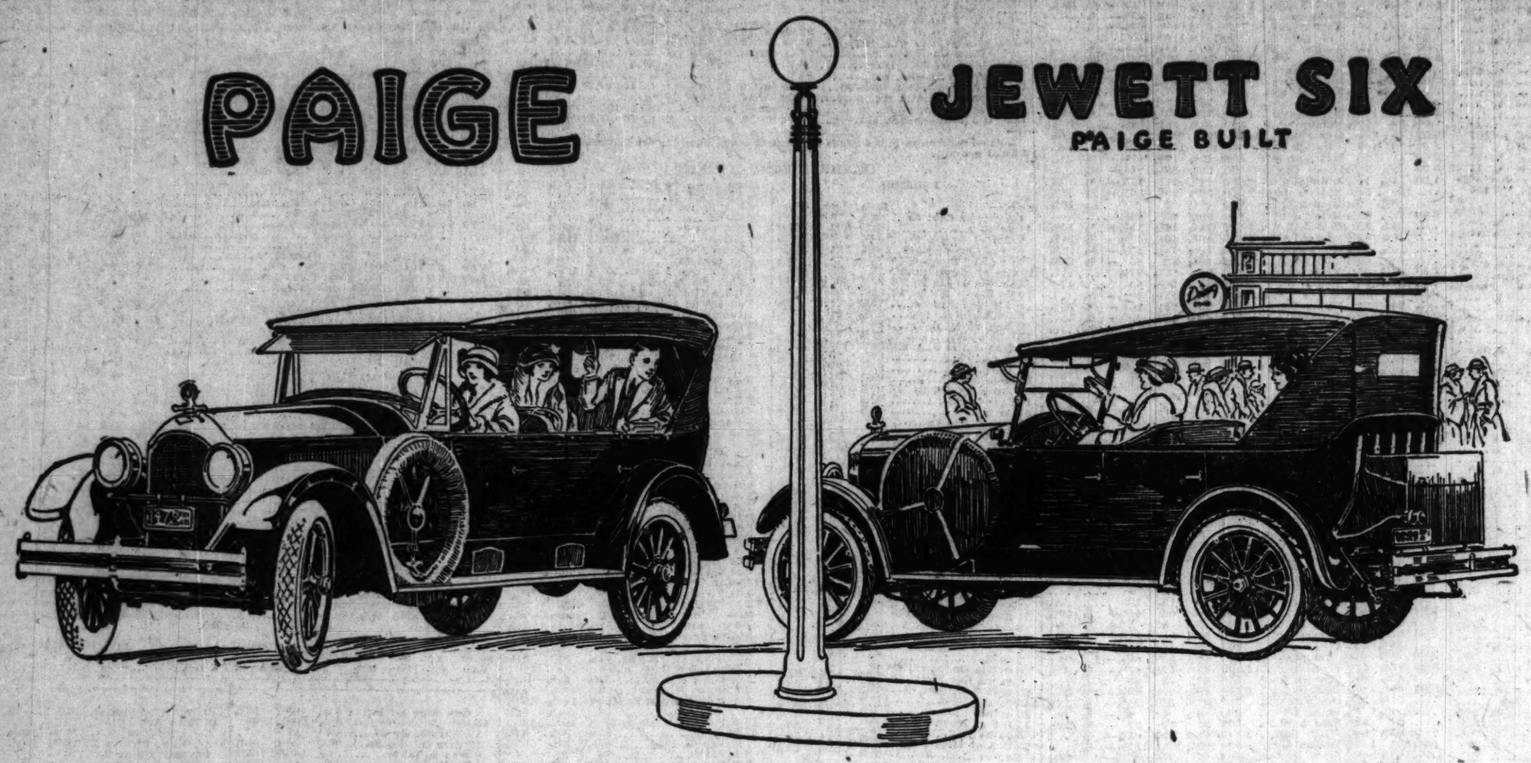
PAIGE

JEWETT SIX
PAIGE BUILT



310% Increase In Sales!

IN JANUARY, FEBRUARY AND MARCH, 1923

Three Times as Many People Selected Paige and Jewetts as in the Same Months of 1922

AND we could sell twice as many if we could make them. For Paige and Jewett sales are governed only by what we can produce. As far ahead as we can see Paige and Jewett will go through 1923 with an increase in business never before witnessed in the industry.

It took the public nearly a year to find out how good the Jewett is. This Paige-designed, Paige-built, moderate size six is the huskiest built car of its size. It has the biggest motor ever put in a car of its size—50 horsepower. And so in spite of its sturdy construction it is the most active car you ever tried out in a speed brush—5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds. Try it.

Paige-Timken axles front and rear. Ball-bearing steering spindles. Springs 80% the length of the wheel base. Paige-type clutch and transmission prevent motor stalling and make gear changing so easy you can drop from high to second at 30 miles an hour. If you want to drive the best car $1065 ever bought now is the time to buy.

Our Ideal Paige—long the Most Beautiful Car in America—is now more beautiful and enduring than ever. Richness you can see and feel—not a piece of imitation leather in the entire car. The body made proof against squeaks and rattles by double strips of patent leather which prevent metal touching metal or wood.

The Paige 6-70 motor with silent timing chain and high-pressure oiling system possesses silence which will endure—power that will not diminish. With rear springs more than five feet long, Paige-Timken axles front and rear, ball-bearing steering spindles, and new clutch and transmission—our Ideal Paige rides and drives as no car ever could before.

Paige is equipped with two extra cord tires, two bumpers, shock absorbers, gasoline gauge on dash, motometer, automatic windshield wiper—everything you could think of. By far the finest car Paige ever produced, and fully equipped it costs only $2450. (364-20)

THE POTTERS

PROLOGUE.

Let us pause and look into the Potter household, now that Ma and Pa have gone to New York and left the administration of the old nest (known slang for marital domicile) to Mamie and Bill . . . merely they might as well have installed in the place that equally wonder pair, Weer and Tear . . . how is Mamie getting along with Bill, and vice versa—(I not more so) . . .

SCENE ONE.

The Baby has been farmed out to friends who have cunning little nuisances of their own . . . if you have four small wreckers of your own breed, one more makes little difference . . . it is morning and time for breakfast, but not breakfast time, as you will now see:

MAMIE (carefully guarding one cup of coffee, properly aspired and creamed, and two slices of toast, buttered): moaning won't get you anything. There's the kitchen.

BILL (outraged): I gotta cook my own breakfast?

MAMIE (calmly): Absolutely, Mr. Gallagher. I told you last night if you didn't help with the dishes you could roll your own food.

BILL (injured): It's an outrage! That's what it is. (Eyeing toast greedily, which Mamie continues to munch with maddening gusto.) I hope it chokes you.

MAMIE (smiling at him): It won't. Sorry.

BILL (changing tactics): Aw c'mon, boil me some eggs, anyway. Gee! I gotta eat, don't I?

MAMIE: I don't see why?

BILL (aggrieved): You don't see why? You'd like to see me starve, I guess.

MAMIE (thoughtfully): No, I don't believe I would. But then, that doesn't prevent you from starving where I can't see you. (Brightly.) That's a good idea. Go down in the basement and starve. That would be the thoughtful thing to do.

BILL (sadly): If Red only knew what he's letting himself in for. (Flaring up.) I wouldn't have you if you were lined with diamonds.

MAMIE (brightly): I can depend on that, can I?

BILL: You sure can. Give me a piece of the toast, won't cha?

MAMIE: No. (Continues reading news with exaggerated interest.)

BILL: Then give me a piece of the paper, will you?

MAMIE: No. You might eat it. (Turns page.) Listen to what it says here: "It is generally admitted throughout the medical fraternity that American people eat too much breakfast. No other nation eats such heavy meals in the morning. This habit, as much as any other, is helping to ruin the digestion of our people. As Ben Franklin once said, 'Do not dig your graves with your teeth.'" There now, see that? (Finishes last piece of toast and washes it down with last draft of coffee.) Instead of squawking at me for not getting you any breakfast, you should thank me.

"Gee! I gotta eat, don't I?"

BILL (savagely): Eat so. I'll cook my own breakfast. I can boil eggs.

MAMIE (sweetly): What a brain!

BILL (starting for kitchen): Yeh, and I can make coffee, too, smart aleck. And toast. And I don't have to burn it and scrape it off in the sink, neither.

MAMIE (putting on hat and coat): Good hunting, old deah.

BILL (from the kitchen): Where's the eggs?

MAMIE (from the door): Do you mean where are the eggs?

"O! Q! Tell him not to kill us."

BILL (loudly): Eggs, I said . . . and bread. And coffee . . . gosh darn it . . . the coffee?

MAMIE: Sorry, old deah. That's all there is, there isn't any more. (Front door slams.)

BILL (rushing to door): HEY, THERE! (Stops and returns for hat and coat dejectedly.) Wait'll I tell Ma. (Fervently.) Big stiff!

SCENE TWO.

The scene is New York City, and the time is the evening previous to the above episode . . . Pa and Ma have arrived at the Grand Central, and, to the unanimous disapproval of the red caps, are firmly carrying their own luggage . . . a long line of decrepit taxis, in every stage of senile decay, lean dejectedly against the curb . . . Pa and Ma enter . . . the taxi groans the entire course boldly . . . the driver stares evilly at Pa, slams the door violently, and a tired shudder passes through the ancient vehicle . . .

PA (timidly, to driver): Do you know where the Astorbilt hotel is?

DRIVER (hoarsely): Tell me where you wants go, and stop asking me riddles.

PA (subdued . . . they're not like this at home): The Astorbilt please.

MA (wearily): I'll be glad to get a good night's sleep. You tossed and turned all night

PA (half aloud): Gosh, I hope we can get a room. Mebbe I should've reserved somep'n.

(Taxi, with an agility that belies its feeble appearance, clatters between rushing street car and huge truck . . . misses total annihilation by a whisper.)

MA (weakly): Oooooooh! Tell him not to kill us.

PA (oblivious, watching meter, which seems inspired by St. Vitus himself): The robber! One-twenty already. (To driver, suddenly.) Hey, where ya goin'?

DRIVER (over his shoulder): Ya said the Vanderritz, didn't cha?

PA (violently): I told you the Astorbilt. Watcha tryin' to do? Run up a big bill?

(Driver sullenly swings taxi around in front of dizzy motorbus, passes street car on wrong side, sways drunkenly between two coal trucks, finally brings up with sickening jerk in front of huge hotel . . . cab door opened by impressive dignitary with the rank of a rear admiral, at least . . . his hallowed touch seems to glorify the furtive, panting little contraption from which Pa and Ma totter . . . Pa pays driver with a wince . . . does not tip him . . . driver gives him murderous glare . . . baggage disappears from sidewalk without a trace . . . Pa and Ma herded through rapidly revolving door into huge, brilliantly lighted lobby seething with a madly scurrying mob of new arrivals . . .)

PA (dazed): You sit down till I register and get a room.

MA (dizzy): Where'll I sit?

PA (baffled): Anywhere.

MA (plaintively): I'm going to stand right here. Don't you lose me.

(Pa gets into one of the long lines leading to desk . . . after interminable wait, reaches clerk, who greets him with all the warmth of a callbut on ice.)

CLERK (crisply): Reserved something?

PA (stammering): N-n—no-oh. Watcha got for two?

CLERK (passing out registration cards): Sign here. Single or double? Next.

PA (panicky): Wait a minute. Double. M'wife and me.

CLERK (coldly): Have nothing now. May have something later. Next.

PA (more panicky): Wait a minute. How much is it for double rooms?

CLERK (icily): Eighteen to twenty-four.

PA (weakly): Dollars?

CLERK (firmly, to next man, crowding Pa out of way): Reservation?

MAN (in a voice that seems used to giving orders): Yes; John G. Billings, Chicago. Two suites adjoining. Outside.

CLERK (respectfully): Yes, sir. Yes, sir. We have them. Here's a telegram, too.

PA (plaintively): Haven't you nothing a little more—more——

CLERK (severely): I told you we have nothing just now. May have something after six. (To Billings, fawningly.) Yes, Mr. Billings. Will you go right up?

PA (after a long search for Ma, who decided to go somewhere and sit down): Why didn't you stay where you said you was?

MA (nerves all frayed): Where did you go all this time? Let's go to our room.

PA (crossly): We haven't any room.

MA (crossly): What have you been doin' all this time? You don't mean to tell me they haven't got any rooms in this big place

PA (more crossly): Maybe you can get him to give you one. How much do you think the robber wants?

MA (firmly): Don't you give him a cent more than five dollars a day for the both of us.

PA (laughing a bit wildly): Five dollars! Ha ha! Thass rich! They only want eighteen to twenty-four dollars.

MA (scared): Oooh migod, let's get outta here. (Looks all around wildly.) Where's our suitcases?

PA (looking around, completely baffled): I dunno. (Rushes up to clerk.) Where my suitcases?

CLERK (coldly): Are you registered here?

PA (confused): No—o—o. (Clerk ignores him contemptuously.)

PA (to passing bellboy): Where's my baggage?

BELLBOY (crisply): See the captain.

PA (helplessly): Where is he?

(But the bellboy has disappeared.)

(Tall, stealthy individual, obviously a secret service man trying unsuccessfully to keep the fact a secret, approaches Pa . . . questions him suspiciously . . . finally solves problem of missing baggage . . . it was checked, that's all . . . Pa gathers it and Ma and seeks another hotel . . . also crowded . . . tries another . . . finally lands small, dark inside room for twelve dollars per day

"Haven't you nothing a little more—more——" price keeps him awake long after Ma has succumbed to the trials and tribulations of her first evening in New York.)

SCENE THREE.

Morning in the Potter room at the Biltadore . . . Pa and Ma are luxuriating in a late sleep . . . it's been a long time since they could do this, and they feel almost jelly when they finally roll out . . . Ma is intrigued by all the trick accessories in the bathroom; suggests breakfast in their room . . . Pa mumbles something about going out for a little air, meaning hunting up some little restaurant outside the hotel where they believe in God and simple addition . . . objection overruled . . .

MA (guilelessly): Just order some eggs and toast and coffee and half a grapefruit apiece. That can't cost much. (Oh, can't it?)

PA (half to himself): We could go out and get it for half the price, and the air would do us good.

MA (beseechingly): Don't be such a cheap skate. An egg's an egg, no matter where you get it.

PA (moodily): I know. But you'll think they're eagle's eggs when you get the bill. You wait and see.

(Breakfast arrives in solemn state . . . a great to-do of salvers and trenchers and covers and snowy napery and shining silver and cracked ice . . . the vulgar act of eating seems almost a profanation and a depravity . . . waiter pockets small coin proffered by Pa with becoming well bred disdain.)

MA (eating hallowed eggs with a touch of timidity): My, wouldn't it be wonderful to live like this always!

PA (practically): On soft boiled eggs and toast and coffee? Not for me.

MA: No; I mean in style like this. (Catches sight of bill, which has been hiding shamefacedly under napkin.) This must be what you call the bad news. (Looks at it and gives startled scream.) Ooo, migod, look, LOOK!

PA (steeling himself for the shock): How much?

MA (quavering): Three dollars and seventy-five cents! Why, there ain't fifty cents' worth of food here. It's an outrage!

PA (to whom the coffee has now lost all taste): I told you so.

MA (to whom the eggs have suddenly grown profitless and flat): It's an outrage, I tell you! It's an outrage!

PA (sadly): Don't tell me. I know it. (Bitterly.) And this is only the beginning. They've only started on us down here in this town.

MA (moaning): Ooooh!

(And That's That—Until Next Sunday.)

—How They Look in Civies—

HELEN SPENCER

of "Scandals of 1923."

MISS VAUGHN has four favorite colors—black, blue, gray, and red—and four favorite kinds of fur—sable, mink, ermine, and squirrel. And that's that!

For all time. She thinks blue and gray is the most attractive combination of colors in the language. She has on a black velvet dress with a white lace collar and small pieces of squirrel set in over the hips like miniature sable bags. A blue haircloth hat with perky wheat ears of the same color, black suede and patent leather slippers pumps, and a great, soft squirrel cover-all are the beginning and end of the picture.

Miss Vaughn hates long skirts and is going to wear hers six inches from the floor. She says she doesn't give a hang whether the styles change again or not.

She doesn't like sport clothes, either—perhaps it is that she tends toward the more luxurious of the species, clothes. She loves diamond bracelets—her two she boasts. Hats should always be of somber colors and dresses may be bright on occasion, but darker things are in much better taste, she thinks.

MILDRED BOOTH
of "The Rear Car."

"I USUALLY fall in love with the very things I can't wear," sighed Miss Booth, who is Mrs. Pat Campbell off the stage, niece-in-law of the Mrs. Pat Campbell. "I try on all the stunning, long, drapy, vampish things I like best, and decide that perhaps I can get away with them, and then too late I find I can't. Too late, you know, after they're all bought and at home." She sighed again, but the smartness of her dress belied the sadness of her tone.

It is of dark blue Poiret-twill, severely straight, trimmed about the round back and down the left side opening in quarter inch tucks. Deep jade soutache braid in an elaborate pattern covers the wide, slashed sleeves from the wrist to above the elbow, repeating the color of the carved jade belt buckles. An antique gold and jade ornament is hung on a slim black cord.

Miss Booth's hat is a small cloche of green taffeta, the brim faced with matching straw. The crown and upper brim are covered with embroidery and braiding in orange and green. Her scarf is sable, and her shoes of sand suede trimmed in darker brown leather.

For evening dresses Miss Booth likes orchid, blue or pink, and as a proof brought out an adorable frock of pale peach taffeta, bouffant of skirt and tight of bodice, trimmed in separated spangles of tiny rosebuds of old blue, on a gold lace background.

ANNA MARSTON
of "Up the Ladder."

MISS MARSTON doesn't always look as serious as this. It's partly the reflex of playing the companion flapper in "Up the Ladder" and partly the dignity of her dress, which is a treasured heirloom and her best dancing frock at the same time.

The skirt is made of one great piece of real lace—rose point appliqué and duchesse combined—wrought with infinite pains and boasting more years than can its youthful wearer. The foundation and bodice are of satin, of just the ivory tint to which old lace mellows, the latter being made with a suggestion of a surplice. The neck line is low and square, the sleeves tiny caps of the lace. There is no girdle, but hanging from the waistline at the left front is a cluster of meadow green and gold grapes, backed by creamy ostrich flues. The skirt is hooped over each hip. Flat heeled silver sandals and matching hose are worn with the dress. The effect of the ivory and silver of her costume and the rosiness of her skin and yellow gold of her hair makes a charming picture.

Miss Marston says she likes straight, simple lines the best, especially for the street. She doesn't indulge in tailored suits, preferring one piece dresses. And blue and green, separately or together, are the colors of her heart.

ANN MILBURN
of "Blossom Time."

BLUE is certainly the popular color this week! Everybody likes it, everybody wants it. Miss Milburn didn't hesitate an instant to name it as her favorite, with green a close second. She's a canny chooser, too, with her Irish blue eyes and brown, curling hair.

Beneath the short, full coat of sealskin and beaver in which she is shown here, she is wearing a simple dress of black velvet. The skirt is cut moderately wide, the deep scallops at the lower edge being faced in royal blue satin. The waist is a close fitting basque, buttoned up and down the back with big jet buttons. The sleeves are elbow length, and the neck is square, collared in Irish lace.

The small hat is of deep blue panne velvet, slightly peaked in front, and trimmed with three bands of pale gray Persian lamb cloth. Black stockings and kid slippers finish the costume.

Miss Milburn says that she designs all her own clothes, sketching just what she wants each time she is to have something new, and then hurrying with it to a dressmaker. She feels that in that way she isn't going to find a dozen other dresses just like hers wherever she goes. She keeps her wardrobe small, and therefore feels the necessity of having it "different."

RUTH HAMMOND

IN SPITE of the fact that she takes the part of a knickerbockered, altogether spankable flapper in "Up the Ladder," Miss Hammond declares she doesn't like clothes suitable to an ingénue, but prefers smart, sophisticated things, svelte of line, and thoroughly grown up.

The skirt of the dress in which she is sketched above is red canton crêpe. (By the way, you wouldn't guess from her smile that she was suffering from a badly sprained right arm, would you?) The blouse is dark blue Chinese silk printed in red. It is V-necked, with a suggestion of a collar; and not even a suggestion of sleeves. A narrow piece of the crêpe forms the loose belt, which folds over once on the left hip. Her piquant little hat is of a delectable shade of lavender, her stockings and sport shoes cinnamon, the latter trimmed in darker kid.

Her spring suit this year is of navy blue poiret twill, with a long, scant skirt and short Eton jacket. The sleeves are belled, and the only trimming is rows of narrow looped and knotted braid. With it she wears a black satin tricorne hat, beige hose, and patent leather slippers.

Miss Hammond says that, although she likes orchid or blue for evening, her special dancing frock just now is of black accordion plaited crêpe chiffon, beaded in jet and washed in jade green. A wreath of tiny green leaves for her hair, nude stockings, and green slippers complete the costume.

SALE of MENS SUITS
At About ½ Price

A repetition of our "After Easter Sale" of a year ago

IF we are to judge by previous performance this is ONE sale that will attract every thrifty man in Chicago and vicinity. Facing the fact that this sale a year ago was the biggest in the history of our store, we propose to out-do it this year by placing on sale at a very low price.

All wool finely tailored suits for men and young men

Hundreds of hand tailored garments from our stocks and several hundred more from a recent purchase will be sold at this ridiculously low price. The price we paid was about half price.

Because of this we are not allowed to advertise the maker's name. However, the low price quoted should not mislead you. You are not buying a fifteen dollar suit, but a suit worth double that amount. Single and double breasted models.

Sizes 33 to 46 in. chest including stouts and slims

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Dry on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me, I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them. It is all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is a popular belief, apparently shared by not a few physicians, that the amount of hair growth is readily influenced by external factors. Cutting the hair, for example, is commonly supposed to make it grow better, or that cold cream is likely to cause an excess development of hair and that sunburn and tan are also very favorable to hair growth.

The cause of excessive hair growth in some persons, too, is a matter of uncontrolled data. Everything from the use of cold cream to cocktails and cigaret smoking is liable to be blamed for the condition.

Quite recently Georges Marin, a French scientist, stated that the number of women having slight growths of hair on their lips and chins has increased 10 per cent. Some professors say that the indications for the near future are that women will become bearded and mustached. While scientists are investigating why hair develops on women's upper lips and chins, arms and legs, opinions run riot as to causes.

The increasing masculinism of modern women is making them like men, some urge. Cocktails and cigaret smoking are inducing the growth of hair; other drag up statistics of unknown origin. Chemicals used as cosmetic ingredients are blamed. And the popularity of veils is menaced with accusations that they are worn to cover embarrassment from silken ravages on the face.

Grease Won't Grow Hair.

After an investigation on the subject I have learned that the cause of this masculine characteristic in some women still remains to be discovered. The certain widespread ideas as to hair growth do not rest upon a substantial basis and there is need for careful work before we can know what are the real factors regulating the growth of hair.

I interviewed some of the big skin specialists on the subject.

Dr. Howard Fox, among them, said: "No one knows just why one female tends to show this male characteristic, for a male characteristic it is. No one can tell why some people have a tendency to hairy growth while others have smooth skin. But to blame it upon drinking and smoking is preposterously ridiculous. Why, the women on the continent of Europe and England have been smoking for years—long before it became wholesalely fashionable in this country. So a recent increase noted over there would not hold water.

"Vaseline will not grow hair. Not a grease in the world will," he added. Not even bear's grease, which has been used as a hair grower because the bear is a hairy animal.

Asked if shaving was conducive to a thicker and coarser growth, Dr. Fox said: "There is a question about that. I don't think shaving does increase the hair growth with some people."

Dr. L. Duncan Bulkley, senior physician to the New York Skin and Cancer hospital, answered my query as to the cause of this unwelcome hair and as to whether or not vaseline and shaving developed it: "No one knows the cause of it. It is something still to be discovered. Every fat does not grow hair. Cold cream does not. Vaseline does not. Olive oil does not. Glycerin may. Shaving does coarsen the hair and promotes fuller growth."

Electric Needle Safest.

Dr. Bulkley was, I believe, the discoverer of the electric needle to remove superfluous hair, which he claims to be the safe and sure method of its disposal.

"Sometimes in the beginning of the treatment the electricity will stimulate other hair glands in the region to activity, but it can all be caught up with by treatments.

"I have seen cases respond successfully to peroxide of hydrogen administered full strength. It bleaches the hair, and has been observed to destroy the growth in time. With the electric needle, however, you can get to the bottom of the papilla from which the hair grows out."

Dr. H. Lyons Hunt, cosmetic surgeon, claims shaving does stimulate hair growth, and calls attention to the frequency with which men must shave. He claims olive oil stimulating, also cocoanut oil, citing Philippine men and women as possessing most luxuriant hair growth due to their rubbing this oil on their hair and using the cocoanut fruit for food as well.

"Perhaps the belief that cold cream is at fault is more due to the stimulation of massage," he said. "Oily skins are more productive of hair growth. People with dry skins are little troubled. Swarthy people are more subject to superfluous hair than others.

Transplants Gland.

"But hair unquestionably absorbs a certain amount of stimulation from the body. And hairy growth has a close relation to the glandular system."

Dr. Hunt cited a case reported in the American Journal of Endocrinology of a man who had never shaved until at 35 he underwent a gland transplanting operation and was shaving within three months. A woman upon whom one of these operations was performed, who came directly under his observation, showed an amazing improvement in the growth of her hair in six months.

The Washington university school of medicine provided a fund for an investigation in the study of hair, undertaken by Mildred Trotter of St. Louis, Mo.

Her observations are based upon living and, presumably, normal persons who submitted themselves for experimentation.

Miss Trotter experimented with petrolatum on a right eyebrow, applying it to the subject twice a week for four months, giving the left no treatment. In each case a generous supply of the petrolatum was rubbed on thoroughly, but not vigorously enough to cause reddening of the skin. The aim was to give the petrolatum opportunity to show its own effect, without introducing any complication due to massage.

At the end of the period the two symmetrical regions in each subject were compared very carefully, and absolutely no difference was detected. After another period of four months, during which time no applications were made, the previously treated regions were still identical in appearance with the corresponding regions on the left side. Miss Trotter claims this as proof that the use of petrolatum does not cause the short, downy hairs to become either coarser or longer; that it does not stimulate growth of the eyebrow.

A FRIEND IN NEED by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend to need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

ANOTHER GOLDEN AGE.

EASTER—the season of joy and happiness, the time when we welcome the coming release from winter's grip, and the day hallowed with the most sacred of memories for all Christian peoples! And what a joy it is for this department to proclaim that in all our happiness, we have not forgotten those less fortunate!

The winter now closing has been trying indeed to thousands—thousands who lacked comfortable homes, fuel, clothing, and even food. Now that this season of bitter trial is closing, this department can bear testimony that today, thanks to the good people who have answered appeals printed in the Friend in Need column, there are hundreds upon hundreds of individuals and families who are facing the advent of spring with a courage and faith they never dared hope to possess again.

There are scores also who would not have seen spring at all, in our opinion, but for this help. Here it is a family, carried through a desperate period of want caused by the illness of the breadwinner; there it is a wife who lost her husband while a baby was expected, and whose child has been started handsomely in life by generous and sympathetic gifts and help.

The spirit of helpfulness, brotherly love, and friendliness is alive, and as responsive, among the people of Chicago, as it ever was in any "golden age" of generosity, and the hundreds of cases this department has seen bear convincing witness to the statement.

On behalf, therefore, of all these people to whom new hope and courage have been given, we take pleasure in offering our Easter greeting. May your happiness on this occasion of rejoicing be equal to the happiness your generosity and sympathy have conferred upon the poor and needy!

Asks for Others.

"I come to you to ask again if you will help me in my work for the needy. I have on my list several poor children and several old people who are in need of warm clothing. I shall be grateful if you will print a plea on their behalf. You have been so kind heretofore in assisting me in my work for others that I trust you will not think I am presuming on your goodness. I do not feel financially able to make purchases for these needy ones, but I will gladly sew, mend, or make over for them anything that can be used for their comfort. My best wishes to you.

"N. M. N."

Thank you for your good wishes, N. M. N. I sincerely hope the needy friends for whom you plead will be given help and soon.

Who Can Help Her?

"A woman I know is a patient in a hospital and her children cannot go to see her, as they have practically no clothes. She is a widow with six children, and only one is able to work—a girl of 18. The other five are boys whose ages are 13, 12, 10, 8, and 2. They wear shoes sizes 4, 4½, and the baby size 7.

"When the father died the baby was only 7 weeks old, and since then the mother has struggled along, but now she is sick, and probably will not be on her feet for some time. She is a willing worker, and says she would be able to make over either men's or women's clothing into little lads' clothes.

"I know you have many calls for aid, and so perhaps you will not be able to help this woman, but it would mean so much to her to have a little assistance. A. FRIEND."

This plea from "A Friend" makes its own appeal. Can you help?

Widow with Three Children.

"I have been reading of all the good things you do for the needy. I want to ask if anyone has some clothing her children has outgrown. I am a widow, and have three children—a girl 15, and boys 5 and 3. I have rheumatism. I worked every day up to the time I got sick, which was nine weeks ago. MRS. E. L. P."

This is a pathetic case, and the family must have help. If anyone has any kind of clothing for the mother or children, I shall be happy to hear from her.

Patient in Sanitarium.

"I have been a patient in a tuberculosis sanitarium for nineteen months. I am unable to work at present, and am in need of clothes. I wish some one could spare some old clothes, size 36 or 37 chest measure; trousers 33 around the waist, and 28 in length. J. G. B."

What masculine reader will lend assistance to J. G. B.?

Draws All Day Long.

"I have heart's disease, and cannot work. I am 18, and all I do is draw all day long. I wonder if among the readers of your column there is someone who has materials no longer needed which would be most useful to me? I thank you in advance and assure you I shall be grateful for any art materials I may receive. J. M. M."

I hope J. M. M. may have the materials he desires. His address is at your service.

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

GRAY hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhance its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

This is the famous new Model J Napanee Dutch Kitchenet, four feet wide. To be had in snow white or beautiful French gray enamel—or golden oak. Other new models, 36-inch and 40-inch wide, in all finishes, also included in this big sale at most tempting prices. Take a year to pay.

Hurry! or you'll be too late for our great Co-operative Sale

Do not miss this opportunity of the year—the most wonderful chance you've ever had to secure a genuine latest 1923 model Napanee Dutch Kitchenet at an amazingly low price, on ridiculously easy terms.

Actually these Napanees are the finest kitchen cabinets on the market—in every way—construction, beauty and practical arrangement. You will grant that as soon as you see them.

Although we secured an immense quantity of them direct from the factory, demand has exceeded all expectations. Come in, therefore, at once—while a good selection is yet to be had. There is no time to lose.

Come early this week and judge for yourself if you ever saw any kitchen cabinets as fine, or were ever offered values and terms to compare.

Come in and See How Napanees Excel

Dustproof Drop Curtain—slides up out of sight. Has dustproof canvas back. No dirt-catching slot across front of cabinet.

Firm, Flat, Porcelain Top—framed underneath to be permanently flat and firm and never buckle out of shape. Does not bob up and down when pulled out.

Can't Come Apart Construction. Corners locked permanently together by 3-way joints. Bases braced front to rear. Built so as not to get loose and wabbly, despite kitchen heat.

Rigid Upper Cupboard—rests solidly on base.

Finely Finished White Interior—three coats best white enamel. Won't peel. Easily cleaned.

High Grade Buffet Drawers. Hardwood. Can never bind or stick. Drawer partitions locked in.

"Easy Fill" Flour Bin. Nothing mechanical to get out of order. Fills over table top—prevents waste. Most practical of all flour bins.

Built to Last. Napanees are everywhere admitted to be the best built cabinets on the market. Made entirely of properly seasoned oak, white maple and hardwood veneer (instead of cheap gum wood).

Many Other Advantages—too numerous to list. Must be seen. Come in and examine them all!

Amazingly low prices and Terms take a year to pay

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life," Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Mercury Has a Fall.

I was the president's stenographer and the oldest girl in the office, so was conscious of my dignity.

One day when we thought all the men were gone for a long lunch hour the girls began to amuse themselves by striking the poses of various statues.

Entering into the fun, I said, "I will be Mercury."

I stepped upon my chair, balanced myself nicely with one hand and one foot well up in the air like the breezy god when the door opened and in walked our president.

At the screams of laughter that arose from the girls I turned quickly, the chair whirled with me, and I fell, wounding my dignity almost beyond recovery. M. C.

The Nightie and Nine.

My most embarrassing moment occurred one day when my employer, a handsome man who often writes advertisements for newspapers, asked me to spell the word "ninety."

There is a glass partition between his desk and mine, and I was busily engaged writing some letters. I misunderstood him and spelled the word "nichtie," thinking he was engaged in writing an ad advertising infants' wear. What he really was doing was writing out a check for ninety dollars.

It was indeed a most embarrassing moment, but I must say my boss enjoyed a good hearty laugh at my expense. E. K.

Perhaps He Was.

While a freshman at college I fell below in my studies and had to see the dean. I rushed into his office, meaning to ask if he was busy, but my tongue failed me. "Is the bean dizzy?" I heard myself ask in a voice loud enough to be heard all through his office.

The janitor carried me out. E. N.

Such Ignorance?

I went into a grocery store to buy some eggplant for a neighbor. I told the clerk what I wanted and he asked me to pick a nice one out of the window. I didn't know what they looked like, and it certainly was embarrassing to admit it. M. C.

Too Bad.

While at college, a class mate came to my room every evening "to do our algebra together" as she expressed it, but unfortunately I was obliged to do all the work. I finally became tired of being imposed upon, so the next evening about the time for her to appear, I crawled under the bed and asked my room mate to tell her I was spending the evening out.

Anne came but did not linger long after being informed I would not return until late. She came back into the room again to get a pencil which she had forgotten, just as I was appearing from underneath the bed.

It was useless to try to make an explanation. I was never asked to assist her again. H. M. B.

Glad to Get Away.

I was in the music department of a department store. People were playing records on the small phonographs which were placed in various parts of the room. I decided to try some. I was not familiar with the piece, but now know from my experience that it contains harsh and loud tones representing thunder. I soon realized why every one was staring at me. My music was so loud it drowned out all the rest.

A kind clerk came to my assistance and asked if I wished to buy the record.

I meekly answered "Yes," paid him, and hurriedly left the place. O. S.

How Thoughtless of You.

After spending a long time in a hospital I finally got better and was ready to leave for home.

I said good-by to everybody I could think of and left the building with my folks. As I was about to step into the car my nurse came running out, calling, "Maurice, you forgot something."

"What?" I asked.

"Good-by," she said.

You can imagine that was and will be the most embarrassing moment in my life. M. B.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep your child's hair in a healthy condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and is soft, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces will last some one in the family for months. Ask your druggist gives you

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each child's saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Lee, The Tribune Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Aunty, telling the three children to go and play, and after a little while not hearing them, she wondered why they were so quiet. Opening the door, she saw them playing bride and groom. Alice was wearing a baby dress.

Aunty said, "Don't you want to play with them?" Alice said, "I is playing, only I is waiting till I is born." L. H.

Marie was visiting an aunt's house. Her aunt said, "When I come to your house, Marie, I will bring you some toys."

Marie digested this in silence for some moments, and just when her aunt was expecting no reply, she said, "Say, auntie, can you come over tomorrow?" M. L.

Edith's father is a traveling man and only get home once in every two weeks. Small Mellie, in speaking of the family, said: "Edith's papa isn't an every day one; he's a company papa." O. D.

We had several kittens to give away so I asked Audrey if she would like one.

She answered sorrowfully, "We haven't any place to park kitties." H. M. E.

Mary Alice came in from play and asked mother for some string.

When she was handed a piece of plain white cord she objected, saying, "That isn't the kind. I mean the one that's going to be rope." E. J. R.

We own a summer cottage near a lake.

In telling my little granddaughter, Virginia, that it would soon be time to go to camp again, she said, "I know it, grandma, it is only three pages more."

She meant on the calendar. B. V.

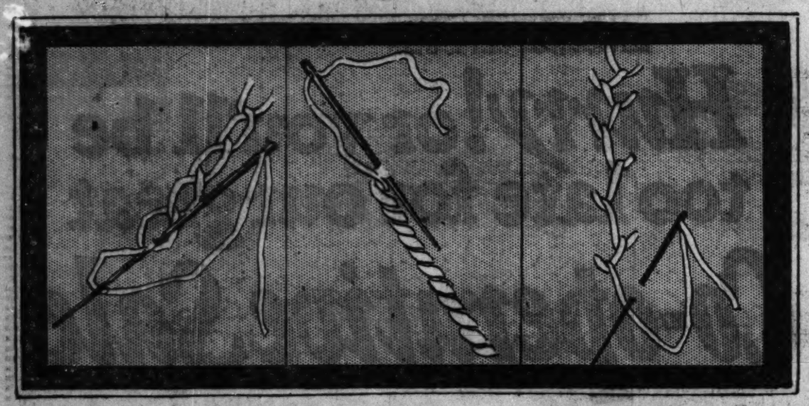
Emma, playing on the walk, fell, but got up and walked to the house.

I had been watching from the window and said, "Guess you didn't hurt yourself. I didn't hear you cry."

"Why, mamma, there was no one to cry to," she said. E. O. V.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE



SIMPLE STITCHES ADD CHARM.

THE feather stitch, outline stitch and chain stitch are all used more or less as decorative stitches for dresses, aprons, blouses, fancy work of different kinds, and baby clothes; and there may be some of the women who read these articles who may be glad to know about them.

The chain stitch is often used as an outline stitch and is worked towards you instead of from you, as is the outline. Begin at one end of the line to be worked, take a short, straight stitch toward you, put the thread under the needle and pull through, making a loop. Take the next stitch in the material, taking it inside the loop close to the point where the first one came out, put the thread under the needle and pull through. This is all there is to the stitch, continuing in this same manner until the place is covered.

The outline stitch is generally used where a narrower outline or line is desired than would be made by the chain stitch. In this stitch, the needle points toward you, never away from you. Take a short stitch to begin with, and make each stitch you take go back of the one before it about two-thirds of its length. Always keep the thread on the left side of the needle; and when following a curved line, make the stitches a little shorter than on a straight line.

In feather stitching one sometimes sees the single, double or triple stitching; but if the stitch is new to one, it will be better to begin with the single feather stitch. This stitch is worked toward you and is in a way like the buttonhole stitch. Bring the needle through from the wrong to the right side of the material, fastening it securely on the under side. Then take a short stitch toward you, diagonal to the line to be followed. The next stitch is taken on the opposite side of the line, and a little lower down. In double feather stitching two stitches are taken on each side of the line, instead of one, the second one being a fraction of an inch below the first one, and if the triple stitch is desired, simply take three on each side, following the same slant of each as in the double.

Keep on in this manner until the end is reached, and instead of using knots to begin and end with, try taking two or three small stitches over one another on the wrong side of the material.

The drawings that accompany this article will help in making the directions clear, and it is only practice that will perfect any work of this kind.

Quick Relief from Constipation

Use Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

A Famous Beauty

For 40 years—due to a French-type clay

By Edna Wallace Hopper

For two score years I have been a famous beauty. For 32 years a stage star. Yet I still play young girls' parts. And I look as young and winsome as I did when I began.

The reason lies in beauty helps for which I searched the world. I have supplied them to many others, and they secured like results. I know them to be the best helps in existence. So, by countless requests, I have now arranged so all who wish may get them.

A new white clay

Famous beauties have for ages used some facial clay. French experts first taught me to use it, many years ago. Then all clays were crude and muddy, as many are today. Since then science has found ways to multiply their benefits.

The clay I now use is based on 20 years of scientific study. It is that rare clay which experts proved to bring the maximum results.

It is refined clay, with the useless mud removed. It is white and clean and dainty. It embodies several added factors which bring multiplied results.

This Super-clay, which I call my White Youth Clay, will bring to anyone new ideas of what a clay can do.

New bloom at once

New beauty and new bloom come quickly to the user of Youth Clay. It purges the skin of all that clogs it—the causes of sallowness, blackheads and blemishes.

It brings the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy afterglow which so amazes and delights.

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. Thus many women, in 30 minutes, seem to drop ten years. And my smooth, baby-like complexion shows what constant use will do.

One must use clay

Every girl and woman should use clay in justice to herself. No one can look her best without it. None can keep her bloom and contour, as have I. Users of clay stand out in any crowd.

But the clay of today is this new-type clay—my White Youth Clay—which science has perfected.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Clay is now supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. Price, 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, which should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth, my famous liquid cleanser. Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

I urge every girl and woman to use these matchless helps. Let them bring you what they brought to me and mine.

Edna Wallace Hopper, Waukesha, Wisc.

SANITAS

MODERN WALL COVERING

The spirit of the dining room is hospitality —here the guest should feel at home

A SUCCESSFUL dining room is made quite as much by the surroundings as by what is placed on the table. Wall coverings can play a strong part in contributing the desirable elements, and are being chosen with a view to adding zest to the meal, just as flowers and soft lights contribute to its success.

Many are finding in Sanitas the secret of a new charm for the dining room. The flat-finish plain tints are restful. For those who prefer colorful pattern effects, the great variety of floral or decorative designs offers wonderful possibilities.

Sanitas is a finished product, made on cloth, machine-painted with durable oil colors. It can be applied on any wall, new or old, or on wall boards. It does not crack, peel, or fade, is impervious to grease and moisture. Dust and finger marks can be wiped off with a damp cloth. Sanitas is a truly hygienic and sanitary wall covering unequalled for durability.

4,500 Pairs of Beautiful Lace Curtains and Panels

IN A SENSATIONAL JUBILEE SALE AT 65c ON THE DOLLAR

We have scooped the market with an array of curtain values from four of the world's leading makers—by far the finest values we have ever spread before the throngs of a Jubilee Sale!

When this stock was bought it was freely predicted by those who know that the selling would prove a spectacle of merchandising rarely seen in the drapery trade. Briefly—the two chief factors in any great sale must be—new, high grade merchandise and prices that give women values they will remember for years. Both of these are overwhelmingly apparent in every item offered here tomorrow. Coming from four of the world's leading makers guarantees that no better weaving or designing is purchasable today. Every woman who needs one curtain or a hundred should come here tomorrow. Where possible, goods will be held until early May, on the payment of a reasonable deposit.

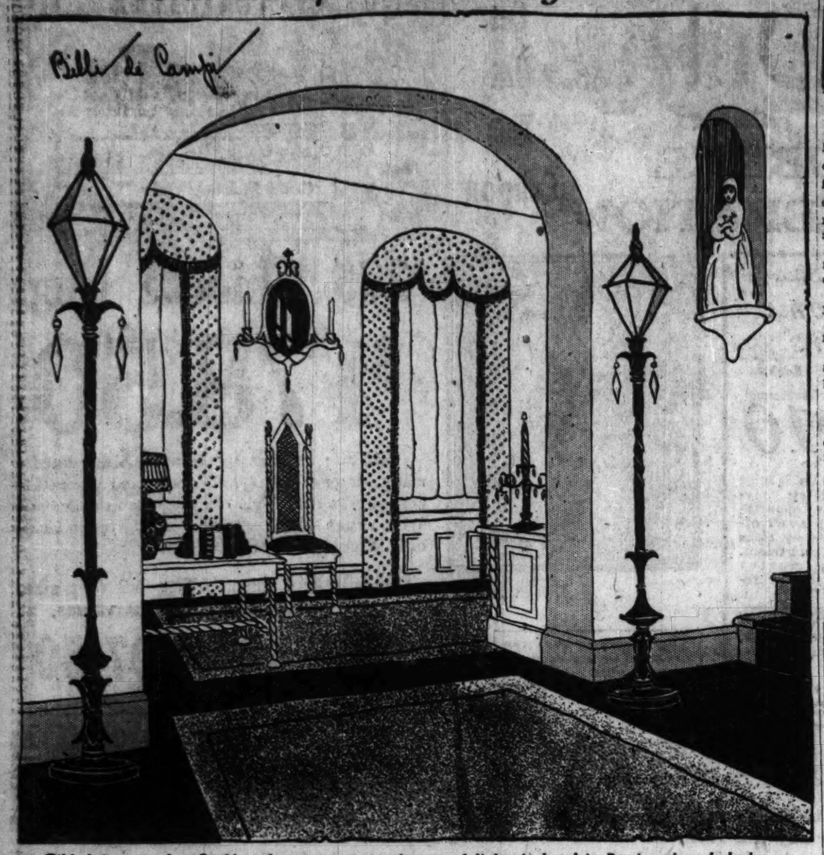
Metal Lamps a Pleasing Feature



Gilded iron torches flanking doorway support clusters of lights inclosed in Persian shaped shades.

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.

POLISHED mahogany lamp stands, which were "the rage" a few years ago, are rapidly disappearing; luckily, and gracefully shaped carved wood, polychromed, and metal lamps are being supplemented. Most popular are the metal types. The dignity, richness, and grace, so readily expressed in this sort of lamps, are sure to lend pleasing notes to the rooms in which they are used.

Hand wrought, and cleverly fashioned are two pairs of iron sconces. Their finish produces an antique, rust effect, with faint high lightings of gold. They are electrically equipped with waxy looking candle shaped lights, and are used on an oak paneled dining room wall.

Wall candelabra of forged iron, in a dull, natural colored finish, flank the doorway, and spread a welcoming glow so gratifyingly different from the disconcerting glare which is usually found, through the attractive entrance hall of a suburban home. Centered beneath each candelabra is a small console table. On one of these is kept a decorative inkwell and penholder, so that there is no confusion or delay necessitated for any of the bothersome "Sign here please" calls. A decorative bowl, holding a Japanese jade tree is placed on the other table. Directly opposite the door is a long, narrow hall bench, with a fitted, boxed cushion of deep red velvet. The floor is done in alternating nine inch squares of sand and black tile, and there is a sleek, black fur rug before the long bench. The walls are sand plastered, and are not tinted.

Placed beside a large, comfortable chair, in a young man's study, is a Pompeian reading lamp of dull brass. This lamp stands about five feet high. A gracefully curved arm is pivoted at the shaft so that the light may be raised or lowered easily. The shade is of parchment, finished at each edge with a narrow brass binding. Inside of these bindings are painted one and one-half inch bands, repeating the color of the chair upholstery, which is peacock blue. The remainder of the lamp is left its natural color. I have seen lamps and shades on this order as remarkably low priced as $4!

Topping a pair of antique brass torcheres were two amusing and interesting finials. These were of brass, too, circular in shape. Each was cut out from the middle and carved to represent a little fish, apparently chasing the tip end of his tail. All sorts of interesting finials, many of them made of colored glass, or clear crystal, may be bought separately, and then attached to different lamps about the house, giving them a new and finished touch.

Quite unusual is a floor lamp, with its accompanying shade, which I saw at a recent exhibition. The stand is made of iron, turned and touched with dull gold. The frame of the lamp shade is brass. There is a cut and antiqued border, in a decorative leaf design, around the top and bottom. The diameter of the lower band is about fifteen inches and the upper about six. Connecting these two are strips of brass, half an inch in width, carved in a simple, geometric pattern. This frame work of brass is filled in with thin, black silk over gold. Standing in an apartment living room, in which the color scheme is old gold and blue, this lamp carries out a quiet harmony, at the same time adding, by its unusual construction, a note of individuality.

A pair of dully gilded iron torcheres flanks the arched doorway, which leads into the living room in a large home. Clusters of lights are enclosed in the Parisian street lamp shaped shades, as illustrated. Each of these is made of several sections of slightly yellowed, chiseled glass, held together by strips of gilded iron.

On the dressing table, placed at either side of the mirror, in a young girl's room, is a pair of Dutch silver candlesticks. They have been wired and fitted with strong electric lights. There are oval shaped shields, of shirred, jade pink silk. These may be turned sidewards, so that a full light may be enjoyed, when it is time to "doll up."

Well suited for use on a console table, either in living room, dining room or hallway, is a pair of twisted brass candlesticks. On a walnut dining room console there is a pair of this sort, with tall candles of intense turquoise. Between the two is an old Russian samovar. Just above the table is hung a heavy plate glass mirror in a dull, polychromed iron frame. The window curtains of lemon yellow taffeta are striped with mauve and turquoise a shade lighter than the candles. Colorful turquoise china, bordered with mauve, enlivens the two glass-doored corner cabinets. The shields used on the sidelights are of lemon colored silk edged with turquoise.

Hanging in a dining room of the Spanish type is an old chandelier of wrought iron. This is composed of a circle of "rusted" iron, about the size of an ordinary cart wheel. Spaced at regular intervals, all the way around this circle, are cup shaped, iron pieces, each of which upholds a composite candle, with a flame shaped electric light. The whole is suspended by square linked iron chains, which are joined to one about halfway between the ceiling and the fixture.

Metal work lends itself remarkably well, too, to other accessories. One of the loveliest aquarium stands that I have ever seen is made of wrought iron, on which the relief work is polychromed. Attached to the tips of the scrolls and at other points of interest are varihued glass drops, repeating the colors of the polychroming. The large shallow cup shaped reservoir is of glistening luster glass, edged with a band of sea green enamel.

Another very decorative greened iron acquarium stand has an oblong shaped "bowl" of cut crystal. The top edge is left unfinished, so as not to be unnecessarily accented. This bowl is about the size of, and has the appearance of a twenty-five pound cake of ice, and the feathery green sea weed and colorful gold fish look cool and well preserved.

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wholly done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Glad for Eleven Years.

When my husband worked for a large corporation after the war they discharged the single men first, during the slack season. Then came the dismissal of the latest employed married men. My husband was kept on account of being a good mechanic.

One evening he said he would be retained for another month on account of being a married man.

I said, "Now, Bob, aren't you glad you are married?"

He said, "Dear, I have been glad for eleven years that I married you."

I guess that is the nicest compliment any woman in the world could possibly receive. R. S.

Tribute to Character.

The nicest compliment I ever received was a tribute neither to achievements, social gifts, learning, nor beauty. It was a tribute to character. When I was a senior in college one of my younger sorority sisters told me I represented to her all that a girl should aim to be, physically, intellectually and spiritually. M. J.

Through Daughter's Eyes.

A Sunday school class was told that Rebecca was considered the most beautiful woman in the world and the children were asked if they could think whom Rebecca resembled.

Several described the flapper of today, but my little girl answered (describing me): "She must have had dark eyes, black hair, red cheeks like my mother, because my mother is the most beautiful woman in the world." R. S. E.

Leaving Nothing Unsaid.

Recently a chum of my high school days visited me at my home. I had not seen her since our graduation.

A short time after her visit, I received a letter from my sister. It was the following passage that gave me the warm, happy glow in my heart, that is with me yet:

"Carrie stopped over two days with me. She mentioned her visit with you, and said that as a wife, mother, and hostess, you were perfect. What more could you want, Sis?" C. F. M.

Likes Her Voice.

I am the mother of two children, and my highest compliment was given by a little friend of one of my children.

I said, "Children, play whatever you like, but make just a little less noise."

"O," the little one said, "I think you have the nicest voice I ever heard. You talk the same way when you scold as you do other times." V. L.

Just as Well.

"I don't believe there is another one like you in the whole world!" mother cried in exasperated despair after laboring in vain to impress upon me the error of my ways.

My husband glanced up from his paper with a whimsical smile and remarked, "That's lucky for me, mother, otherwise I'd be doing time for bigamy." K. L. O.

His Highest Praise.

I had been coasting with my small boy cousin. When we reached home I stopped at his house to help him with some bird drawings, in which he was greatly interested.

"Gee, Ruth," he said as I was leaving, "it's too bad you had to be a girl. You're a regular fellow." R

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

MY Dearest: They have just gone —all those long, white coated doctors, with their bright, shining instruments of torture and their glum looking faces. One of them, the youngest, came to me at the last and took my hand and told me the decision of his brethren. The tears were in his eyes, but there were none in mine. I was brave, they said, but they did not know the reason.

It was bravery for you, dear. I dare not cry lest my courage forsake me altogether, and this letter must go to you tonight. After that will come the end of the world for me.

I might lie to you and say I no longer love you. That might be easier for us both, perhaps. But you would not believe me, for one thing, and, for another, I could not tell you such a wicked untruth. I love you more at this minute than ever in my life. And you love me so much that when this reaches you you will do what I beg you to do, which is: Abide by my decision.

Is it possible that only one week from today was to have been the day of our wedding? All the beautiful frocks and gifts are just as they were when I rushed out of the house that morning and into the automobile which in such a short hour lay a wreck with me by its side. A broken arm, an injured spine, and an invalid for life—and I'm only 23.

I went to the doors of heaven, and they would not let me in. I do not understand many things, dear, for God keeps his counsel till the fullness of time. Pain and sorrow have been awful mysteries to me, but they are to be my companions from this time on.

And now, my very dear, prove your love that has surrounded me so completely these last few weeks by accepting my final plea. Do not come to see me and so make it harder to bear. Each evening at twilight your presence will be with me, and then, at the end, which the youngest of the doctors said will mercifully come soon, I will send for you.

So until that day when I go behind the flaming barriers I will say good-by. And do you not doubt, for I do not, but that our love will be more beautiful than ever before.

Let me sign just once more the old beloved name you gave me.

ADOREE.

Exceptionally Pretty Rugs

at prices you can afford

Unusually beautiful they are. Charming of design, lovely in coloring. Soft and smooth of weave. Just the sort of rugs that you and every other woman of taste instinctively prefer.

Remarkably durable, too. Woven by a new process that produces a thick, closely woven rug that stands up remarkably under the hardest wear.

But, best of all, priced unbelievably low. So low that you can afford these fine floor coverings for every room in the house, without being the least bit extravagant.

In reality, you get two rugs for the price of one.

One side has a charming pattern; the other is finished plain, for variety. How delightfully attractive they are, you cannot realize until you have seen them.

All the better stores show these fascinating rugs. And salespeople like particularly well to show them. They know how wonderfully they wear, and how much their lovely designs and colorings, their softness and pliability, delight every woman. If you want your rug money to buy you more beauty and service than ever before, select Kimlark Rugs.

And whether you are buying yet or not, don't fail to see them soon.

Bring Sulphur Springs To Your Bath Room

How would you like to have the actual benefits of trips to widely-advertised hot and sulphur springs, without the usual expense? You can accomplish it right at home—with "Vita-Sulphur," a new, scientific discovery in which the wonderful curative powers of sulphur are converted into liquid form. Just a small quantity in your bath, at the cost of a few cents, produces the most wonderful bath in the world.

"Vita-Sulphur" baths are easy to take—clean and delightful. They give quick relief from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, Lumbago and Gout, purify the system, supply new tone and vigor, and give you "a new lease on life." You actually feel like a new person after a "Vita-Sulphur" bath.

Tone Up Your System and Clear Your Skin

"Vita-Sulphur" also affords quick relief from skin diseases. Applied locally, in connection with "Vita-Sulphur" baths, it not only heals but removes the cause of the trouble.

It will only cost you one dollar to convince yourself of the remarkable beneficial powers of "Vita-Sulphur." If your druggist cannot supply you, send us his name with a dollar and we will mail you, postpaid, a full size bottle.

BROWNATONE

Tints Gray Hair Any Shade

Use This Once a Week Have Pretty, Pearly Teeth

Don't believe because you brush your teeth regularly that they will be free from stains. Just take a careful look at them when there is good daylight. Why do you find yellow or black spots or tartar on them? Because the dentifrice you are using is powerless to remove such blemishes, no matter how often you scrub your teeth. Those stains are really discolored films, thin coatings of fat, which the usual pastes, creams, and powders fail to dissolve. You should polish your teeth with Once-a-Week Tooth Polish. This remarkable polish, obtainable at any drug store, will remove all stains and spots. Your teeth will then be pearly white and beautiful.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

EFFECTS THAT ARE FRENCH.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS. — [Special Correspondence.] — The charming women in the center do not look as if they had been taken from the life "actuelle," as the French would put it. At least, as I sit here in the romantic old world courtyard of our little hotel, which itself sometimes seems unreal to me, I can scarcely think these women suciently of this mundane, ordinary life of ours to be real. If they are not real enough for this setting, however, would they fit into one of those practical Chicago too-blowy-of-a-morning, too-hot-by-noon, too-freezing-at-evening, early spring days?

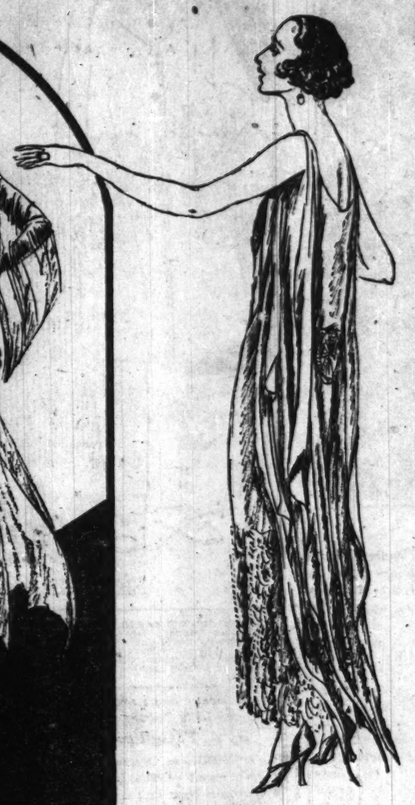
And yet as I take this rather supercilious attitude toward my favorite city, I hear another voice within me answering, "O, I don't know." It seems to me I remember days and occasions when the accompanying clothes would come handy in and round our shores. Take one of our June weddings, for instance, or one of our midsummer Lake Geneva charity fairs, or a Lake Forest blowout of some sort, and I seem to see in memory a whole gardenful of dresses not unlike these.

At any rate, one or both of them might contain an idea for a garden party or a wedding for the June to come. In Paris they are on display, so to speak, or in nightly appearance on two actresses. And the women of the polite world are making notes on them for their wardrobes for Deauville and other fashion setting places. The kerchiefs of the present, you know, are attributed to Deauville, but that is merely where they blossomed. A French actress offered them for consideration during the early spring on the stage, and the women of fashion who made them famous first saw them there.

The first dress in the panel is a charming ensemble of yellow mousseline de soie draped in such a way as to make it shorter in the back than elsewhere, and up this line of drapery runs a trailing vine of nasturtiums. They fall from the left hip and are in shadings that run the gamut of orange and yellows. An artistic conceit, don't you think?

Robe of orchid pink crêpe georgette with overdress of filet.

Yellow mousseline de soie decked with nasturtiums.



In tones of mauve chiffon with lavender roses at belt.

House frock of shrimp pink crêpe de chine with wing sleeves.

The straw hat is trimmed in the same flowers and in a ribbon which falls in streamers to the bottom of the gown.

The other dress is all in tones of mauve chiffon, and is made with the usual tight underskirt over which falls filmy, floaty, flyaway draperies, which if described as they actually are would appear to be scarcely more than a piece of fullness slashed up the left side. Or, if not slashed, then never closed in the first place. But such is the effect of airy lightness and unreality to the French things made for summer, one can scarcely describe them in mere everyday words. The French seem to regard the summer as a season to play with and not take seriously. Except that these people take their playtimes and their playthings the most seriously of all.

This costume has huge pink and lavender flowers on the low hat that seems almost to snuff the wearer out, and in the front at the waistline. The beads of jade green give a charming note of color to it all. The French can use color, you see, when driven to it. Always they prefer black, and some stick to it, but their sense for color is more than "tasty"—it is dramatic. Rumor has it that Alice Bernard is responsible for the costumes.

And so she is also for the one following. It is a rob d'interieur, which a French actress wears in one of her intimates scenes—or should one more exactly put it, in one of those scenes of intimacy which this people so adore? The dress is of crevatte pink crepe de chine, with long, winglike sleeves, which, of course, flit out behind her when she makes emotional actions, or even walks. But a French actress puts emotion into her walking.

The costume is flounced round the bottom with a wide fall of silver lace. A diamond ornament (or perhaps it is only of rhinestones, but what of it?) fastens the belt in the middle of the back.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell buys a lot of things of Molyneux. "English for the English," you will say in explanation of this. And yet they produce an effect that is pretty French, let me inform you—maybe it is because they are operating on French soil. This model I present, which comes first in the display, looks like one of the slinky, slazy things that the English wear so well, and yet with a French twist to it. An English idea with a little French chic introduced to it. You know we have always said English women would make the best appearance of any, dressing and all, if only they could introduce a little get-up-and-get into those languishing robes with trailing ends to them and sweeping lines.

Anyway, I think Mrs. Campbell looks pretty nearly ravishing in this gown which she wears in London in "Magda." The underrobe of orchid pink crepe georgette is draped in an attractive way up the right side. The low ceinture is of blue, green, and reddish purple beads with diamonds (or rhinestones) crossing them in the rickrack pattern which we noted the other day. The overdress, or panile, is of filet lace set into silver tissue, which is embroidered in the same orchid pink here and there. The two panels that fall from the shoulders to the floor are edged in the orchid pink crepe.

HOW TO WIN A MAN

By Doris Blake.

LAURETTE TAYLOR.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—In the art of winning men, in the opinion of Miss Laurette Taylor, whose comedy touch is as rare as her dramatic ability, a sense of humor is like unto the proverbial little widow—a dangerous thing.

"But what a foolish question to ask me," said this best loved actress on the American stage. "The only two I ever won I married. Had to to hold on to them."

"I'll tell you what to do. I wish you would do it for me. You go to some of the men who say they like me, and tell them I want to know what it is about me they like. And then come back and tell me. Really, I want to know.

"Ask them how it is that they seem to get terribly affected about me and then, just about when I begin to think what a killer I am, their grande passion suddenly tones down to a perfectly normal friendship and then into the homely verdict as they flit off to pastures new: 'That Laurette is an awfully nice girl.'

Keeps His Distance.

"Now, there is one man whom I have known for years and from whom I continually get messages of his high regard through a third person here and there. But he just keeps on courting me with the intense fervor one bestows upon a scarlet fever placard.

"I like to appease my vanity by telling myself that they are saving my husband's honor by most respectful conduct toward his devoted wife.

"I tell you, I don't know how to win them. It has been ever thus since childhood's hour. I've seen my fondest loves decay into perfectly jolly good friendships. I like it that way—because when you are as busy as I am it is all you have time for. But I am serious.

Because of Blue Eyes.

"I remember falling desperately in love with a boy who wore a blue tie which matched his blue eyes beautifully. But out I fell again when he came a-calling with a red tie which made his eyes look watery. My disillusionment came in the nick of time, for he was on his way to call on another girl and just dropped in to tell me what a nice girl I was.

"So I don't know how to win them. But I think how not to win them is to possess a too marked sense of humor.

"There was an Italian poet once possessed of a mad and burning passion for me, and he asked to sit at my feet that he might declaim his undying devotion in fitting poetic rhyme.

"But I could not keep my face straight, and what is uglier or more disillusioning than a Romeo gazing up into a wide open mouth? There is nothing uglier than the upper teeth from a floor position.

"'Aw, my Lauretta,' he cried, 'you do take the romance out of everything.'

"And when I was waiting breathlessly for Hartley [her husband, J. Hartley Manners, playwright and author of 'Peg o' My Heart' and other plays in which Miss Taylor has starred] some one trying to placate my anxiety said: 'He is waiting for you to stop laughing.'

"Seriously, though," continued this unusually clever person, whose sense of humor is developed to a degree that has established her as comedienne of highest rank, "I do think men are more sensitive than women, although they do not know it. You certainly cannot laugh at them if you want them to make love to you.

Breaking the News.

"What kind of man appeals to you?" I veered toward an angle which I thought would interest my male readers.

"I have been in love twice. Hartley knows nothing about it," confided the nimble tongued gamin with the old fashioned look about her reminding of one of Nell Gwynn's early portraits. She has the most delightful broth of a brogue and a rippling laugh—and a smile—which, in my opinion, would get the most hardened old cynic in captivity.

"Let's break the news to him this way, then," I urged her.

"All right. Well, one of them was the most heavenly dancer in the world. And I love to dance. O, and how he could dance. But the trouble was I had to keep on dancing. When he stopped, he was the most terrible vacuum, and so I couldn't stop at all for fear I'd fall out of love again.

Sat at Her Feet.

"And then there was another—a perfect Adonis, the most marvelous face and figure I have ever gazed upon. I was simply bewitched, fascinated, spellbound, because he was so utterly unconscious of his beauty, which by its nature should have made him a most sophisticated person. But it was his utter naïveté and simplicity which captured me. He would bring strings in his pockets and sit at my feet and make the most amazing sailor's knots. I hustled about to get books and read up on sailor's knots because I adored this remarkable person. It was the only thing he could do, but he could do it so well."

Of course, I do not wish to appear vulgar nor to suggest that man is susceptible in this particular regard, but sitting at Miss Taylor's ankles would make no glutton for punishment out of any one of male suasion. She sure do shake a "purty" pair. Her hands would not be hard "to hold" either. They are extremely lovely.

How He Proposed

How Can He?

Husbands will crow. At least, Jerry is still crowing about how I jumped at the proposal he made to me five years ago.

We were both seniors at college. We had played about, more or less exclusively, with each other for about three years. I liked Jerry, and he liked me. I hadn't thought of marrying any one else for two years or more, and neither had he, I guess, though he had never expressed his intentions to me, nor I to him. Neither of us was sentimentally inclined.

One evening just at dusk I was hurrying across the campus with a pair of tennis shoes under my arm after a game at the college courts, when I met Jerry. As he swung along toward the house with me after some singularly quiet moments, he noticed my tennis slippers and said: "Here, can't I carry those," and then without even glancing at me: "Won't you marry me, Ann?"

"Why yes! Thanks," I said as smoothly as I could, handing the slippers toward him and ignoring that last statement as irrelevent.

"I thought you would," said that remarkable man, ignoring the proferred slippers, as even more irrelevent, and—well that's the last I remember until we picked up the slippers and Jerry laughed and said: "I always knew you liked me, Ann, but I didn't think you'd jump for me so hard," with a diabolic grin.

And I leave it to you, did I jump?

In the Beautiful Moonlight.

When Paul and I were in college together we had many good times. In our senior year we were bride and groom in a mock wedding. After it was over we were ridin, home in the beautiful moonlight, when Paul turned to me and asked if I wouldn't play the same part in a real wedding. I answered I would. T. W.

MEN'S FASHIONS

FEW CHANGES IN STYLES OF TOPCOATS THIS YEAR.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — The in-between season is here, and if you have not already put the old winter greatcoat into retirement you will be doing so now, unless cold weather takes a new lease of life, as it has been known to do in April before. But the chances are that every one is more interested now in the spring topcoat, of light fabric and light color, than in the heavy dark affairs of the past months. Not that there is anything radically different in the new coats. Men's clothes make such gradual and unobservable changes that no one need ever fear to put on last year's coat or suit when a new season comes around.

The life of a coat runs through a period of fashion. For the best dressers are not always looking for something novel in the cut of their clothes They are more interested in the cut that is just suited to them than in whether it is one that is hot off the fashion griddle. The main point is to have variety. And the mere changing from a winter overcoat to a lighter topcoat is enough change. If the coat is still in good condition, and a topcoat is, after all, worn so few weeks in the year that it doesn't get over much wear in one season. One does not need to worry about picking out another unless one wants to have a new coat in a different style, another type of coat.

For, of course, there is a coat for every occasion, if one wants to be particular. At least, no one coat is exactly the correct thing for a motor ride, business wear, and for wear with evening clothes. And so it's possible that each season a man will want to replenish his wardrobe with one type of coat.

The most popular general purpose coat this spring will undoubtedly be the loose back plain unbelted model with set in sleeves. This type is such that it serves the purpose of a business coat, and yet, if not in too dark a color, it will not be out of place in a more sporting or country atmosphere. For the raglan sleeved coat, will probably not be seen this year to nearly so great an extent as formerly Yet, for a country coat, or a motoring coat, it is still good style.

The straight hanging coat mentioned above, cut on English lines, is the coat of the hour. This will be most popular in the soft finished fabrics which are still foremost in the hearts of men. And this brings up an important point to be borne in mind when purchasing a new topcoat. Soft finished goods are attractive and comfortable and popular. But they do not wear especially long, and no manufacturer makes any claim that they do. The reason is that the fleecy goods are first finished plain in the manufacture, and a machine is then applied to them which scratches up the nap. This process robs the cloth of some of its strength, and thus it cannot be expected to wear as well as a fabric which has not been weakened.

Almost more important than warmth giving properties of the spring coat is its service in keeping out a spring shower. One never knows at this time of the year when water is going to come down. And so it is a good thing to be prepared for rain as well as shine. This cannot be done with the ordinary raincoat, for no man will go out on a sunny morning with rubber coat or an umbrella. Manufacturers these days are processing their topcoats to make them shower proof, although not deluge proof.

I called at one of the well known wholesale houses the other day. They had a new topcoat which is weatherproofed in the weave of the cloth. This weave, they claim, makes it not only shower proof but serves as a guarantee against wear. The coat is made up in all the popular colors, and in the straight hanging, set-in-sleeve model, unbelted. Among the colors which will be popular this spring are heathers, oxfords, browns, and tans.

The same firm showed me a model with a half belt, made of polo cloth, and double breasted. This is a good model for a country coat, but would not be especially suitable for evening wear in the city. As far as the dress topcoat is concerned, for both evening and daytime wear, the fly front Chesterfield of dark blue, black, or oxford, which may be silk faced if desired, is the thing. There are always some men who will wear a Chesterfield in the city for business wear, winter and spring. The Chesterfield may be fitted slightly to the figure or made with a straight hanging box effect.

Outside the city the Chesterfield is out of its element. For motoring and country and sport wear, one needs a raglan slip on, or a polo model, or a plain slip on with set in sleeves, similar to those mentioned earlier.

Outside of the polo coat, most of the spring lightweight coats are single breasted, as men like to get away as much as possible from the bulkiness of winter garments. The same desire for change makes the lighter colors popular in the spring, since the darker coats are favored by the majority of men in the winter months. Men built on extremely generous proportions who do not want to look larger than they really are should avoid the light coats and the large overchecks that are seen on many of the new coats A tall, slender man can wear the latter successfully.

Queerest Boss I Ever Had

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities, and the frowns, and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it is briefly as possible and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Time Well Spent.

I had been employed but a few days by a large publishing house. The young woman in charge asked me to examine the waste paper basket at the manager's desk. This, she said, had to be done each day before closing time, I asked the reason, and she informed me he was in the habit of throwing valuable papers and checks away. I went over the papers, cutting open the envelopes. That day I found two checks and other days found one or two, and sometimes orders sent through the mail, so the time was well spent. M. D.

Getting Her Money's Worth.

The queerest boss I ever had was one who employed me for housework and always wanted all the work she could get done in a day.

I always got lunch at noon and possibly in the afternoon.

One day when it was lunch time she handed me a sandwich and said I should try to eat with one hand and work with the other. L. H.

Aid to Ideas.

The queerest boss I ever had was the proud possessor of a magnificent auburn toupe, which, much as it was treasured—perchance for that reason—seemed to interfere with the concentration demanded by knotty trade problems; therefore, before starting on the day's dictation the glossy crown would be removed from the shiny pate, carefully placed on the telephone on his desk, where—as an aid to vagrant ideas—it would be vigorously brushed and rebrushed, the result of which would be brilliant decisions, snappily uttered. M. C. M.

The New Lloydalet

A Baby Carriage That Is Also a Stroller

You mothers know how rapidly baby outgrows his first carriage. This new Lloydalet combines the baby carriage which he needs at first with the stroller which he requires later on.

It is wide and roomy; almost as spacious as the largest carriage, yet it is lighter and smaller than any baby carriage made. Mothers find it easier to handle; and apartment dwellers find its modest size very convenient.

Like all Lloyd Baby Conveyances, it is woven on the wonderful Lloyd Loom—of one fine, endless wicker strand—around and around, in a graceful bowl shape, flawless, smooth and strong. Because of this remarkable loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—weaving far more perfectly and thirty times faster than human hands, these beautiful Lloydalets can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a baby carriage of similar quality.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand.

Patterns by Clotilde

1638—Woman's apron dress. Sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material.

1649—Girl's dress. Sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material.

1662—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 48 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4⅞ yards of 36 inch or 3½ yards of 54 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THIS one piece dress pattern, No. 1662, has a feature that is unusual. The back extends over the shoulders to the front, where it is set on to fronts that are gathered there. That fullness on the front at the shoulder seams is something that is becoming to every figure.

There is one point that must be observed, though. Follow carefully the directions for putting together, for if the fullness is not adjusted correctly it pulls towards the armhold in an ugly fashion.

There are two parts to the dress—front and back—and the front is slashed at the neck and finished with a small rolling collar. A small vest is set in across the opening, fastened to the right side of the opening under the collar, and fastened to the left side with small snaps.

The sleeves may be flowing and full length, or full length and close fitting, or as short as one may desire.

The dress gores out towards the bottom, where it measures, for size 36, about 1¾ yards. There is a panel on each side of the skirt, and this may be made the skirt length, or come below evenly, or if one wishes it could be cut slanting there. A narrow belt finishes the costume.

The pattern is suitable for almost any preferred material, and there are many different ways in which it may be trimmed. Braid is popular, so are all kinds of embroidery. It is just a matter of choice—the material used being something of a guide as to what will look the best.

Here is a design for some dear little girls. Pattern No. 1649 will be certain to please any child. It is a one piece dress, cut with a square neck and closing on the left shoulder. The sleeves are cut in one with the back and side front, and they may be made long and gathered into wristbands or shorter—perforations being given on the pattern for the shorter length.

The front piece is set on over the side fronts, and at the waist line there is an extension at each side to which sash ends may be joined. Or the finish may be a loose fitting belt.

This little dress may be made of one material, and the front edges, including the extension pieces, the neck and edges of sleeves, may be finished with a binding of a contrasting color. On the pocket and in the middle of the dress at the neck there could be some embroidered design done in cross stitch. Two materials may also be used to good advantage; Japanese crêpe would be as pretty as anything one could use, and it is serviceable and launders well. Of course there are all the other lovely wash materials from which to choose.

Pattern No. 1638 is for a one piece apron dress. It has the advantage of being unusually easy to cut and make—a real consideration with many busy women. There are two pieces—front and back—and there are seams on the shoulders. The sleeves are cut in one with the dress, and are short. At each side of the square neck in the front a short slash is cut, and these slashes and the neck are bound. The pockets are made and stitched on the front and the sash ends made and plaited at one end as the pattern directs. These plaited ends are set on the back—perforations showing just where—and the under arm seams are basted together and stitched, the sash ends being stitched in at the same time. A tiny button and buttonhole loop should be set on at the top of each slash to fasten together. Percale, gingham, cretonne, sateen, wash poplin, or one of those old fashioned, prints would make up attractively by this design. The pattern, for size 36, measures at the bottom about 1¾ yards.

Varied Activities of the Women

Mrs. A. Hamilton, noted English swimmer, will make another attempt to swim the English channel.

Despite her 77 years Mrs. C. H. Jones of Tacoma, Wash., has just been elected president of the Northwestern Lumber company, a $1,000,000 corporation.

Many of the agricultural students enrolled at the Frank Jones Industrial school at Elat, West Africa, are girls.

Mrs. Cufney Tiger, a Seminole Indian, is considered the champion woman cattle clipper of Florida.

Make the Home More Livable

How Our Card of Introduction Helps You

Home is the center of genuine happiness. Yet of ten billion dollars spent annually for automobiles, amusements, candy, cigarettes, cosmetics and furniture, furniture comes last with only one twentieth of the total sum. Surely this is not giving "home" its rightful place.

The possession of good furniture is now so easy that a livable, lovable home is within reach of all. For example, simply get a signed Card of Introduction from a furniture dealer and you may visit, in person, PECK & HILLS' wholesale display of fine furniture and floor coverings.

This permits you to choose from a great variety of models. Yet you actually buy from your neighborhood dealer. He not only gets this business without the necessary expense of carrying too large a stock; he saves on shipping costs, too. These economies, added to others enjoyed by the manufacturer in reduced distribution costs, make better values available to you.

Ask Your Neighborhood Furniture Dealer for Your CARD OF INTRODUCTION

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

TURNIPS AND HASHES.

VEGETABLES are prescribed at this season of the year. The winter or high fuel diet has necessarily been a concentrated one. Now we must begin to extend the fats and starches—thin the diet. Often people take a more hibernating sort of diet than they realize, without enough liquid, in which case they must pay the penalty, yet it need not be so much of a penance if approached in the right way.

The physician when his patient has intestinal indigestion, or other such troubles due to malfermentation—very likely the malfermentation was due to too scanty a water supply—jocosely prescribes "cow's food," by which he generally means rutabaga or yellow turnips. The cow seems to have a much better intuition about her water ration than do most humans. She wills to get enough—and she undoubtedly likes the turnip because it is so full of water and bulk, two good reasons why man should eat it, and there are others.

The edible portion of a turnip is nearly 90 per cent water, and this, as well as its bulk of cellular frame, makes it a good sweeper, but not a violent one. The fast sweepers carry along and away from the absorbing surfaces the nutritive elements, so that a man who has done alimentary work enough on a given food or diet to get a return of something over 20 per cent of nutriment, gets only 30 or thereabouts, or has multiplied wear and tear by three.

Turnip Cookery.

Turnip cookery is extremely simple and yet not easy. Judging from the cooked rutabaga we usually see, there is no vegetable more carelessly prepared. It is too dark of color, from actual boiling and for the same reason that boiled tea is dark. Its sugar has been dissolved in a lot of water which has been very likely thrown away. It seems a paradox, but really turnip is dried up a bit when it is cooked in a lot of water, or at least what remains is just a framework minus all the precious elements that gave it flavor and quality.

Diced Rutabaga.

Wash thoroughly, cut in inch thick slices, and peel these inside the dark line and cut them in inch cubes one good sized rutabaga turnip. Add only so much cold water as will cook away in the twenty or thirty minutes of cooking, for the skillful, a few tablespoons. When the water boils turn the fire low and cook closely covered until the turnip is nearly tender enough to serve.

The freshness and quality of the turnip influences the time required, but half an hour ought to be enough for almost any turnip. The cooking may be finished with the cover off, so as to cook away all the water, but the turnip should be rather well cooked before this is done.

Serve hot with butter, salt and a grate or two of white pepper. It is excellent cold when well buttered, without any addition, but may be served on a lettuce leaf with French dressing. It might have been riced or mashed when it was well cooked. So cooked, no whit of its virtue is lost, and it need not be a shade darker than the raw turnip was. This even might be the test—that, when cooked, it have the light shade of the raw turnip. It shows that the cooking has really been more like steaming than boiling.

Cooking White Turnips.

White turnips cut in thin slices and cooked in the right way are almost equal in tenderness and flavor to the best kohlrabi. Cut in thin slices, drop in boiling water for five minutes, drain from this and rinse with cold water, and put to cook in a bit of water in a closely covered utensil, really steaming them done. Salt them lightly and serve with butter when they are done, in about fifteen minutes.

Or white turnips may be cut up rather fine and cooked like diced rutabaga. Take one bunch of four medium sized white turnips, peel and cut in thin slices, and then cut these into long sticks or tiny dice. It is easy to cut them fine if, after the turnip is peeled, it is cut in slices in one direction without cutting quite through, and then it is turned and sliced at right angles to the first slices, and then sliced across. A little practice and this can be done easily.

Four tablespoons or a quarter of a cup of water is all that is required for cooking the amount made by four medium sized turnips. Add the water to the turnips in a small kettle, which will be nearly full, no waste space, and closely covered. Have only so much fire under the turnip as will turn that water to steam in which the turnips will cook in from ten to twenty minutes. If the same care is observed in cooking these as in steaming dumplings they will be ideally cooked.

It is a mistake to take off the cover carelessly, and leave it off when any vegetable is virtually being cooked in steam, and use only so much fire as will turn a small amount of water to steam. Season the turnips and butter them. It is rather astonishing how small an amount of butter will make every piece shine when so cooked, whereas if they were mashed they would absorb much more and not be as savory.

Turnip in Hash.

Turnips as well as beets are quite the making of the old fashionable vegetable hashes of the calico order. And in discussing how to make these simple and delicious mixtures we may wonder why these have almost given way to the same sort of a combination of vegetables, but called a vegetable salad. The salad is cold comfort compared with the same mixture hot. The hash has a more concentrated and far livelier flavor because it is hot.

Even poorly cooked turnip is agreeable in hash, especially when bits of it are next to the pan and get browned. With one-half cup of cold cooked turnip and three or four small cooked beets we have the colorful and flavorsome things for a hash which will be the better if we cook some fresh potato and onion for it. Cut a medium sized potato in dice, add half a cup of cold water to it in a pint aluminum kettle, with a close cover.

It will cook in fifteen minutes. Next melt some fat in a frying pan—a tablespoon or so and preferably bacon fat—and put a sliced and diced onion to cook in it. Cover pan and cook over gentle fire. The onion will soften in a very short time. Add the chopped beet and turnip to it and let them slowly heat up, and then the cooked potato. Some freshly fried out bacon fat will season this deliciously, and a few rashers of bacon will be one of the best garnishes for it.

In this case, too, the diet is the better for springtime because the fat bacon has so much extended with vegetables. We can easily manage to extend two or three hundred calories of bacon so that the mixture will hardly yield 600 calories per pound, whereas bacon alone—medium fat—would yield over 3,000 calories a pound if we ate the cooked rashers and all the fat tried out of them in the cooking. The hash would have been agreeable without the beet, but something of a meat sort, like bacon, is almost necessary to make a hash of this sort agreeable. The amount here described will furnish the meat and vegetable part of a luncheon for four people.

Vegetable Omelet.

In combining vegetables in any mixture the fine blending depends a great deal on the taste of the cook, and directions for securing it can hardly be put into a recipe. Just as butter or some other fat finishes a vegetable beautifully, so it may a mixture of them, but bacon or pork fat does something more and usually gives greater satisfaction.

If we were analyzing hash for qualities we might say that the turnip of it adds an indescribably necessary flavor or gentleness, the onion piquancy or "pep," the potato background, the fat savoriness, the beet color and sweetness, etc.

If all these vegetables are browned another type of flavor, and a most agreeable one, is added, and to brown and fold gives two brown surfaces. In doing this we may be trying to give variety of experience, which stimulates appetite, to the one who has had vegetables, and especially turnips, prescribed.

To make an agreeable vegetable omelet either with cold vegetables or those just cooked for the purpose, allow for half a dozen medium sized potatoes, one cup of cooked turnip, half of a green pepper cut fine, one small onion cut fine, two tablespoons of butter and four tablespoons of cream or half a cup of milk. Bacon fat and water may replace butter and cream. Put a tablespoon of butter in frying pan, add the cut up onion and pepper and stew them for five minutes, without browning, in covered pan over gentle fire.

Add to them the other vegetables chopped fine and mix thoroughly. Turn out the mixture, add another tablespoon of butter to frying pan, and shake around so that the bottom is well oiled, put in the hash, add the cream or milk, and salt to taste, and cook for ten minutes over just the right fire to brown the hash, but on no account to burn. Then fold and serve with or without some crisp slices of bacon, or with a mayonnaise dressing, or some variation of it, served in tiny portions on the side.

This mixture may be baked in an oven hot enough to brown the top, and if in a small pan it can be cut in thick squares and served.

Garnishing Hashes.

Instead of dashing a vinegary catsup on hashes it is much more wholesome to use a bit of mayonnaise, which may be served in the tiniest of little dishes, those used for salted nuts, which come in the form of little bowls or boats or the tiniest of compotiers. Another way is to pipe it on to a slice of lemon. Instead of making a regular tartar sauce, which may be used, olives chopped fine or a sufficient addition to the mayonnaise or some green pepper almost mashed fine, or what you will.

The hot Thousand Island dressing is also excellent with hashes. Some glazed carrots are ornamental and palatable and more wholesome than the mayonnaise, especially for the stout person who is seeking a bulky diet with only so much fat—our most concentrated fuel food—as satisfies the taste buds.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh.

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No other Laxative can replace Dr. Caldwell's in the confidence of those who use it

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grownups, so compounded that elderly people, who are constantly forced to take a laxative because the intestinal muscles are weakening, find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for 30 years, and over 10 million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world! The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

Millions of carefully conducted homes are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a truly worthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated? I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 513 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mr. J. B. Belk of Shaw, Miss., relies on it entirely to keep his children in health, and Mrs. Catherine Connolly of Jersey City, N. J., declares that not only herself but all her neighbors and friends use it and tell others about it. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, flatulency, auto-intoxication, biliousness, intestinal poisoning, headaches, colic and cramps, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, castor, tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels most cleanly and without any danger.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY HAIR AT ONCE

Girls! Try This! Hair Instantly Appears Abundant, Soft, Lustrous and Colorful—A Gleamy Mass!

35 Cent "Danderine" Also Ends Dandruff; Falling Hair!

A "Danderine Beauty Treatment" will immediately double the attractiveness of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and really appear twice as thick and abundant—a mass of luxuriant, glinty, colorful hair.

Besides beautifying the hair Danderine eradicates dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is the best, cheapest and most delightful hair corrective and tonic. It is to the hair what fresh showers of rain are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, vitalizes and strengthens them. Its stimulating properties help the hair grow long, heavy, strong.

You can surely have beautiful hair, and lots of it, if you will spend 35 cents for a bottle of Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter. It is not greasy, oily or sticky.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mr. J. B. Belk of Shaw, Miss., relies on it entirely to keep his children in health, and Mrs. Catherine Connolly of Jersey City, N. J., declares that not only herself but all her neighbors and friends use it and tell others about it. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, flatulency, auto-intoxication, biliousness, intestinal poisoning, headaches, colic and cramps, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, coal-tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

GOOD MORNING!

Again, this Easter morning, we pause a brief instant and cast an eye over the best pictures of the month. That is—I do. You, probably, all dolled up in your best bib and tucker, hustle off to church, and forget there are any movies. (ANY time!) Anyhow, when you come home again you may have an idle hour. So spend it with me, will you? Looking backward?

"THE INNOCENT CHEAT" was melodramatic, but it was mighty well acted and directed. The title—having not a great deal to do with the story, but being a good title—drew the fans to the theaters. Once they were inside, they found themselves intrigued—for melodramas HAVE a way of intriguing, if they're well presented. Then, a little later, came

"WHAT FOOLS MEN ARE," which proved mighty popular with the women, but not so much so with what went with them. Just the same—it was good entertainment, showing beyond reasonable doubt that when a woman sets out to get her way (and knows how to dress, etc.) she GETS it.

"FRUITS OF FAITH", was just a simple little thing that went to show how personality plus can put over even a simple little thing. Will Rogers was in it. Remember?

"ADAM'S RIB"—a "De Mille." Pretty long but beautifully photographed, acted, etc. Too lavish—but that's where Mr De Mille falls down. He'll learn the value of brevity—and simplicity—and then we shall see what we shall see.

"BELLBOY 13," with Douglas MacLean, was one of the funniest of the year's comedy-dramas. It had good acting, pep; clever subtitles, photography and direction. Everybody liked it.

"THE KINGDOM WITHIN" was "charming." Nothing to rave about. Just something to enjoy. Wish we had more pictures like it!

"DRIVEN" was a mother picture sans sobs. A stark, stolid story, with some stark, stolid acting. Clever. The boy in the picture made you think of Richard Barthelmess—though there were moments when his acting lacked sincerity. Emily Fitzroy as the mother, however, was a study in tender stardiness. Quoting from the description of her given in the review, than which at the present moment I can think of no better:

"Through her immovable countenance a thousand fires of emotion flash. She is a tigress; a woman; a lover—a CLOD."

"MR. BILLINGS SPENDS HIS DIME" proved that Walter Hiers, while not a Wallace Reid, still has it in him to be a star. The late Mr. Reid was to have starred in this photoplay. Mr. Hiers took his place and made a comfy pleasant picture of it.

"THE CHRISTIAN," from the story by Hall Caine. JUST SPLENDID. Everything about the picture was so naturally done. A reason for all of the actions. "Bits" that would have made George Loane Tucker happy. Mob scenes that might make a Griffith proud. Mae Busch and Richard Dix certainly took their respective rôles in their teeth and got the most from them. I was pretty crazy about "The Christian."

"SECRETS OF PARIS," from the story by Eugene Sue. Brilliantly executed. Fascinating! One went in the theater expecting to witness "one of those things"—and behold—a screen epic!

"SECOND FIDDLE," a picture with a no-star-ALL-star cast! Good acting all the way through. Interesting story. A "mighty pleasing little photoplay." (She quotes herself.)

"GRUMPY," that old darling, Theodore Roberts, at his best in a mystery picture where he solves all the mystery. And SOME little Sherlock Holmes he proved to be. He's minus the needle. He's plus lumbago, but he gets there just the same. Watch him.

"MAD LOVE"—Pola Negri in a foreign production which made one understand why Mr. Chaplin adores the lady and Miss Swanson doesn't care for her. How that woman can act—and look.

"DADDY"—Jackie Coogan in a heart wringer. Not so sad as "Oliver Twist," though. Completely disarming criticism by his wistful smile, the little chap took the part of a small he-Cinderella. Minus a father and mother for a large part of the film, he ended up in a scene wherein, through miraculous means, he is enabled to bring happiness to everybody who had shown him kindness—save two who had of necessity died earlier in the production.

There was considerable humor in "Daddy." Few people will soon forget the small boy's struggle with his first spaghetti and how he overcame his difficulties with the same.

Dear little Jackie Coogan! Why MUST he grow up!

"THE GIRL I LOVED." Surprise! Surprise! Charles Ray doing a Barrymore stunt. A fine picture built on the poem by James Whitcomb Riley. All comedians yearn to be great tragedians. In "The Girl I Loved" Charles Ray attains his end. As the shy, passionate, renounced suitor of the girl he loves, Mr. Ray fairly sweeps you off your feet by the unexpected brilliance of his work. We have been used to him as the awkward, sad-eyed boy—but as this great actor—WOW! Something to thing about, certainly. And certainly we will go to see his next picture in fear and trembling. CAN he do again what he has done in "The Girl I Loved"?

"NOBODY'S BRIDE" was a crook play, with Herbert Rawlinson at his best. Maybe you didn't like the story, but you DID like Mr. Rawlinson. (And the story wasn't bad.)

See you tomorrow.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

GALLAGHER: What have you been sheean (terrible) to give you such an opinion of pictures as whole? No, I don't think they're "going to demnition." Some of them are—it's a cinch—but so are some of us—and those of us who are, are the exception, not the rule. (We'll hope.) Yes, I saw the comedy you mention. Not so bad. June Elvidge was married. Divorced. Mary Miles Minter played in "The Littlest Rebel." Glad to be of service.

E. M. S.: Mistake somewhere! Of COURSE, you wouldn't do anything like that!

GEORGE: I took your question out and thought about it, and then I

Here Is a Concert Series That Succeeds with Little Publicity

By Edward Moore.

WITH all the Sunday music that presents itself for hearing from October to May there is other music that seldom gets into the newspaper notices but still manages to take an important position in weekly Chicago observances. This department has received a sheaf of literature from the Chicago joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. The more closely it is examined the greater its accomplishments would seem to be.

SIGRID ONEGIN, Metropolitan contralto, appearing at Orchestra hall Friday night.

Every season, says the accompanying letter, a series of twenty lectures and concerts are given by this organization. Ten are held in the Ashland Boulevard auditorium, four each at Schoenhofen's hall and Sokol Chicago hall, and two at Norton High school.

These events are free to members of the A. C. W. of A., and, the letter continues, are exceedingly successful. How successful is indicated from the fact that frequently the doors of Ashland auditorium have to be closed because it is filled to capacity, which means from 4,500 to 5,000 auditors. The other halls are not so large, but they run from 1,000 to 1,500, and they, too, are filled to the limit.

It is evident that something more than a free entertainment is offered here. Even a free concert will not draw and continue to draw unless it has something to appeal to patrons. No one is going to permit himself to be bored more than once on Sunday afternoons, whether it costs him anything or not. There are plenty of ways to keep from being bored in Chicago.

This department is without the means of estimating the entertaining and educational capacities of the speakers of national reputation that address these meetings. It can, however, record the opinion that the promoters use good judgment in their selection of music. An orchestra made up of members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra plays, and is directed by Alexander Zukovsky, who occupies the second chair in the first violins of that organization. Among the soloists I find the name of Tito Schipa, tenor of the Chicago Civic opera; also Florence Macbeth, Nina Koshetz, Ivan Steschenko, Irene Pavloska, and Mark Oster. Other programs yield the names of Minna Krokowski, violinist; Lillian May Sindahl and Selma Gogg, singers; Alexander Astor, pianist; Zelma Smithpeter, who is credited with being a prize winner in a contest of Chicago singers, and quite a number of others. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers have their own band, and there are various kinds of singing societies with choral music. One concert yielded the folk songs of Bohemia, Poland, and Lithuania.

An important question not touched upon in these communications is how these concerts are financed. That they are financed, and successfully so, is evident. That their popularity shows that much is gained from them is equally evident. Taking one consideration with another, they would seem to be a unique and highly interesting phenomenon in Chicago's output of music.

Miss Easton's Ideas.

Florence Easton, while a member of the Chicago opera and of the hot weather forces at Ravinia, sang many rôles, and in all of them displayed so large a measure of brains as to the vocal and dramatic problems involved as to evoke the respect and admiration even of those who did not always agree with the interpretation. A soprano who goes with artistic ease and certitude from Carmen to Brunnhilde, from Fiora ["L'Amore dei Tre Re"] to Nedda, from Cio-Cio-San to Elsa or Elizabeth requires one of two principal spiritual qualities—either a sublime disregard of what's what or an intelli-

Dramatizing the Story of Simonetta, Who Inspired the "Birth of Venus"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There came to Greenwich Village this holy week a drama called "Sandro Botticelli," written by Mercedes de Acosta of East 47th street and the social register, the wife of Abram Poole, artist, and sister of the Mrs. Philip Lydig who thought some of marrying the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, if you remember your first pages.

It is an interesting though ineffective bit of drama, for [illegible] de Acosta found her inspiration in the pages of Maurice Hewlett's "Quattrocentisteria." That, you may recall, is the story of how Simonetta Vespucci, a friend of the De Medicis, so impressed with the thought that God had given her a beauty of face and figure He intended she should pass on to the world, offered herself a model to the young Alessandro Botticelli, at the moment the most promising of the younger artists at the court of Lorenzo the Magnificent.

At least that was Simonetta's alibi—the one she told herself when she promised Botticelli the next day at 5 she would be at his studio clad only in her cloak, and that, revealing her great beauty to him, he could transfer it to canvas, that the world might profit from a sight of so perfect a work of nature.

But—it was spring, as it is so often in the drama. And as Simonetta stood in the presence of the artist she loved the woman in her conquered the sacrificing spirit of the perfect model. Botticelli, on the other hand, once his love stood nude before him, was so moved by the beauty of her that he grabbed madly at crayon and paper and began sketching Simonetta while yet there was light. And the more he sketched the more incensed grew his model, until suddenly she took her cloak again and in a flare of anger ran from the studio. Which proves, it may be, that it is possible to be too devoted to one's art.

Into the winds and rain ran the fevered Simonetta, and three days later she was dead of a lung congestion; while Botticelli worked steadily for seventy-two hours or more on his famous "Birth of Venus" and never so much as knew that she was ill.

There is a sense of poetic drama in "Sandro Botticelli," and a nice Italian decoration is squeesed into the small stage of the Provincetown playhouse, where the production has been made. But the structure of the play is crude, and it is short weight both as to length and emotional content.

Eva Le Gallienne is the Simonetta, a frail beauty and decorously impassioned. She achieves the studio disrobing artfully by standing back of a high-backed chair and revealing no more than shoulders, waist, and a fascinating profile. Basil Sydney is the painter, and a little heavy and mature, I thought, for the part.

Dutch Treat Club Does It Rather Well.

It takes a lot of enthusiasm, not to mention considerable genius, to bring off a big dinner successfully. Even a big theatrical dinner. New York caterers have the thing pretty well reduced to a science, and yet herding 500 or 600 men into a ballroom at 7:30, filling them up with expensive food between 8 and 10, and then, when the air is fairly well strained of its oxygen and the smoke clouds are bumping the vaulted ceiling, to fire two hours of oratory at them—it just naturally provides a strain it is not easy for human nature to meet.

The Dutch Treat club, however, does it rather well. In place of

Mr. Gest Discourses on Miracles from Moscow

By Sheppard Butler.

"YOU'RE a good showman," said the Editor in Chief to Morris Gest after fifteen minutes' talk about the Moscow Art theater. "You've got me going all right. We'll have an interview. Tell it to Butler."

So to the hotel for an earful of enthusiasm about the approaching players from Russia. There had been apprehension, it seemed, lest New York's state of ecstasy over the Muscovites be not completely transplanted to Chicago. Gotham has been enraptured by these miracle workers—moved to unbridled paroxysms of praise and $450,000 worth of patronage in twelve weeks. In Chicago there was a seat or two unsold for Tuesday night's opening at the Great Northern. It was unthinkable.

Came then Mr. Gest, as his own ambassador, to "step up" the current of things a bit. He leaves nothing to hirelings. One or two little affairs, to be sure, he has on his mind. He is bringing Prof. Max Reinhardt to America, and must meet him in New York in a few days to discuss the feasibility of staging "The Miracle" in Madison Square Garden with a cast of 2,600. He is to build an American "art theater" on Broadway, and is in the midst of conferences with architects and bankers. And there are some other things. But no matter. If Morris Gest brings the Moscow players to Chicago, he brings them, he doesn't send them; and that's all there is to it.

And it took him just fifteen minutes to work his spell upon THE TRIBUNE.

I found him surveying with characteristic gloom the ash gray elegance of his corner suite.

"It breaks my heart," he said. "I've just been engaging rooms for Stanislavsky and his people—rooms at $10.50 a week. They must live like that, and I live like this. The greatest actors in the world—well, it isn't right."

It would have been a pose for him to take a cheap room, and he is not a poseur. But he really felt bad about it.

Not a Great Spectacle, But a Symphony in Acting.

A short man, inclined to stockiness, with upstanding hair and a Semitic countenance of mournful aspect—the somber mien that so readily lights up with the keen zest for living which is the envy and despair of other peoples. He talked incessantly, paced up and down, answered telephones, received callers, waxed oratorical, did a dance step in imitation of Mme. Chekhova at a Russian party in New York, and nearly drove his literary adviser, Oliver M. Sayler, distracted.

"Of course," he said, "I bring the Moscow Art theater to Chicago to make a little money, but that isn't all of it. I am like a child with a new toy or a new dress. I have shown this company to New York; now I want Chicago and Boston and Philadelphia to see it. And I want them to love it as New York did. If they don't—well, they will. After Tuesday night they will know.

"Bernhardt, Coquelin, Salvini, Duse have come to us from Europe, but they have been single figures, with any kind of actors to support them. This is the first time we have had a complete company—a symphony conducted by one leader, but with every instrument of that symphony doing its part. I'm not talking about a great spectacle. Their scenery—it's punk. But here you will see human beings on the stage, portraying the very souls of the characters they represent.

"With them the theater is a religion. When they prepare for a performance they take off every stitch of their clothing. They go into their dressing rooms nude. From their socks up, everything they wear in a play belongs to the theater. They never make up themselves. The company has four makeup men who get the same pay as Stanislavsky, and each is a portraitist. If the play is historical, they have studied every painting of the characters involved. If it has to do with modern life, they have gone out into the streets and studied people.

"As they are clothed and made up, the actors turn themselves into the persons of the play. Moskvin is no longer Moskvin when he enters the theater. He is the weak, vacillating, kindly tsar, trying to live up to the traditions of Ivan the Terrible, his father. The illusion is maintained behind the scenes as completely as on the stage.

"And if acting is a religion with the players, the Moscow Art theater is a religion in Russia. For twenty-five years it has never had a vacant seat. When a new repertoire is announced, you go to the box office at a certain hour. There has been a long line since before dawn. The first person doesn't get a chance to buy a seat. He gets a number in a lottery, and comes back later to find out whether his number has been drawn. If so, he may buy. And there are only so many numbers.

Tried Nine Years; Never Got a Ticket.

"When I was in Boston the other day Nathan Haskell Dole told of a woman who went to see her mother in Moscow every year for nine years. Every time she went she tried to get into the Moscow Art theater and never succeeded. She will see the company for the first time when it goes to Boston.

"Stanislavsky and his players are not refugees. They not only can go back, but they must go back. The Russian government demands it. These stories about Stanislavsky's considering offers to stay in America are nonsense.

"The Chauve-Souris is different, though it is an offspring of the Moscow Art theater. Balieff was a member of the Moscow company and was fired. By the way, speaking of former members, when they had a celebration a few years ago a wreath came from America with the inscription, 'From your ex-super, Nazimova.' But about Balieff. When things went to pot in Russia he decided to get out. One by one his people ran away. Little by little, long afterward, Balieff got them together again in Paris. They are exiles.

"The Moscow Art theater stuck, through privation and starvation, and when men were being shot in front of their building their performances went on just the same. They are not politicians and they are not bolsheviks; they are artists. But they love Russia and they want to die there.

"Bringing them to America has been the greatest adventure of my life. Do you know who got the greatest kick out of their performances in New York? The actors. They lived in the theater. And do you know what he Russians themselves went crazy about? Warfield in 'The Merchant of Venice.' Will Rogers, and Laurette Taylor in 'Humoresque.' They said nothing about John Barrymore's 'Hamlet.' And 'The Hairy Ape' bored them to death. They are against darkness on the stage. They will have light, even if it fights the illusion.

"What pleased me most was that they came and said yes to Mr. Belasco—yes to all his ideas. He has not had the actors, but no one in the world can touch his productions. To this Stanislavsky and the rest agreed. If you ever saw two people that are one they are Stanislavsky and Mr. Belasco. They live alike, think alike, breathe alike—and they never saw each other before. That tells something, doesn't it, about the Moscow Art theater? Don't let the people of Chicago think they are going to see something 'highbrow.' This is just the most gorgeous kind of playacting."

Theater Notes; Gossip of Plays and Players.

All unbeknownst to the world at large, there was deep perplexity last week as to when "Bristol Glass" shall first be seen in Chicago. The coming of the Tarkington-Wilson comedy had been scheduled for April 9; its owners sent word to the Blackstone that it would arrive, instead, on April 8; Mr. Guy Hardy, the manager of the theater, was in despair. A frantic exchange of telegrams ensued, there were arguments and pleadings, and in due course the original date, April 9, was restored to the scheme of things.

And what, you ask, was the difference? Why, April 8 is Sunday, and it is Mr. Hardy's profound conviction that, for a comedy of any delicacy, a Sunday night opening in Chicago is a deadly thing. The personnel of the audience, he thinks, is wrong, the omens are wrong, everything is wrong. So, though the postponement brings the premiere into conflict with a change of program by the players from Moscow—and though, on Sunday, they would have had the evening all to themselves as far as openings are concerned—Monday it is to be.

And yet they say these men of the theater are not psychologists!

"Lightnin'," performed mostly by the company which played it in Chicago, continues its career as a theatrical phenomenon in Boston. It has passed its 100th performance there and has broken the house record for the Hollis Street theater—a record which Miss Maude Adams, playing "The Little Minister" back in the '90s, held for twenty-four years.

Harry Browne, whom we saw with Miss Irene Bordoni in "The French Doll," has succeeded James Kirkwood in the leading rôle of Channing Pollock's "The Fool," now the reigning success of the season in New York.

When, and if, the "Ziegfeld Follies" come to town this summer, Will Rogers and Gallagher and Shean probably will not be among 'em. Rogers is going back into the movies and Gallagher and Shean are to have a play of their own, sponsored by George White. The Gallagher and Shean piece is something tentatively entitled "Stealing the Town," and is the work of Aaron

Colonel William Roche, Manager,

Chicago, Ill.
My Very Dear Colonel Roche:
The performance of "Peter Weston," given by Mrs. Thorek, Philip and I last night, at the Harris Theatre, was of such extraordinary merit, that I am prompted to express my views herewith.
No parent or mature man or woman should fail to see it. The acting of Mr. Keene and his flawless supporting cast is superb. The most important part, however, is the plot so true to life and the moral lesson contained in it. I am sure that the entire audience was spellbound during the performance, and that "Peter Weston" will redeem, as it may be, have which of late. We need more plays of this type. I congratulate you.
Sincerely yours,

Play Dramatizes Story of Model for "Birth of Venus"

the oratory, these wits of the world give a show. Which permits the rolling out of the tables, the dragging forward of the chairs, and a certain freedom of movement between sketches that relieve the strain.

The Dutch Treaters were at it last week. It was their annual dinner for 600 at the Waldorf. And they devoted it to literature and the censors. "In the Good Old Sum-ner Time" they called the principal show after John Sumner, local leader of the Anti-Vice crusaders.

The evening has been aptly described as being frankly Rabelaisian. Therefore I determined early to remember few of the plots and none of the lyrics. But from what I recall it was Mr. Sumner's idea that if he could organize the eunuchs of the calif's palace into a union they would be busy with meetings and thus leave the ladies of the harem more or less free to choose other company. Which, it was also the Sumner idea (in the play), would be a priceless time to interview them on the wages of sin and kindred topics.

Tribute to Mr. Drew.

Sunday night at the Biltmore several hundred of John Drew's friends ate dinner together in his honor and spoke their love for him—a love, most of them assured him, that has endured through at least half the fifty years he has been upon the stage.

This, for the most part, was a solemn, dignified occasion. They are well past middle age, the friends of John Drew, and not as full of pep as they were when Ada Rehan was a girl or when Maude Adams was beginning her Frohman career as a leading woman. But there was a true affection for the actor evident in all that was said and done, and one feature that seemed to me to be an eloquent and affecting tribute.

After the speakers, distinguished gentlemen of all the sister professions—Judge Learned Hand representing the bar; George Gordon Battle, the lawyers; the Rev. Karl Reiland, the church; Senator Copeland, the doctors; Augustus Thomas, the theater; Henry Miller, the actors; Melville Stone, the old friends, etc.—after they had paid the expected tributes to Mr. Drew, James Metcalfe, for the committee, read a readable poem introducing the Muses.

Arriving at its close [and the music cue], the orchestra played, the lights were dimmed, a spotlight was focused on the entrance door and in trooped nine lovely ladies of the theater, followed by Ethel Barrymore. These included Laurette Taylor, Effie Shannon, Margaret Lawrence, Margola Gillmore, Blanche Bates, Janet Beecher, Peggy Wood, and Katherine Cornell.

Loveliest Voice of the Stage.

Miss Barrymore, as lovely as you may picture her in the flowing robes of Thalia, bore a golden medal and, the applause having quieted, spoke her piece of presentation in the loveliest voice of the stage, when heard at its loveliest.

It seemed a little more than the tribute of friends and admirers to a seventy year old actor. It was also the tribute to the third generation of America's best beloved stage family to the leader of the clan. Back of these three generations troop other generations of theater folk in England, until, I think, nine or ten may be counted. But with us the Drews begin with the settling in Philadelphia, and with Mrs. John Drew as the founder of the American branch.

There was singing, and a few desultory cheers, much handshaking and a half hours' reminiscences after the presentation. But the moment I will longest remember, and the picture, was that moment when Miss Barrymore had finished her verse and for a second or two an impressive silence held the thoughts of the crowd to the significance of the occasion and the scene.

There is a new Continental army marching through the theater, as I have said before, which many insist is fighting or preparing to fight for a greater and fuller freedom of artistic expression. So I suppose those of us who take delight in reminding the players of John Drew's day that they, to us, are enshrined in memory as being as fine actors and as representing as fine a tradition and as fine a list of achievements as any that have since been imported, or likely yet to be imported—I suppose we should be classified as the plodding Tories of a new republic in which taste and ideals seem changing overnight.

Easy to Look At.

"Jack and Jill" is another of those literally high toned musical revues that John Murray Anderson does so wonderfully—if it happens to be beauty and not the more frivolous entertainment you are looking for. This one is ever so easy to look at, but rather hard on the tympana and the mind. There are countless bolts of colorful cloths of great value, and dozens of shapely beautiful ladies to wear them. They are high domed palaces with velvet pillared walls, and towering windows that invite a peek into at least the lower reaches of heaven.

And there is Ann Pennington of the dimpled knees and the saucy hips, whose impertinences in illustrating the hula-hula excite the most sedate of playgoers to exclamations of delight because, as society expresses it, she is so darned cute.

There are other gifted dancers in the troupe, ranging from the contortionistic lady with the cobra arms to the loosely jointed Clifton Webb. It is a dancing show, really, and as such a good one. But the humor is pretty awful.

EASTER ARRIVALS IN THE THEATERS

MME. OLGA PETROVA
in "Hurricane," at the Selwyn.
[Nickolas Muray Photo.]

in "Tangerine," at the Garrick.
[Ira D. Schwarz Photo.]

MISS DIANA BOURBON
In "Loyalties," at Powers'.

THE NEW PLAYS

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Hurricane" (Selwyn)—Mme. Olga Petrova in a new play, written by herself and dealing with sin, struggle, and a girl. Something, one takes it, about what they call the oldest of the professions. The supporting company includes Lewis Willoughby, Robert Brister, H. H. McCollum, Miss Letha Walters, and Miss Ludmilla Toretzka.

"Tangerine" (Garrick)—Miss Julia Sanderson in a musical comedy, long popular in the east, with words by various authors and music by Carlo and Sanders, whose tunes for "Elsie" we heard earlier in the season. Frank Crumit, Frank Lalor, Miss Rebekah Cauble, Harry Puck, and many others will be in attendance upon Miss Sanderson.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"Loyalties" (Powers')—A thoughtful and effective play by John Galsworthy, having to do with racial feeling in England—a sort of modern variant, they say, of "The Merchant of Venice." Among the players are Charles Quartermaine, James Dale, Felix Aylmer, Miss Diana Bourbon, and Miss Jeanette Sherwin.

"Peter and Paula" (Playhouse)—A lively comedy by Ferenc Molnar, author of "The Devil" and "Liliom." It was first known in this country as "Fashions for Men" and has been published under this title. O. P. Heggie, pleasantly remembered for his performances here in "Happy-Go-Lucky," will have the leading rôle and others in the cast are the newly arisen actress, Miss Helen Gahagan, Edwin Nicander, Ralph Bunker, and Miss Beth Merrill.

OPENING TUESDAY NIGHT.

"Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch" (Great Northern)—First of the plays by the famous Moscow Art theater, widely heralded, particularly since its advent in this country, as the finest acting organization in the world. The play is a spectacular historical tragedy by Count Alexei Tolstoy, with the weak but pious son of Ivan the Terrible as its central figure. Ivan Moskvin will have this leading rôle at the opening performance, and Mme. Olga Knipper-Tchekhova, widow of the playwright, Anton Tchekhoff, will be the tsarina. On Friday evening the bill changes to Maxim Gorky's masterpiece, "The Lower Depths," better known in this country as "Night Lodging."

THEATER NOTES

Hoffman, who seems to have a penchant for double-headers. He wrote "Friendly Enemies" for Sam Bernard and Louis Mann, and Joseph Cawthorn and George Bickel are now holding forth in his "Light Wines and Beer."

"Secrets," by Rudolf Besier and May Edginton, with Miss Margaret Lawrence in the leading rôle, is named as a probable successor to "Peter Weston" at the Harris, if the latter play ever gets ready to depart.

Miss Gertrude Hoffman, no less, will preside over Ernie Young's next revue at the Marigold. The entertainment, which will come into being next week, is designed as the most pretentious of the series.

George M. Cohan has written a play for Lynne Overman, lately employed as the amusing inebriate in "Just Married." Its present title is "The Song and Dance Man," but this may be changed.

The presence of George White's "Scandals" in Chicago brings to this department many inquiries as to the whereabouts of Miss Ann Pennington, hitherto an important adjunct of that entertainment. Has she, they ask, retired, or what's the matter? She has not retired, and, so far as is generally known, nothing is the matter. Miss Pennington is among those present in a new musical comedy, "Jack and Jill," in New York, where they seem still to like her very much.

The theater treasurers of Chicago—the men who preside over those outposts of destiny known as the box offices—will stage an entertainment of their own at the Hotel Sherman on Wednesday evening. The affair is modestly announced as a dance, but it will be more than that, for various luminaries of the stage will be present and will contribute impromptu items of diversion.

Easter dinner in the Ontra-

Miss Dutton Invites You
In the uptown Ontra today—morning, noon, afternoon and evening—will be provided, in great variety, such delicious dishes as are suited to a great feast day.
Those familiar with the high standards maintained at all three Ontras, at all times, will not have the least difficulty in accepting the statement that Easter breakfast, luncheon and dinner in the Wilson Avenue Ontra will be well worth while.
Thousands of intelligent and progressive patrons realize that the service of food in regulation restaurants where food of first quality is obtainable has been too generally burdened with costly and unnecessary detail. Whole-heartedly they welcome the unsurpassable quality and moderate costs of the Ontras.

CONCERNING 'THE CHRISTIAN'

Dear Mae Tinée: O, Mae, have a heart! You rudely spoiled my one, my fondest dream a few days ago in your write-up of "The Christian," for I have contended for many years that here was one critic who was infallible, and then along comes the criticism of Tourneur's picture, which, in my opinion, ranks high among the world's worst pictures.

I appreciate the fact that the director was greatly handicapped by a ridiculous story, but the only thing that can be said for the whole production is its good photography, and possibly Phyllis Haver's bit in the scene where she passes on. I think Richard Dix must wince every time he is forced to watch himself in the character of the unhappy minister, 'cause, while I'm not familiar with the habits of ministers, even when they are in love, I'm sure no one could possibly carry on as poor Richard did.

And now, should you praise Tourneur's most recent effort [and effort is what it is], "The Isle of Lost Ships," I'll have to be off'n you for life, Mae, 'cause that picture ranks next to "The Christian" in my list of screen atrocities.

You have only yourself to blame for this letter—you asked for opinions.

An Educational Concert Series Which Succeeds

gence attuned to the esthetic exactions of all lyric drama. That Miss Easton is to sing in another field, that of the recital, on Tuesday evening in Orchestra hall, makes topical, perhaps, this epitome of expressed views on certain great rôles of the opera stage:

"Few of us singers are willing, when it comes to a great rôle, to admit that the composer really knew his business. There's 'Carmen.' How many who have sung it in the last twenty years have had the true Carmen voice? I mean, the precise range and color for which Bizet wrote? All of us desire to sing it; and some of us would take oath that Bizet really meant it for a lyric soprano! The great Patti was so tempted by the rôle that she actually undertook to sing it in public. I recall, when the late Oscar Hammerstein was promoting his Philadelphia opera house, that he laughed his derision when a reporter there asked him if Mary Garden would sing 'Carmen.' Later Miss Garden did so; and it is today her most popular part. O, yes—I, too, sing it!

"I've known mezzos who, eager to 'sew up' all three Bruennhildes, have begged conductors to lower the part in 'Siegfried.' On the other hand, Melba at the height of her popularity undertook the rôle in New York City—just once, and, I believe, to her sorrow.

"Next to Carmen we all wish to sing Delilah. Why? Doubtless for the same reason that we all wish to sing Carmen—the siren in us calling for a chance to express itself in makebelieve. Of course, Delilah is a great part, and I predict, now that Saint-Saëns is dead, that some enterprising lady will see to it that the rôle is rescored for soprano, even if it means turning Samson into a baritone in order to 'balance the design,' as the decorators say.

"Yet I find that the singers who are also musicians are happiest at heart when they get into the old fashioned repertoire—into Mozart and Rossini and even Donizetti and Bellini. To me Rales as Norma is worth ten nights of most anything else. Or Lehmann singing Mozart!"

Native Opera in a New Form.

What looks like an interesting development in music comes from a statement made by H. Lawrence Freeman, a colored composer, teacher, and director of the Negro Grand Opera company, Inc., of New York. He is the composer of an opera called "Voodoo," dealing with plantation life in the reconstruction period following the civil war, and he announces October as the time for its opening performance. He states this will be the beginning of a campaign for recognition of Negro music as an art and its rhythm and harmony as a contribution to the world's music.

The company will number seventy-five and have an orchestra of forty pieces. The piece will be produced on a scale enabling a price of $4 to be charged for the best seats.

The plan would seem to have possibilities. Foreign composers are frequently fascinated with jazz rhythms, though the average American composer passes them by with scornful eyebrow. It may be much worth while to see what will happen if they are treated seriously.

Here and There in Music.

Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" is one of the musical events now drawing near to the horizon. It will be at the Studebaker a week from tomorrow afternoon and will be presented on four special matinees. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday. When the work was brought out at the Metropolitan a couple of seasons ago it was credited with containing some of the most delightful music that Mozart ever wrote, and since then it has been going up and down the land as a touring organization.

It will be sung in English by Irene Williams, Kathleen Bibb, Lillian Palmer, Judson House, Leo de Hierapolis, and Pierre Remington. If you would speak of it under an English name, its title has several translations, among them "Everybody's Doing It," "'Tis Woman's Nature," and "The School for Lovers."

The Juilliard Musical foundation, 522 Fifth avenue, New York, after having been heckled for some months for an indication of its scope and method, finally sends out some information on the subject. It announces that its fund is for the benefit of serious, promising, and needy students of music, irrespective of sex, color, or religion, as long as they are of American birth or citizenship. Grants will be made for a single year at a time, with $1,000 as the maximum of a single grant. The foundation reserves the right to direct its beneficiaries where and with whom to study.

To Wilhelm Bachaus goes the credit for what would seem to be quite a new idea in assembling a program of piano pieces. In his appearance this afternoon he announces "a recital in C sharp minor." Just why this key should be any more attractive than A flat major, or any other signature, is not made public, but the fact remains that Mr. Bachaus has been able to bring together a full-sized list of music. There is the justly famous Prelude by Rachmaninoff, the Beethoven Sonata that is sometimes and incorrectly known as the "Moonlight," some seven pieces by Chopin, and Liszt's Twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody. The next thing expected is a recital having to do with the month of April, or of works composed in a studio facing east.

The novelty to be played by the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week will probably attract more attention than any novelty of the season, if for no other reason than that it is the noisiest. At least so those say who have examined it. The piece is Honegger's "Horace Victorieux," and this member of the "Six of Paris" thereby takes his place on the orchestral programs. Albert Spalding will be the soloist, playing the Dohnanyi Concerto for violin, another new piece. The symphony will be Brahms' fourth.

Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn, and the Denishawn dancers are to be again among those present this week. Tomorrow and Wednesday nights the stage of Orchestra hall will be the scene of their manner of the choreographic art. No information has been received about their programs, but it is presumed that the entertainment will proceed along much the same lines as it did when they occupied the same hall earlier in the season.

Olivet institute will be the beneficiary of a concert given at the home of Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss on Tuesday afternoon. The program will be presented by Myrna Sharlow, soprano, who used to belong to the Chicago opera; Florence Trumbull, pianist; and Aldo Del Messier, violinist.

Alfredo Casella's piano recital at the Studebaker this afternoon will have one item with eleven subdivisions from his own pen. This is "Onze Pieces Enfantines," a composition of 1920. Otherwise he will go through the conventional order of Scarlatti, Beethoven, and Cesar Franck, also Castelnuovo-Tedesco, Albeniz, Ravel, and Debussy.

Charles Wakefield Cadman's "Shanewis" is announced for performance by the Opera in Our Language Foundation, Inc., affiliated with the David Bispham Memorial Fund, Inc., at the Playhouse on Thursday afternoon. Ellen Banta, Lillian Knowles, B. Fred Wise, and Howard E. Preston are advertised as the principals.

Sigrid Onegin, Metropolitan contralto, who increased the pleasure of both the optic and aural nerves earlier this season, is coming back to repeat the operation this week. Friday night is the time and Orchestra hall the place.

Not a great deal is known on this side of the ocean about "Tarass Boulba," itemised in the French list for presentation by the Chicago opera next season. Giorgio Polacco conducted it several years ago when an effort was being made to establish a third opera company in Paris to compete with the Opéra and Opéra Comique. He used to maintain that it was a fine work, but, as nearly as can be learned, it was not sought by any other opera organization.

On the Wagner list, the Chicago opera is making preparations to revive "Siegfried," and Forrest Lamont is studying the name part. No public assignment of the other rôles has as yet been made.

RUTH ST. DENIS AND TED SHAWN.
These two American dancers are here represented in a scene which reproduces ancient Egypt. They will appear twice at Orchestra hall this week.

FLORENCE EASTON.
[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]
This soprano, who sang some rôles at the Auditorium, more at Ravinia, and most at the New York Metropolitan, will appear for the first time in Chicago as a recital artist at Orchestra hall Tuesday night.

Spring Coats, Suits and Wraps Truly Beautiful

—Fifth Floor—Dearborn Street—

In attempting a description of our new Spring coats, capes and wraps, it is hard to decide whether to begin with the facts of their splendid style and beautiful fabrics or with the very unusual values we offer. Both are so closely interwoven, and women generally are interested in one quite as much as in the other. You can best decide on both questions by coming in and seeing the actual garments, by trying them on, and by critically examining them in each little detail.

Normandy, Francine, Mondaine, Poiret Twill, Trieotine and Brytonia are utilized with decided effect in straight silhouette coats, capes with flowing lines and delightfully wrappy coats. Side ties, belts and well designed collars are each employed as best befits the garment and the style.

Some lined with fine plain silks, others with silk crepes. Colors include black, navy, reindeer and cocoa. For Monday's selling, a special showing at .....

Smart Suits

Some will want simple, straight line suits with a minimum of ornamentation—and we are well prepared to answer. Others will favor the more elaborate style suits—with more youthful dash, perhaps—and we are equally well prepared with those modes. Personal preference is the best guide because you will be fashionably clothed in either extreme of style.

Velour checks, Poiret twills and tricotines are the more favored suit fabrics. Fashionable box styles and primly tailored effects.

Trimmings mainly are tailor stitching and silk embroidery; fine silk linings. Black, navy and tan—the latter in several shades. Sizes for women and misses. Monday, special,

Spring Millinery of Newer Beauty

Sixth Floor—State Street

One need not necessarily spend an unduly large amount here to find fashionable millinery—in fact, our assortments at the lower prices are so complete and extensive that we are sure you will find none greater anywhere.

Hats of Timbo hemp, Tagel, hair, Milan, Canton Crepe and fancy straw in combination are some of the materials of which the shapes are fashioned. Copies and adaptations of much higher priced models prevail throughout.

As trimmings you will find ribbons, flowers, ornaments, fruits, fancy ostrich and novel effects in these and other pretty things combined. A special group of $7.00 hats is priced for Monday only,

$6 Toric "Shur-On" Eyeglasses at 1.50

—Seventh Floor—State Street—

The value of your eyesight is incalculable—no one can put a price on it, for it has no touch-stone of value. Do not let your eyes go on aching and straining unnecesarily when aid applied early will give you relief. Whether your eye-ills are the result of unusual demands in your work, if your eyes are just naturally weak, or failing because of advancing years, come here for examination. You incur no obligation—and it may be the means of saving your sight.

Our experienced registered optometrists will tell you whether you need glasses or not. We will not make a pair for you if you don't actually need them. But if we do fit you with glasses, we guarantee their effectiveness.

Large, 40-rood spherical toric lenses in 1-10-12 karat gold-filled "Shur-On" shell rim spectacle or eyeglass frames; without screws and with a solid rim around the lenses, they are strongly protected against cracking. Glasses for reading or distance; usually $6.00; special, Monday at..... 1.50

Your Corset—Is It Fitted or Merely Sold to You?

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—

How is your corset selected—haphazardly—or with the aid of a corsetiere? We urge the question because of our intimate knowledge of hundreds of instances where the proper corset chosen and fitted by one of our corps of experts has not only brought fashionable lines to the figure but health and comfort as well. Why not have our corsetieres aid you, have them show you the many models of Nemo corsets we carry, and have them choose the particular model designed for your figure?

Nemo corset, style 327 (as illustrated)—topless in front, with wide band of elastic across top that gives perfect freedom, slightly higher in back for those who like the support of the corset above the waistline. The long skirt will take good care of a plump figure; sizes to 36; at..... $5

Nemo corset, style 514—topless in front, with an elastic section that is called the diaphragm reducer; always perfectly comfortable and will not "dig in" at the pit of the stomach, as most topless corsets do. The skirt takes wonderful care of large, bulging thighs—a corset that should make any figure smaller and straighter. Sizes 22 to 36, at.... $7

Circlet Brassieres

Made by the Nemo factories. They do for the figure above the waistline what the famous Nemo corsets do for the figure below the waistline.

With this new and entirely different brassiere it is impossible to have anything but a smooth, unbroken line from shoulder to hip. No bones, no eyes, no buttons. Sizes 34 to 46; at 1.00, 1.39 and..... 2.50

No Comforts of Home in Jail, Gladys Finds

By Monroe Lethrop.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—One night in jail for speeding just about wrecked the nerves of 19 year old Gladys Walton, the Universal star.

"I think I would have died if they hadn't cut short my three day sentence because of the overcrowded condition of the jail," she said. "They brought a drunken woman in about 1 a. m., and she fell to the floor with a crash. After that I couldn't close my eyes."

But Gladys learned how to make beds, got a lot of sage advice from the matrons, and made many friends among the downfallen. Gladys had none of the comforts that surrounded Bebe Daniels during a similar incarceration. She had the same treatment as other prisoners, and the newspapers didn't make a heroine of her.

Now the question is, were there pigs on the Mayflower? A clash between Charles Ray and the Society of Mayflower descendants has brought the question sharply before the bar of history. Ray has been filming "The Courtship of Myles Standish," and expending about $600,000 on his picturization of the Longfellow poem. For the historical background Charles had his research department do a lot of delving. He says they read forty-two volumes and discovered many things not in the school books. Some of his news matter referred to the "swine" on the Pilgrims' sloop. Thereupon G. E. Bowman, editor of "The Mayflower Descendant," rose up and pawed the air. One dispatch sent out from Boston said an appeal had been sent to President Harding to stop such sacrilege. But Charles sticks to his story of the pigs.

Gloria Swanson's husband, Herbert Somborn, may prove the charge of "willful and malicious desertion" and get the divorce he seeks. But the glittering star and her 2½ year old baby will have a comfortable home, even without any daddy to share it. She recently purchased the twenty room house of K. C. Gillette, the razor king, at Beverly Hills, valued at $225,000. She did it with her own money, for she receives a salary of $354,000 a year from Famous Players. Pretty good for a miss who celebrated her twenty-sixth birthday last week. Four years ago she was a bathing beauty in slapstick comedies. It is recalled that Gloria's first big hit under C. B. De Mille was in "Don't Change Your Husband."

Day by day the films are building up an aristocracy. Recently the papers made record of the advent to movieland of Craig Biddle Jr., scion of Philadelphia's wealthy old family. Craig took his calling seriously and didn't try to pull any strings to break into the pictures. Now he has been joined in the work by Drexel Biddle, whose given name connotes his kinship with another old family of bankers and social leaders. He also is a son of Craig Biddle Sr. Together the brothers have obtained jobs with William De Mille in his Paramount picture, "Only 38." They have advanced from a place in the "atmosphere" class and are given a chance to show their mettle in "bits." The boys haven't put on any airs and are apparently living on what they earn.

Florence and King Vidor, movie star and director, admit that they are temporarily separated by incompatibility. Also that they have parted before and always adjusted matters by having a philosophy of life.

"Yes," said the director-husband, "Florence and I are in one of our spells of matrimonial blues. Recently we have bickered a great deal, and nothing either does seems to please the other. When we got this way the first time we almost concluded we were mismated. Then she went on a vacation and when she returned we had a honeymoon all over and were perfectly happy for a long time. So when we get on one another's nerves we part for a while. It always works."

Mrs. Conrad Nagel and Mrs. Abraham Lehr, managing vice president of Goldwyn, were seatmates at a recent luncheon. Mrs. Nagel remarked that she was eager to see her husband to learn what had come of a conference with Famous Players over a new contract.

"Why," said Mrs. Lehr, "I thought your husband was under a long term contract with them."

"O, no," was the reply, "his term is just running out."

Five minutes later Mrs. Lehr excused herself. Rushing to a telephone, she passed word to the Goldwyn executive. That night Nagel was closeted with Goldwyn and accepted a large boost and signed on the dotted line. Famous Players countered by hiring Richard Dix away from the Lehr organization with similar profit to the actor.

Harold Lloyd sauntered into a Los Angeles department store the other day. Ye reporter espied him and sleuthed along, sensing a possible story. His investigation was soon rewarded. Harold made a beeline for the children's department and got busy.

The observer saw him buy a baby blue rattle, a little white chair, a doll, and a little toy dog. The order for delivery having been placed, the comedian turned to confront the scribe. Last winter Harold and Mildred Davis, his beautiful leading lady, were married. Ye reporter said something to Harold in a low tone.

"No, no," blurted the blushing actor. "Nothing like that; upon my solemn word. You see, my brother Gaylord has the sweetest little child that he has named after me. I was just buying some things for him."

KICK KORNER

Its Object—Objection.

Dear Miss Tinée: Went to see and hear an old flame of mine last night, Nora Bayes, and was forced to sit through "The Glimpses of the Moon" while waiting for her appearance. Of all the punk pictures, I think this takes the prize. Haven't read the story so have nothing against that.

Miss Naldi was not so bad in "Blood and Sand," but she is disgustingly crude in this later outburst of hers. And what would you style the new silhouette she parades all the way through the picture? And, poor thing, when she wishes to look clever and scheming, she merely crosses her eyes. Now Ben Turpin has a rival! I often thought Theda Bara was a rather poor sort of a vamp, but now comes Miss Naldi, and she earns the prize for plain every day punkness. Paramount can keep her and use her for all of us, but no more Waddington money will go to help pay her salary no matter who is billed with her. It is an insult to the average man's intelligence to think such obvious foolish stunts can win a man. Vamps are not like that a bit. I know quite a few of them, and while they get the men they are after, they have a different idea of vamping to that of the supervamp—Miss Naldi.

Saw Mr. Powell last with Miss Elsie Ferguson in "The Outcast," and in that and this later picture he has an awful time making love to the heroines. When he goes to kiss them, he screws up his face in the most painful contortions; at least, they depict pain such as that felt by a small boy who has eaten too many green apples. Are the movie heroines as bad as that? Or is it merely Mr. Powell's idea of exaggerated heroics?

I really cannot get over Miss Naldi's work. Wonder what Edith Wharton will say when she sees her precious Ursula in such trappings.

"The Christian" is at our town tonight, and we shall go to see it. I will let you know what we tihnk of it as you requested in your review, and I hope this picture will efface the bad impression left by the one we saw last night.

"The Pilgrim" was a disappointment, though not wholly unexpected after reading your review of it, but we have seen "Dr. Jack" six times, five of which we have taken from six to fourteen people with us. My husband thinks it is great, and we really laugh as much each time as we did the first. More power to Harold Lloyd and the clean type of pictures he is giving us. Same to Douglas Fairbanks. We saw Doug and Mary at the premiere, "Robin Hood," and have had five theater parties to see it since. And from now on Waddington movie dollars will go again to worth while pictures, and be cut off poor ones. C. W.

Eyes and Curls Chief Asset of Moviedom 'Buds'

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—The suspense is over. This year's debutantes in the film world have been selected and will be formally introduced at the Wampas' frolic and ball April 21. In Hollywood, the year's buds are chosen for screen able eyes and curly head rather than by the bonds in papa's exchequer.

MARGARET LEAHY.

After much debate the Western Motion Picture Advertisers have given this list: Eleanor Boardman, Evelyn Brent, Dorothy Devore, Virginia Browne Faire, Betty Francisco, Pauline Garon, Kathleen Key, Laura La Plante, Margaret Leahy, Helene Lynch, Derelys Perdue, Jobyna Howland, and Ethel Shannon. Eleanor Boardman was a New York society girl before she won a Goldwyn contest. Douglas Fairbanks discovered Evelyn Brent. Margaret Leahy was brought from London by the Talmadges to play features in Norma Talmadge productions. Derelys Perdue is sometimes called "Ann Perdue" for publicity purposes, but objects. Wouldn't you?

Over 100 jazz artists will syncopate symphony for the dancers and boxes and stalls are being built at the Warner Brothers' studio where the frolic will be held.

Despite a frosted ultimatum from Pola Negri that she will accept no social engagements during her working contract at Lasky's and the announcement that Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford have given up dancing, there are still enough functions to keep these celebrities occupied. On Monday Pola Negri gave a dinner party in her Hollywood bungalow for Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice. Ouida, Bergere-Conway Tearle, Count Charles de Roche, and Robert Schable. Polish dishes gave a foreign savor to the affair. Miss Negri admits that she must have her own country's cookery and in addition frosted chocolate eclairs.

And speaking of the influx of New York society—"Go Hollywoodward, young men." Craig Biddle and his brother, Drexel, are staying at the Hollywood hotel these days. The Biddles, sons of Craig Biddle Sr., have hearkened to the lure of the Lasky lots and are playing "atmosphere" in a William De Mille feature.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ed of Chicago are also stopping at the Hollywood. Harold Teen, Mr. Ed's brain child, is stepping through the studios.

John M. Stahl gave a dinner at the Ambassador hotel on Thursday evening. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer, Barbara La Marr, Constance Talmadge, Colleen Moore, Irving Thalberg, Lois Lee, Marguerite Clayton, and others. Miss Talmadge wore a dinner gown of black georgette. Barbara La Marr was stunning in ivory flat crêpe. Green and silver cloth were fashioned into an evening gown worn by Lois Lee.

Norma Talmadge was seen at Cocoanut Grove Tuesday night in a black velvet gown and a cloth of gold cape trimmed in fur. Nita Naldi was in black and silver sequin gown. Miss Naldi wore no stockings, and what is more says she never will. Little Gladys Walton was dressed in a pink satin dinner dress artlessly trimmed in narrow lace and flowers.

Jack Holt gave a dinner that evening for Elaine Hammerstein and Gerald Cudahy. Miss Hammerstein wore an orchid crepe gown trimmed in tiny ruffles of the same material.

ALICE LAKE. [Witzel Photo.]

The dancing contest at the Cocoanut Grove has been the cause of much friendly betting. So far Jack Pickford and Alice Lake seem to be the favorites, but many say that May McAvoy will walk away—no, dance away, with the $500 trophy. Ricardo Cortez, one of those countless "Valentino successors," has also been mentioned with favor.

THE KICK KORNER

Its Object—Objection

Ah Mae, ah Mae! I have loved you long and ardently, and now you have spoiled it—not entirely, at least I know I shall keep on loving you, but—you see I have the Mae Murray complex—as you so aptly put it. And your article in Wednesday's Trib (business of shaking head dolefully)—ah Mae, ah Mae.

What are the movies for if not to entertain? And how can one take them seriously when they try to preach, when, well, just for instance, when they demonstrate the efficacy of prayer by mechanical tricks, which any one with any brains at all must recognize as nothing but mechanical tricks. I'm alluding to these so-called "miracle" pictures, wherein the stubborn hero, or villyun, as the case may be, rejects all credence in—er—Providence, and then because the picture must point a moral, they surround the ingenue or the silver haired mother (they are always silver haired) with a shaft of light supposed to be celestial, and the s. h. or v. drops his crutches or his scowl, as the case may be, and is apparently purified. I presume the movie magnates expect us, the public, to go home and dust off the family Bible and re-read the Sermon on the Mount.

But for me—give me frivolity and hilarity and artificiality, a la Mae and Nazimova, because when the movies try to be genuine they are terribly boring.

O, for a picture with Rodolf and Mae in it, with both of them dancing through all five reels—because that's all either of them can do. I deplore all this gushing about how such personalities can act, and this declaring that those who criticise them don't know real acting—but the flowers that bloom in the spring—tra la—have nothing to do with the case.

Gorgeous costumes, bizarre and exotic and beautiful scenery—make believe kingdoms and fantastic cities and shimmery, scintillating scenes and somber, shadowy, silhouettes e-e-e-

ART AND ARTISTS

Picasso Sketches Move Critic to Analyze "Great"

By Eleanor Jewett.

RATHER a curious effect is produced on the mind by a careful inspection of the exhibition at present being shown in the Arts club gallery at the Art institute. It is an exhibit, called "retrospective" for lack of a better description, of various trial drawings and sketches in color and black and white by the famous French artist Pablo Picasso. Only three or four of the bits of work shown are finished pieces in any sense of the word. There are two flower studies in color that are exquisite, and a splendid rendering of a huge branch of forest leaves. Aside from these, if memory does not belie me, the other work is fragmentary.

As such, the justice of judging Picasso is questionable, to put it mildly. Why should an artist be brought to trial with, for witness, but a sketch or so, any more than one would bring a writer to court on the worth of a scattered handful of prose lines or a broken stanza of verse? Moreover, why should there be the necessity of even an attempt at such a thing? Surely, knowing a man has done good if not great work, there is little need to rake up his beginnings, for those may be not all of the most promising, and judge the place he has won in fame by the aborted efforts thus collected.

From the standpoint of a surgeon, anatomy in the abstract—here a hand and there a leg, this the tibia, that the femur—may be wildly entertaining, as well as instructive, but to the layman the body entire and living is a thing of much greater interest and deeper satisfaction. Similarly, with the instructor or student of art an exhibit of tentative efforts may yield much information and a fair quantity of delight, but that same exhibition in the eyes of the normal looker at pictures is merely a dubious bid for appreciation. He sees that by this fling of the arm in that sketch of women bathing, for example, Picasso could depict energy; that he could draw faces and torsos vividly and clearly; that, by the color plots in the cubistic studies, he understood the values of conflicting as well as harmonious shades. But out of the whole exhibit, and the group is not a large one, only one or two, those the comparatively speaking finished pictures, will place Picasso for him as a man deserving of the name the art world has given him as "great."

On the other hand, the exhibit of sculpture by another French artist, Jean Poupelet, also part of the Arts club gallery exhibition, few as the pieces shown are, is a delight to the understanding of any one, child or man, American, Greek, French, or Slav. Great art does not necessarily have to be complex. That lesson apparently comes fresh to each generation. Out of all the generations the world has known, those who live longest and clearest out of the past, almost without exception, are those who have told their message simply.

This does not hint that Jean Poupelet is great. How he ranks as a sculptor among sculptors is a matter to be considered, not decided on the grounds of the five delightful studies which comprise his showing in this exhibit. The pieces represent a bewitching mule colt, a rabbit with a drooping ear, a rooster eager for a fight, the quiet, beautiful head of a woman, and a lovely nude female figure, apparently a girl ready to plunge from a sandy ledge into the sea for a lone swim at sunrise.

This tiny group of sculpture is loaned by GeorgeF. Porter. The exhibit will remain on view until April 22.

"Lucy," by Elinor M. Barnard, is one of the daintiest and most attractive child studies to be seen in the Third International Water Color exhibition now on view in the east galleries of the Art institute. The exhibition will remain open until April 22.

The prize awards in the third international water color exhibit at the Art institute have been announced. They are as follows:

The Brown and Bigelow purchase prize of $500 was divided between W. Emerson Heitland for his "Shanty, Tampa Bay," and E. Earle Horter for his canvas, "Nude."

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $150 went to an English artist, Laura Knight, for her picture, "Readers and Bathers." This seems rather a curious award, inasmuch as that prize, so it reads in the catalogue, is offered as an incentive to American painters working in water colors. Perhaps the judges considered that to give the prize away from America would incite American water colorists to a greater future effort than were they to award it to an American painter.

The Charles E. Kremer purchase prize of $100 was given to "Sheep at the Gate," by John E. Costigan.

The Bernard A. Eckhart purchase prize of $250, which last year was awarded to "A Reflection," by Frank Snapp, was not given this year.

A novel departure in the disseminating of art news from the Art institute is its use of the radio for this purpose. Charles H. Burkholder, secretary of the Art institute, some ten days ago gave a lecture on the "Art of the Home." Last Tuesday evening, from station WMAQ, Frank G. Logan, vice president of the institute, lectured on "The Activities and the Collections of the Art Institute." It is estimated that from one to two million people listened to these programs.

Oliver Dennett Grover is planning to sail shortly after the middle of the month for Italy. Mrs. Grover will accompany him. They intend to visit Florence and Venice. Previous to the war, Mr. Grover had a castle in Italy.

The last lecture of the season to be given by Lorado Taft on the subject of sculpture will be delivered Sunday, April 15, at 5:30 o'clock, in Fullerton hall of the Art institute.

This afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, in Fullerton hall, N. A. Altman will talk on the "Romance of Paper."

The Sunday afternoon concerts given in Fullerton hall will not be discontinued after April 8, as was announced some time ago. On the contrary, they will be given until May.

Under the auspices of the Woman's National Farm and Garden association, Louise S. Hubbard will give a lecture, illustrated with colored lantern slides, on "Gardening in the Hawaiian Islands," Wednesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock in Fullerton hall. The problem presented is a pretty one, that o fitting a garden into a fertile landscape of rocks, valleys, mountains, views, and the sea.

Under the auspices of the museum instruction department of the Art institute, Sterling MacDonald will lecture tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the club room, on "Practical Application of the Principles of Interior Decoration."

Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, whose exhibit of sculpture graces the large foyer at the top of the stairs in the Art Institute, is expected in Chicago this week.

Leon Lundmark, a young Chicago painter of marines, has recently sold a striking canvas, "North Shore—Lake Superior," to a Philadelphia collector of paintings. It will hang in the company of pictures by Waugh, Woodbury, and others, in the Municipal Art collection of Philadelphia.

Of the 470 applicants taking entrance examinations for the school of architecture at the Beaux Arts in Paris the three high score men are Americans, two of them Chicagoans as well. George Connor of Chicago, graduate of the Armour Institute of Technology, received the highest average of any competitor in the first examination, that of architectural design, which counts the most in entrance.

Gordon McCormick, son of Cyrus H. McCormick of Chicago, a graduate of Princeton, was third, while Lance E. Gowan, American field service fellow from the University of California, was second. Frenchmen ranked fourth and fifth. The competition this year is exceedingly keen.

Of the numerous applicants only sixty-two men can fill vacancies. Under the rules of the Beaux Arts forty-five of the sixty-two vacancies will be awarded to French students and seventeen to foreigners. At present the list includes fifty foreigners of whom the seventeen Americans are competing for places. The final results will not be made known until the averages in modeling, history, and geometry have been announced.

KRANICH & BACH Grand Piano

Miss Easton, in choosing the Kranich & Bach for her musical companion, says:

"The Kranich & Bach possesses every imaginable pianoforte attribute—from beautiful structural lines to marvelous power—yes, grandeur—of tone."

Miss Easton is one of a host of celebrated musical artists—songbirds of the great operas, pianists, impresarios—who acclaim its supreme qualities of human appeal.

Music lovers who approach the question of a piano without prejudice are preponderantly in favor of the Kranich & Bach—with its marvelously pure and brilliant tonal qualities—its exquisitely sympathetic touch—its physical beauty and perfect proportions.

When considering a matter of such vital importance, it is well to seek and be guided by the judgment of highest musical authorities, but if you have confidence in your own musical judgment, a comparison of the Kranich & Bach with the few other high-grade pianos will demonstrate its superiority.

The Kranich & Bach is created in Eleven Styles and Five Sizes to provide ample scope for personal preference and space requirements.

The purchaser of a Kranich & Bach today is acquiring an instrument that will be a source of joy and gratification not only for this generation but for those to come. The tone of this wonderful piano, like that of a Cremona violin, grows more beautiful and mellow with the years.

Our valuations on used pianos accepted in exchange are unusually high because of the volume of business we do.

Birds

Sir Robin.

SIR ROBIN INFALLIBLE.

THE morning was bright and snapping, with a cold wind coming out of the northwest. All night there had been strange sounds high in the air—sounds of mysterious chirpings, of fleeting feathered bodies overhead, of the beatings of tiny wings. What were they?

With the first gleamings of the dawn we knew. On some naked branch there perched a form, and out from the leafless tree there burst our old familiar song, "Cheer-up, cheer-up! Cheer-up, cheer-up, cheer," repeated without a break for many minutes at a time. It was Sir Robin, without question the king of American birds.

What matter was it if it did snow again? Did it make any real difference if winter still hung on, as though he loathed to quit the country for his proper northern home? It made no matter. There was a prophet in the bare tree who could defy even winter. No cold has ever been able to withstand the singing of a robin. And, sure enough, in a few days the cold really broke.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Detazomith.

MEANING OF LIPS.

WHAT kind of lips should a beautiful woman have? That all depends on her type. It is as incorrect, from an artistic standpoint, to paint on lips of the wrong type as it would be to wear the wrong kind of clothes, or even more so, for there might possibly be some excuse for the wrong garments, but none for the false lips. Nature gives every woman the sort of lips that best portray her character. All she needs to do is to wear them well; if she tries to improve them she is sure to spoil them.

Lips convey character as no other features do, not even eyes. A large mouth denotes a visceral type of mind, and a body with great organic strength. The lines about the mouth reveal temperament. When the naro-labial wrinkles are graven deeply into this face they show a pleasing personality. If they are not there their owner is disagreeable, however much her actions may belie it.

There is nothing occult in this. The naro-labial wrinkles, which run from the nose, around the mouth, are made by smiles. They are the laughing lines. A judge of beauty looks for them the first thing in a woman's face, and if he does not see them he knows she leads a sour life in private.

Lips that turn up at the corners show a type of mind that cannot analyze motives. The lips that rise to two peaked corners in front, then sweep out and deeply down at the corners denote the best character analyser of all—a woman not to be trifled with or matched wits against. Watch women and see if this isn't true.

Detazomith has a mouth that analyzes people. Take a good look at her. She knows your motives. Perhaps she cannot describe her observations in words, for lack of language. But be assured she has them and that she will act on them.

Here are some letters from readers:

"Dear Sir: I am intensely interested in your articles, 'What Makes a Beautiful Woman?' Although I am a brunette, I do not resent statements that blonde people are superior. I am of Dutch descent, and though my hair is black now, it was exceedingly blonde the first few years of my life.

"Tell me, am I Cromagnon, Nordic, or Alpine? My skin is fair, and I have pink cheeks and dark brown eyes. I have a blonde sister and a brunette one. My parents were dark; my paternal grandparents blonde. Although I do not know if the maternal grandparents were dark or light, I have some blonde cousins on my mother's side. My cousins on both sides range from blonde, auburn and chestnut hair to extreme brunette. These are all of pure Dutch stock. I would love to know in what class you would place me.

"My husband is blonde, and I have a blonde boy baby. Will he have no stamina—as you asserted in one of your articles that the blonde son of a brunette mother would have none—or is that statement confined to Semitic mothers with blond sons? I pride myself on the way I fry steaks.

"A. W."

You write like a Cromagnon would write; you describe charactertistics that only a Cromagnon could have, as, for instance, the changing color of your hair as you grew older. You probably are a Cromagnon.

"Dear Sir: 1. Does the male or female bear the strongest earmarks or characteristics of their race in looks, etc.?

(Answer—Both alike.)

"2. Which of the races of white people have the most prominent cheek bones?

(Answer—Cromagnons.)

"3. Why is it that many Nordics have not prominent cheek bones?

(Answer—Nordics all have narrow faces.)

"Of course, I don't know which race has, or should have, the most prominent cheek bones; the reason I ask about Nordics is because they have a convex profile, which made me think that they, more likely than others, should have the more prominent cheek bones. The writer of this letter has a strictly Nordic profile, blonde hair, blue eyes, but not prominent cheek bones.

"F. C. H."

Answer—You describe yourself as Nordic.

Varied Activities of Women

As president of the Georgia, Florida, and Alabama railroad, Mrs. C. B. Williams receives a salary of $5,668 annually.

In order to note the ravages of age, a wealthy London woman has for the last twenty-two years had herself photographed once a month.

The medium wage of white women workers in Alabama, South Carolina, Missouri, Rhode Island, and Kansas ranges from $8.80 in Alabama to $12.65 in Missouri.

ELECTRICITY

POLARIZING EXPLAINED.

DRY cell batteries are not good for radio work as substitutes for "A" battery storage cells. It is not for any lack of voltage or amperage in the dry cells, but because they polarize. When a battery is polarized its nature is changed, and the strength of current it delivers is altered.

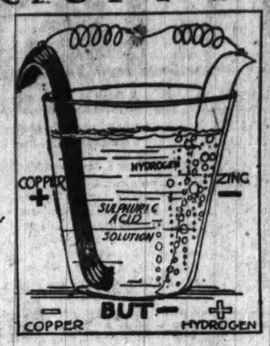
Cut a strip of sheet copper and a strip of sheet zinc to fit on opposite sides of a glass tumbler. Fill the glass half full of water, and add sulphuric acid.

Now when the two plates are connected by a wire, bubbles at once arise from the plates and a spark snaps between the wires. Most of the bubbles come from the zinc plate, you notice, and when the zinc is deeply coated, the strength of the current drops. When the zinc is covered with bubbles the battery is polarized.

Battery generated electricity is caused by the unequal action of some chemical on two different substances at the same time.

Sulphuric acid attacks both copper and zinc, but it eats zinc much the faster of the two. The pole where the most intense chemical action takes place is the negative pole. In this case, the zinc one is negative.

When sulphuric acid acts on zinc the acid is broken, hydrogen gas is liberated, and zinc takes its place in the acid, forming the salt zinc sulphate. The hydrogen when liberated does not leave the zinc at once, but clings to it. This is disastrous to the battery current.



Make a voltaic cell like this.

Hydrogen, although a gas, is a sort of metal. Sulphuric acid has no action upon it. Therefore, when the zinc is covered with hydrogen, we no longer have a pole of zinc and a pole of copper, but a pole of hydrogen and one of copper, and between the two the hydrogen is positive and the copper negative. Thus a part of the original zinc-copper current is reversed in flow as the battery assumes a copper-hydrogen character. This reversed flow takes strength away from the first current and weakens the battery.

A dry cell is somewhat more complicated than a voltaic cell, but the polarizing action is none the less troublesome and certain.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

More of Russia's Dramatic Genius Comes to Chicago

By Mme. X.

IN old Russia, that Russia now buried under all sorts of mephitic débris, a débris composed of bones and blood and utter anguish, it used to be the custom on Easter morning to give this greeting: "Good morning! Christ is risen," whereupon the answer was something like, "Yea, verily he is risen."

A Chicago man who spent some time in Russia and who returned to his native town at Eastertide, walked up the drive on a fine Easter Sunday morning. The first person he met and to whom he gave the Russian greeting gave him a blank stare and hurried on. Not dismayed he uttered the same formula to the next acquaintance, who answered with a half concealed smile: "How funny you are!"

Still adventurous and believing in the possibility of putting the Russian Easter salutation over, he gave it gravely to the third friend he met in his walk, a well known young woman of the "beau monde," who looked at him askance and hurriedly said, "You horrid thing!" After that he gave up the task of grafting Russian customs on American life.

Creatures of Habit.

It is a curious fact that any deviation from the habit of speech and manners upsets the average mortal more than would the commission of a crime. We rather expect crime from those we know, but we do not expect originality or the unusual, especially when it deals with our manner of expressing the religious in us. It is embarrassing to many to have the names of the Creator or the Saviour brought into ordinary conversation. It seems to evoke a shyness and self-consciousness similar to that aroused by any questioning of our extremely private affairs.

In this the Russians are quite unlike us. They are seldom diffident or oppressed with their own personalities, that is, they are not worrying about what others think of them and they therefore talk out much more freely what really is in their minds than we do. This makes them interesting and novel to other races. Owing to the Russian revolution the world has had for the last six years and probably will continue to have for some time to come plenty of opportunity of studying the Russian mentality. Russians are to be found everywhere in Europe and almost everywhere in Asia and Africa. And now they are coming in increasing numbers to this country.

Russian Genius and Culture.

Just as the French revolution sent French artists, poets, literary folk, and other representatives of French culture out into the rest of the world seeking refuge from intolerable conditions at home, so the even more destructive Russian revolution is sending forth into the world Russian genius and culture. And as in the era following the French revolution the rest of the civilized world was enriched and stimulated by the wanderers from the then most highly cultivated nation, so today the people in non-Russian lands are profiting by the exile of so much Russian genius from its native land. More and more are we becoming conscious of this Russian influence in our standards of painting, drama, music, literature, and of life in general.

Even before the war we began to fall under the spell of the utterly original quality of the Russian art world. Bakst, who arrives here tomorrow for a few days, had begun to revolutionize stage settings. Russian musical composers and their compositions were becoming widely known through the medium of our great orchestras. Russian writers had been read since Tolstoi's first works were translated. But our interest in the workings of the Russian mind and in Russian characteristics is immensely increased in the last few years, especially here in Chicago, which hitherto has not been so much in touch with this race as have such more accessible seaports as New York and Boston.

Changing the Simple Life.

Prokofieff and his brilliant and strange opera, "The Love for Three Oranges," found many admirers and advocates here two years ago when it was presented by our opera company. The "Snow Maiden," Rimsky-Korsakoff's charming opera, with its brilliant scenery, the work of another Russian, Diederich, was one of the star events of our Civic opera season last winter. The visit a few years ago of the Russian ballet and the many opportunities we have had to see the matchless Pavlova have given us new ideals of the possibilities of the dance as a means of expression and a high art. Feodor Chaliapin, the famous basso, aroused more enthusiasm among lovers of opera and singing than any one since Amelita Galli-Curci was first discovered at a matinée in Chicago.

Lately in still another direction Russia has been invading our simple, entirely unexotic life. A Russian restaurant, with gorgeous mural decorations and a Slavic atmosphere, has established itself in South Michigan avenue and attracted to itself seekers the last, shutting out, they say, not after sensation and the novel. It is run by the artist responsible for the gay walls, a talkative Tartar, who is Russian of the Russian, with all the traits of that artistic and unbusinesslike race. Russian genius and American practicality, could it be blended successfully, would easily outdistance and rule the rest of humanity.

Supreme Artistic Experience.

And now still another manifestation of Russian genius is knocking at our doors and asking recognition, the Moscow Players, who, under the direction of F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, are opening a three weeks' engagement at the Great Northern theater on Tuesday evening.

It is not too much to say that, judging from reports of those who have already seen this company in New York and Paris, these Moscow players are offering us the most wonderful thing in the way of drama that it has ever been our chance to see up to now. In spite of knowing nothing of Russian language, those who go to these plays sit enthralled from the moment the curtain goes up until it falls at the last, shutting out, they say, not mere acting but a veritable glimpse into real lives as lived by real people.

Ethel Barrymore said, after attending all the performances of the Moscow Players in New York—where, by the way, they had an enormous success, a success not equaled in years—that she came away with an entirely new idea of acting; that she felt an inspiration that she had never before received; that it gave her new belief, hope, and ambition; that it was the supreme artistic experience in her life of devotion to study of the stage and its possibilities. Every one else who has seen them has expressed this same feeling of the startling revelation of genius.

The company of sixty artists is composed entirely of stars, even the most insignificant parts being filled by highly trained actors and actresses. The person who one day plays a great rôle may the next appear in a small and unnoticeable part.

Weather All Storms.

The company was organized as it were over the tea cups by two Russians, lovers of drama, in 1897 in Moscow. It has ever since pursued its course unmolested by any outside force. The czarist régime has come and gone and two revolutions have passed over the Moscow company's heads, with no effect on the organizations. The present Russian rulers have laid their hands on everything else in Russia, but have never in any way attempted to influence, command, control, or coerce the players. Bloody battles were fought outside the doors of the theater, and the company played on oblivious of anything but their art.

The French government has forbidden entrance into France of any Russians except the followers and supporters of the Romanoff dynasty, but the French senate invited the Moscow Players to Paris and allowed them to enter without the usual formula of visas, etc. The government placed the Champs Elysées theater at their disposition, and all Paris went wild over their performances.

It is an interesting fact that Chicago is better known to Russians who come from the neighborhood of Moscow than any other place in America. And one name in particular means more to them than even the name of the president of this big democracy, the name of McCormick. They know the harvesting machinery that is made here and which before the bolshevik rule was used extensively in that part of agricultural Russia. So the Moscow players are especially anxious to make a success in the city which means to them the U. S. A.

Something Thoroughly Different.

There are said to be 40,000 Russians living in Chicago. As Russians would rather starve than not satisfy their love of art as expressed by the Moscow Players, the seats in the upper part of the house will be well filled. It is to be hoped that the patrons of the more expensive seats will appreciate the opportunity that is theirs. It is an opportunity that means a vivid, new look-in on the possibilities of interpretive drama, something that we have never before had a chance to see.

The language is said by those who have seen the players in New York to be no barrier. Little, condensed résumés of the plays may be purchased at the theater. For those who have time for a more complete study of the plays Miss Grace Hickox announces a series of four talks to be given at her studio in the Fine Arts building by Mme. Hélène Volkoff, wife of the Russian consul general, on Monday and Tuesday, April 2 and 3, and a week later, on April 9 and 10, when the four pieces to be given will be described.

The first one, "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch," is by Count Tolstoi. The second one, "The Lower Depths," is by Maxim Gorky. It is called his masterpiece. The third one is "The Cherry Orchard," by Anton Tchekhoff, and the fourth, "The Three Sisters," is also by Tchekhoff.

Plays by Mrs. Peattie.

The same day that the Russian troupe opens here, Tuesday, April 3, Miss Anna Morgan is presenting in her studio three plays by Mrs. Elia W. Peattie. Mrs. Peattie needs no introduction to Chicago. For years she and her husband, Robert Peattie, lived here and had charge of the literary and book review columns of THE TRIBUNE. Mrs. Peattie is not only an excellent critic; she is also a writer of books and plays. The three plays to be given here on Tuesday afternoon and evening will be acted by Miss Morgan's pupils.

Friday will be a gala evening when society will gather to see the performance of two plays, one, "Evie's Husbands," by a young fourth generation son of a Chicagoan, Arthur Meeker Jr., and the other, "The Day After," translated from the French by Mrs. Meeker, the mother of the youthful playwright.

Mrs. John Root, Miss Helen Gilbert, Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Miss Mary Meeker, Stuart Bailey, J. Williams Macey, Loring Coleman, Mr. Newton, Stephen Hord Jr., Leonard Marshall, and Lawrence Williams fill the rôles of the first play, while the second one will be presented by Mrs. A. S. Stevenson Jr., James Gleason, George Wolff, Stuart Bailey and Benjamin Carpenter. Although all except Mr. Gleason are amateurs, the acting will be of a superior quality, as Leon Errol and Taylor Holmes have been giving the amateurs pointers.

The sale of tickets was so beyond the expectations of those getting up this entertainment that they at first planned two evenings at the Shubert Central theater, and when they found that they could not have the house for both nights they moved the whole show over to the more spacious Aryan Grotto on Wabash avenue, where on next Friday evening the public will have an opportunity to see two extremely merry plays acted by an extremely merry company.

After the performance Mr. and Mrs. Meeker are giving a supper at the Casino. It is expected that the beneficiary of the evening, the Princeton infirmary, will be considerably nearer its goal of a new building to shelter the frail and scholarly specimens of youth for whom the new quarters are planned.

Among the Amateurs.

The training of the Junior leaguers for their big show at the Auditorium on Saturday evening, April 14, goes on apace. The troupe is rehearsing three times a day, and Mr. Sheck, the coach, is turning them into real Pavlovas and Mordkins. Two famous local amateur artists, John R. Winterbotham and Huntinton Henry, are assisting the Junior leaguers (we long ago laid on the shelf the term Junior leaguers, originated by Eames Mac Veagh, because the fashions of the day obliterated any distinctions between those who displayed generously the bipedestalian structure on the stage and off).

Mrs. C. Boynton Rogers and Mr. Winterbotham are doing a special stunt together which is said to be capital. The sale of boxes and seats has been going on in a satisfactory manner, and those who want good seats would better hasten to secure them. Mrs. Leander McCormick is in charge of the box sale.

In this column last week, in mentioning the entertainment being organized for Tuesday afternoon at Mrs. F. D. Countiss' residence on the Lake Shore drive to raise funds for the Olivet Institute School of Music, the fact that it was to take place on Tuesday afternoon, April 3, at 3:30, was omitted.

MISS MYRTLE VETTE.
[Raymor Studio Photo.]

Miss Myrtle Vette and Louis Huck will be married on Monday evening, April 30, at 8 o'clock, at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lyle Vette, 308 Forest avenue, Oak Park. Miss Vette, who has been studying dramatic art, and Miss Yager are among the most popular young women in Oak Park society. Mr. Huck, who, with his mother, Mrs. Louis Huck, is living in Oak Park this winter, is a half brother of the late Mrs. Baldwin Drummond of London, formerly Mrs. Marshall Field Jr. of Chicago.

MRS. JOHN R. WINTERBOTHAM JR.
[Moffett Photo.]

Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr. of 200 East Delaware place is one of the busiest young women in society these days, for she is general chairman of arrangements for the Junior League Follies, to be given on Saturday night, April 14, at the Auditorium theater, and also she is to take part in several of the numbers. Mrs. Winterbotham took the part of Dorothy in the league's production of "The Wizard of Oz" during the last winter.

MISS ELIZABETH YAGER.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Miss Elizabeth Yager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Yager of 300 Forest avenue, Oak Park, will be maid of honor for Miss Myrtle Vette when she becomes the bride of Louis Huck on Monday, April 30. Miss Yager's engagement to James Russell Doherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Doherty of 1262 Pratt boulevard, was announced recently at a luncheon given for forty alumnæ of the National Park seminary, where Miss Yager was educated. No date has been set for the wedding, but it is planned for next fall.

Take a Ride in this New Nash Six

Test its Brilliant Performance!

There's a revelation in motor car performance awaiting those who have yet to ride in the new Nash Six Touring model.

Every phase of its operation has been so notably improved as to give the car a place of overshadowing importance.

Come in for a trial ride. Test the car on the road. See how wonderfully it responds to all driving requirements.

Note the increased flow of smooth and flexible power resulting from a vital engineering development in the Nash perfected motor and carburetor.

Apply the new brakes and feel their eager, instant action. They have the largest braking surface per pound of car weight known to any "six" built in the U. S. A.

Observe the sense of solidity given the car at all speeds by the strengthened frame with its two great tubular cross-members.

Then watch how thriftily the car conserves gas and oil, and compare this new economy with the best mileage of fours.

You'll realize, at once, that Nash has again succeeded in producing a car far in advance of its field.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Myrna Sharlow will be the star of the afternoon, and it will be a treat to hear her mellow voice once more in Chicago.

Four Feet of Fascination.

Next week Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson are giving a dinner at the Casino on Thursday, April 12, after which the Parisian "diseuse" Mlle. Mona Gondré, will sing. She is said to be one of the most fascinating of the modern French entertainers. She is not unlike Yvette Guilbert in her musical recitations. During the war she gave herself entirely to entertaining the soldiers along that terrible battle line, and sang for British Tommies, Belgian fighters, and French "poilus." She is extremely small and was called "four feet of fascination" by the men who eagerly crowded to hear her.

The Italy-American society is like modern Italy, an up and coming proposition. It was inaugurated under especially brilliant auspices when it gave a luncheon last month for the Italian ambassador to this country, that striking personality, Prince Gelasio Caetani. Now this latest comer among international organizations is planning still another social affair that promises to be quite as interesting as its first one.

On April 24 it is giving, at the Casino, a dinner in honor of a young and remarkable woman, probably the most interesting of her sex in Italy today, the Princess Santa Borghese. She has been visiting in the east, and is said to have taken New York, Baltimore, and Washington society by storm. Those who have met her there say she has "beauty, charm, vitality, and a gracious and appealing personality."

Linked with Eternal City.

She is a member of the oldest aristocracy in Europe, the Borghese family having flourished in Rome for centuries. In fact, there is no name more closely associated with the Eternal city than this one. There have been Borghese popes, soldiers, statesmen, scientists, diplomats, all devoted to the service of their country.

Princess Santa took a course at the University of Bologna. She went to Oxford university for two years. She speaks French, English, German, Russian, and Spanish, besides several Italian dialects, and has a thorough command of Latin and Greek. In short, she seems to be a modern Hypatia, and is young into the bargain, being only 26. She is also, like most of the youth of the day in Italy, a believer, heart and soul, in the Fascisti movement.

During the week she will spend in Chicago she will be the house guest of the Russell Tysons. Besides speaking before the Italy-American society at the Casino on April 24, she will also address the Fortnightly and Cordon clubs, and will speak at the University of Chicago.

Well, for whom are you going to vote day after tomorrow? Make up your mind, and whatever you do, don't stay at home and "leave it to Georgia."

WEDDINGS

Spring Musicale Closes Englewood Woman's Club Year

By Kate Webber.

WITH its annual spring musicale, to be held on April 9 preceded by the spring luncheon next Thursday at the Hotel La Salle, the Englewood Woman's club will close a season of educational and entertaining programs which have set a mark in high order of engaging speakers and artists of renown.

With a list of more than fifty organizations on its philanthropy program which embrace the foremost of the organized agencies for welfare and education, the club has reached a high pinnacle in its philanthropic work. During the last year more than $4,00 was expended in this work.

The membership recently has increased from 800 to 906 members, all of whom are actively interested in civic betterment and clean politics as well as cultural and charitable pursuits. The club was the first non-political woman's club to present candidates for political offices. In the spring of 1922 the candidates for county commissioners appeared on the club program, in February the local aldermanic candidates were heard, and in March the mayoralty candidates had an opportunity to speak before the members. Winnifred Mason Huck, Harriet F. Vittum, Grace Dixon, and Russell Whitman spoke at a legislative forum held in January.

The morning programs, in charge of various cultural departments, have supplied the musical and poetic need and the afternoon programs have been a succession of notables in drama, travel, music, and the arts.

Under the direction of Mrs. John C. Young, the music extension committee, an innovation last year, has achieved another successful season. Through musical mediums especially it carries on its plan of betterment.

Mr. Wilbur Blackford has been in charge of a new department, the publication of a monthly club bulletin, which has filled a long felt need of the members in keeping them informed as to the organization's many activities.

A typical program of the club is the schedule of tomorrow's meetings, which includes a talk in the morning by Judge W. N. Gemmill, who will have for his subject, "A Day in Court," also a lecture by George Morse Jr., curator of the new Cook county zoo. The sociology department will be in charge. At the afternoon meeting George E. O'Dell will speak on "The Trend toward New Ideals in Marriage," and there will be community singing.

Mrs. Walter L. Stebbins is retiring after two years as president of the club. Assisting her in making the club felt as a force for good in the community have been Mrs. Charles E. Shearman, Mrs. A. R. E. Wyant, and Mrs. H. G. Earl, vice presidents; Mrs. Frank H. Penny, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Duncan R. Diedman, recording secretary, and Mrs. Charles W. Brown, treasurer.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Hendrick Van Loon will address the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Recital hall on the subject, "History and the World Point of View." The art and literature department will hold an adjourned business meeting at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow. On Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock the book review will meet in the northeast parlor to hear Mrs. Anthony French Merrill's review of "The Judge," by Rebecca West. On Tuesday noon the historical research committee will give a luncheon. On Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the drama class will meet in Recital hall for the following program: "Glimpses of Current Plays," Mrs. Russell Comfort; "Recent Impressions of the French Theater," Mrs. Joseph W. Hiner and Miss Alice Elizabeth Moran; "French Drama of Today," with illustrative readings, Katharine Knowles Robbins. On Thursday at 10:15 o'clock the English study class will meet. On Friday at 10:30 o'clock the forestry class will meet in the northeast parlor to hear Mrs. George Brennan speak on "School Gardens." On Saturday at 11 o'clock the mothers and daughters committee will present a play entitled "The Road House of Arden," under the direction of Miss Bertha Iles, assisted by Miss Mary Taft. Luncheon will follow the play.

There will be a meeting of the board of directors and chairmen of committees of the Woman's City club tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. On Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock the citizenship class will meet in the club lounge. The meeting will be in charge of Miss Frances Wetmore, who will discuss "The Power of Language in Unifying Our American Citizens." At 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the Park Ridge branch will meet. The social hygiene council will meet in the club lounge on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The subject will be "Prostitution—Its Underlying Causes; Methods of Dealing with It, Old and New." On Friday at 11 o'clock the municipal citizenship committee will meet at luncheon and at 2:30 the Homewood branch will hold its regular monthly meeting. At 4 o'clock on Friday the second meeting of the social hygiene council institute will be held in the club lounge. The discussion will be, "How Shall We Teach Sex Hygiene to Our Children?" There will be a meeting of the sanitary district committee Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Paris Says:
Hair must be curly

Le Curle is just the thing to give a beautiful, natural wave to the straightest hair. This pure, natural and entirely harmless liquid brings out the natural curliness of your hair and keeps the curl in for a week or more. It makes your hair so soft, silky, fluffy and curly that you can easily do it up in any of the new styles right at home.

Le Curle also protects your hair against the ruinous heat of the iron and prevents the breaking and splitting caused by curlers and crimpers. It imparts a rich, soft, lustrous wave that will delight you and surprise your friends.

Get a bottle of Le Curle and test it yourself. See how much more attractive you look with bright, fluffy, curly hair. Be sure you get Le Curle.

Le CURLE

Le Curle is not sold by mail, but if your druggist, department store or beauty parlor is out of stock, we will send you one week-end bottle for 35 cents, providing you give us your dealer's name and address.

Wariness Is a Warning

Do you walk on your spine? Weariness, recurrent pain at the back of the neck, aching legs and feet—all these are evidence that the jolt of every step is falling on your spine. It proves that your weight is all "dead weight" on your arches. That your footwear is wrong.

Cantilever Shoes have a natural inner sole line that encourages correct poise. In ordinary shoes all the weight falls on the inside, the weak side, of the arch. But in Cantilevers the weight is distributed properly over the heel, the ball and the outside of the foot. There is no muscular strain, no distortion of the foot.

Cantilevers hug the arch and support it. The flexible shank allows the muscles to exercise and grow strong. They prevent and correct fallen arches. And they're good looking!

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Mrs. Countiss will open her residence on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the last of three lectures under the auspices of the Elementary and Home Education association. Prof. Myra Reynolds of the University of Chicago will talk on "Learned Women of the Past."

The Alliance Francaise announces for Tuesday from 3 to 5 o'clock the opening of an exhibit of landscapes of "Our France" by the French artist, Georges Piasse, in its rooms in the Fine Arts building, where a reception will be given by M. Piasse. This exhibition will remain open until April 16.

The Chicago Artists' association will give a dinner dance on Tuesday night at the Auditorium hotel at 6:30 o'clock.

There will be a tea at the Arts club on Friday from 4 to 6 o'clock to open an exhibition of luncheon and table decorations by Adeline de Voo Cummings of New York. Miss Cummings will be here for the tea.

The Country Club of Evanston will give its Easter ball on Friday night at the Evanston Woman's club.

The Union League club will give a dinner dance in the main dining room of the club house on Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

The Societe Vincent d'Indy is to give its first concert on Thursday night at the Fortnightly, 120 Bellevue place. The Jacques Gordon string quartet, assisted by Edward Collins, pianist, will give the program. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. William Luxmore, 450 Ainslie street.

The Princeton Infirmary will benefit by two performances, Thursday and Friday evenings, at the Shubert Central theater, of a three act farce, "Evie's Husbands," by Arthur Meeker, Jr., and a curtain raiser from the French, entitled "The Day After." Both performances will be big society affairs, and many dinner parties have been planned to precede each performance. Following the last performance Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker Sr. will give a supper dance at the Casino for members of the casts, members of the committee which has assisted Mrs. Meeker in selling the tickets, and the debutantes who will usher.

There will be dancing after both performances of the South Shore Follies to be given at the South Shore Country club on Friday and Saturday nights. The dress rehearsal will be held on Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock.

The ladies of St. Thomas Aquinas church will give a spring luncheon and card party on Saturday at 1 o'clock at the Great Northern hotel.

Dr. William A. Maddox, president of Rockford college; Mrs. Louise Ayers Garnett, Mrs. Anne Higginson Spicer, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, Mrs. Catharine Waugh-McCulloch, Donald Robertson, Earl Reed, and Llewellyn Jones will be guests at a dinner to be given by Rockford college alumnæ on Saturday night at 6:30 o'clock at the Palmer house.

MISS TILLIE M. SCHMIDT.
[Gentzel Photo.]

The engagement of Miss Tillie Marilyn Schmidt, daughter of Mrs. George J. Schmidt of 6322 Winthrop avenue, to William J. Mueller, is announced today.

Wells college alumnæ of Oak Park will give a dance on Saturday night at the Oak Park Elks' club for the benefit of the pledge made by the alumnæ to the recently completed $1,000,000 campaign fund for the college.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Horace S. Gray of Boston is here for a fortnight's visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker of 3030 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Pool of 512 Barry avenue will return on April 10 from several weeks in California. Mr. and Mrs. Pool have sold their house at Midlothian, and this summer will occupy the Frank Hibbard residence in Lake Forest.

Mrs. Phelps B. Hoyt and Miss Emilie Hoyt of 40 East Cedar street are in Atlantic City with the former's father, Benjamin Allen, for the Easter season.

Miss Sarah Spencer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver N. Spencer of 847 North Michigan avenue, has returned from a brief visit with friends in the east.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Clarkson are in Asheville, N. C., for the spring months.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wood have returned from Ormond, Fla., and are temporarily at the South Shore Country club. They will go out to their summer place at Flossmoor early in May.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hamm, Miss Harriet Hamm, and Edward Hamm Jr. of Kenilworth have gone to Tryon, N. C., for Easter.

Miss Helen Bagg of 3764 Lake Park avenue is spending a month at Santa Fe, N. M.

Mrs. James Y. Chalmers of the Webster hotel and Mrs. W. Dix Webster of Evanston, who have spent the winter in Pasadena, are now in Santa Barbara. They will return home about April 4.

Mrs. Charles H. Randle and her son, Hanson F. Randle, of 4339 Drexel boulevard, have returned from a two months' stay at Palm Beach.

Mrs. Herbert C. Schroeder of 718 Sheridan road is in Atlantic City for Easter. She will visit in New York and Philadelphia before returning home in May.

GEOLOGY

How Africa has moved.

AFRICA STANDS HIGH.

GEOLOGISTS believe Africa is a huge block of the earth's crust, thrust above the ocean's level by some force from deep in the rocks, and held there almost since geological history began. Africa is a continent practically without harbors. The northern portion is generally low and has at different times been covered by the sea. But the southern peninsula, the true "dark continent," is a high plateau. All around its coasts the shores rise steeply out of the water. Rivers pour down the slopes in rapids, or, in the case of the Zambezi, the scarp is sheer enough to have generated a waterfall.

The central plateau in many places averages a mile or more above sea level, so that in spite of the fact that the equator is overhead the climate is cool and sometimes even cold.

Students of geology think Africa has shifted in geographical location en masse since the world assumed its present size, and so far as appearances are a guide, it still is shifting.

There appear to be two types of surfaces on the earth—heavy ones, that have been slowly sinking for many ages, and light ones, that float high, like wood on water. The true earth's crust is covered with a sheet of water, and so we cannot see the heavy places. But the light ones stick up through the hydrosphere, and we call them continents.

All the continents were originally triangular in shape, and were spaced equally about the surface of the globe.

Mathematics tell us a rotating body tends to separate into two portions. This seems to be what is going on on earth.

The beds of the Pacific, Indian and South Atlantic oceans seem to be much heavier than land in other parts of the world. They are settling, and are squeezing sidewise.

Africa is subjected to two thrusts. One comes from the southeast and is due to the combined heave of the Pacific and Indian beds. The other force is from the southwest. The result is that Africa has been driven west and north, until it is jammed tight against the heavy matter on the bed of the South Atlantic ocean.

Northeast of the tip of Pernambuco, in South America, the ocean beds open out somewhat. The northern portion of Africa has been strongly driven in here. In this place it has spread out until it is low, all except the Atlas mountains, which have crumpled where Africa was driven bodily against the mass of Spain. But in the south there could be no spreading because there was no direction to spread. The only way to go was up. So up Africa rose.

The New Nestle-Lanoil Process

Permanent Waving

Done by A. G. Heding, for years with C. Nestle Co., 12-14 East 49th Street, New York

THE NESTLE-LANOIL Process of Permanent Waving conforms to the basic idea of Beauty—which is Nature. Realizing the importance of doing this work correctly, and also the fact that so many Chicago women were having their Permanent Waving done in New York, we have opened our Permanent Waving and Hair Goods Establishment, which we are operating in connection with the Gossard Corset Shop (now Loeber's), at 37 South State Street. We have been fortunate in obtaining for this work Mr. A. G. Heding, a Permanent Wave Expert, direct from the famous originators, C. Nestle Co., of New York. Mr. Heding was one of the first Permanent Wave operators and is to-day one of the most skillful in the United States.

Our equipment is of the newest and most approved type, and our establishment the largest of its kind in the world, occupying 3,100 square feet of floor space.

You are invited to come in and discuss your Permanent Waving with Mr. Heding, when you will realize the perfection of the service we offer you.

Are we still selling our daughters?

"TO the highest bidder," it was once upon a time—openly.

Is it the same today—only more naively?

What if the motive has changed? What if it is Mother Love "acting in the best interests of my daughter"—isn't the putting of a man's money before a girl's love but trafficking in the soul of youth?

Wallace Irwin is a writer who knows what is going on in the world; and if there were not grounds for it, he would never hold up the "solicitous" mother and the innocent girl victim to the searching study he does in his great story, "A TOUCH OF ETERNITY," in the April RED BOOK MAGAZINE.

Nevis Findley, a fascinating bit of creature is the girl in the story. She and Lance Peebles, the son of a very rich man fall in love with each other. A delightful pair they are, and a beautiful romance is theirs, with the approval of all concerned—until the boy's father suddenly goes "broke."

Then steps in the mother of the the girl. From the sweet and approving mother she suddenly becomes the hard and calculating.

"Love in a cottage—drivelling idiocity!" she exclaims, demanding an end to the romance.

What do the young folks do? You would never guess. The outcome is something utterly unlike any story you have ever read. Go through the whole drama with Wallace Irwin and you will do some tall thinking on "materialistic marriages."

Other Great Stories —and Special Features

In addition to Wallace Irwin's short story masterpiece, there are other vibrant stories in the April issue of The Red Book Magazine.

Also the regular monthly installments of the three best serial novels of the year, "FIRES OF AMBITION," by George Gibbs; "WITHIN THESE WALLS," by Rupert Hughes; "THE SAND PILE," by Mary Synon.

Also features of a distinctive character.

A clever, amusing, but nevertheless effective recipe on how to avoid worry by Thomas L. Masson.

A beautiful dream in verses by Gerald Beaumont.

Another "Common-Sense" Editorial by the inimitable Bruce Barton.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Christian World Celebrates Easter with Joyful Song

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

IN religious significance the Christian world regards today, Easter, as the crowning day of the year. In churches of all denominations there will be elaborate programs of music, while Easter lilies and other flowers will adorn platform and altar. To specify the musical offerings of any single church, however important the church may be, seems like an unjust discrimination because of the universality of the endeavor to reach the highest and fullest note of praise of which each church is capable.

In Presbyterian churches offerings will be taken for the Presbyterian hospital. Stress is being laid on gifts from the children of America for the children of India in Baptist churches. Offerings for the benevolent work of the church is all but universal in Methodist Episcopal churches, while in Congregational, Episcopal and other churches the offerings will be determined by the local church.

In Jewish synagogues and temples there will also be services of far-reaching historical and religious significance, for in the Jewish calendar today is the beginning of the Passover holiday, or the feast of unleavened bread, sometimes called the feast of redemption in commemoration of the deliverance of the ancient Israelites from bondage at the hand of Pharaoh. In reality the Passover began last evening in Jewish homes.

THE REV. JOHNSTON MYERS, D. D.
[Bowman Photo.]

Dr. Myers is pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, 23d street and South Michigan avenue, which will dedicate today its new $250,000 building. One year ago the tower of the church fell in a windstorm, making necessary extensive repairs. The result was the erection of a stone office building in front of the auditorium. The readjustments have cost the quarter of a million dollars, while the entire plant represents a valuation of $600,000. Dr. Myers has been pastor of Immanuel church for twenty-eight years.

Special features of the dedication exercises will be addresses tomorrow evening by the three candidates for mayor, the evening preceding election. Mr. Lueder will speak at 8, Judge Dever at 8:30, and Mr. Cunnea at 9. On Thursday evening there will be a banquet, with George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, son of the late Rev. George H. Lorimer, former pastor of Immanuel, as guest. The dedication will be today at the 11 o'clock service. At 3 Dr. E. D. Burton, president of the University of Chicago, will speak, and at 8 p. m. there will be a laymen's platform meeting.

The task of selling 16,000 tickets is the one being undertaken by the young people's organization of the various denominations allied with the Chicago Church federation. The tickets are $1 each and will admit to the pageants in Medinah temple, Clss and Ohio streets, May 14-15. On May 14 and 15 the pageant deals with race relations in the United States, and on the evenings of May 16 and 17 the pageant portrays life in India. The dates will cover what will be called World Kindred week. In every church some young person will be found eager to sell tickets, or checks may be mailed to the young people's commission of the Chicago Church federation, 19 South La Salle street.

The directors of the Presbyterian union have elected the following officers for the next year: President, Frederick P. Voss; vice presidents, T. E. Bradley, Jesse M. Watkins, Holmes Forsythe; secretary-treasurer, Walter R. Mee.

The Disciples of Christ will hold their annual congress at Central church, Indianapolis, beginning tomorrow and closing next Thursday evening. Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, former pastor of the City Temple, London, will speak four times on the subjects, "The Gospel for Today," "Christ in Modern Literature," "Christ in the Life of Today," and "Science and Salvation." Chicago speakers will include Prof. H. L. Willett, the Rev. C. C. Morrison, the Rev. O. F. Jordan, Dean W. E. Garrison, and the Rev. A. H. Gage of the Baptist church. There will be four evening banquets and four all day programs.

The branch leaders of the Archdiocesan union of the Holy Name society will meet with the president, John J. Hayes, at the Quigley Preparatory seminary next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Bishop E. F. Hoban, spiritual director, will be present.

Dr. R. Bruce Taylor, principal of Queen's university, Kingston, Canada, will speak this evening at 8 o'clock at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall on the subject of "Liberty." Dr. Taylor served with the Royal Highlanders during the war and as a scholar was associated in work with

Christian World Celebrates Easter with Joyful Song

Dr. George Adam Smith. Edward Llewelyn of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play the trumpet obbligato for the solo, "The Trumpet Shall Sound," from the "Messiah." At 7 o'clock Dr. E. F. Tittle of Evanston will speak on "The Assurance of Immortality."

Passover services will be held today at 10 o'clock at the Kenwood theater, 47th street, near Kenwood avenue, under the leadership of Dr. Tobias Schanfarmer, rabbi of K. A. M. congregation.

St. Michael's dramatic players will give the comedy drama, "Turn to the Right," tomorrow evening at 8:15 at St. Michael's hall, 1633 Cleveland avenue. The proceeds are for the benefit of St. Michael's Catholic church.

A sanctuary window, having for its subject "The Apocalypse," was dedicated last Sunday in the Grace Episcopal church of Oak Park. The window is executed in segments of jeweled color, hundreds of pieces to a foot of choicest imported glasses. It is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis B. Camp. Mr. Camp is president of the Chicago Church club.

Irving C. Hancock, formerly organist at Trinity Episcopal church, 26th street and South Michigan avenue, now of Philadelphia, will be a guest at dinner given by the Choir Alumni association next Wednesday at the Lakota hotel. At 7:45 a service will be held in Trinity church at which Mr. Hancock will play. A reception will follow at the parish house.

Masonic announcements, Knights Templar, include the following religious services today: The Rev. Joseph B. Hingeley, D. D., past grand prelate of Minnesota, will speak at 3 o'clock at Myrtle temple, 4240 Irving Park boulevard, and the Rev. C. C. Cox, pastor of Drexel Boulevard Presbyterian church, will speak at 3 o'clock, at the church, Marshfield avenue and 64th street.

The Fourteenth Church of Christ Scientist, North Paulina street and Sunnyside avenue, costing over $300,000, having a membership of over 500 and an auditorium seating 1,200, will be dedicated today. The church was organized nine years ago. The first unit was completed three years ago, and worship has been conducted in the Sunday school room. The building is now complete, and has in it an organ costing $14,500. Max Dunning is the architect. The services today will be held at 10:45 a. m., 3:30, and 7:45 p. m. Edward Fay Wilson is chairman of the board of directors.

A students' conference in which delegates will be present from twelve colleges and universities, will be held at St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, beginning next Friday afternoon and continuing Saturday and Sunday. The Rev. Paul Micou and Miss Agnes Hall, representing the national council of the Episcopal church, will be in charge.

A benefit party will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at St. Joseph's Home for the Friendless, 35th street at the lake. Mrs. Charles Joyce is chairman and Mrs. Fred Podesta co-chairman.

Bishop Charles P. Anderson will preach today at 11 o'clock in the Epiphany Episcopal church, Ashland boulevard and Adams street, of which he is rector. At 3:30 he will preach the radio chapel sermon at station K. Y. W. A quartet from Epiphany church will sing.

A solemn reception of members in the guard of honor will be held today at 4 o'clock at Notre Dame church, Harrison and Loomis streets. The Rev. M. J. Miller of the Servite fathers will be in charge.

Triumph Over BALDNESS!

Regardless of the number of remedies you may have tried without evident success, regardless of your age or the length of time your scalp disease has existed THE THOMAS METHOD, triumphing over Baldness, has proved that luxurious hair can be replenished on any spot where hair formerly grew. It is the discovery of Prof. P. A. Thomas, who personally diagnoses every case of hair and scalp disorder and directs THE THOMAS HAIR GROWING SPECIALISTS. His method is safe, quick and sure, growing hair on heads which have been bald for twenty or twenty-five years—a problem heretofore acknowledged to be an impossibility.

STOP FALLING HAIR

Prof. Thomas promises you a growth of new hair if he agrees to accept you for treatment. He has made a lifetime study of Itching Scalp, Falling Hair, Baldness and Dandruff. He can remove the cause, and that once removed there is nothing to hinder the free and steady growth of hair, it being nurtured by scientific, exclusive preparations.

Legal Guarantee

We tender a legal money-back guarantee to promote a growth of new hair on bald heads or spots where hair formerly grew, if accepted by Prof. Thomas for treatment, or to refund every penny paid without quibble. Bank references as to our reliability gladly given.

Treatments are administered only at our offices by expert licensed operators. Our remedies for growing hair are not for sale at stores or public places, and our system is not permitted to be used by other hair and scalp specialists in Chicago.

Hundreds of testimonials and sworn statements are on file for the inspection of interested parties. Also indorsements from doctors and reputable physicians.

What has been done for others can also be accomplished for you. You need no longer be Bald unless through choice. Call for consultation; or write in confidence regarding your trouble. New Booklet—"Triumph of Science Over Baldness"—will be sent absolutely FREE.

Testimonials:

Chicago, Ill., February 28th, 1923.

Gentlemen:—

I am well satisfied with the results obtained from your treatments for the regrowing of my hair. My case was of old standing, shiny bald, and today my head is completely covered with a crop of new hair about one-half inch long. I took 18 treatments and I never expected that it could be done, but the proof is on my head. You may refer to me as a satisfied client.

Yours truly, E. H.

Chicago, Ill., March 3rd, 1923.

Dear Sir:—

I have completed the series of twenty treatments in which you guaranteed a growth of new hair on my bald temples. You succeeded beyond my expectations as they are fully covered with a new growth of hair and I am pleased with the results. I can honestly recommend the Thomas Treatments as sure and efficient in scalp rejuvenation. I thank you for the valuable service.

Sincerely yours, C. S.

Chicago, Ill., October 25th, 1922.

To Whom It May Concern:—

This is to certify that about a year ago my hair fell out from no apparent cause whatsoever, and I became almost totally bald. I thereupon consulted a few eminent doctors; they gave no encouragement or rendered any help, only sent me from one doctor to another. I gave up hope of ever having hair again.

Inadvertently, I saw the Thomas advertisement in the classified tel—hone directory, went to them at once and was told they would positively regrow the hair on my bald head or give me back my money. I began taking their scientific specialized treatments for the regrowing of my hair June 13th, 1922, and ending this date, I have a complete head of hair, about two inches long; a strong, healthy, luxurious growth. This speaks for itself what The Thomas' Original Discovery for Baldness had achieved on my head. I can recommend them to the public as absolutely conscientious and reliable in their statements or claims.

Sincerely yours, L. C.

The Thomas

SWITZERLAND

Where rugged beauty knows no artificiality—where art and literature thrive untrammeled—where government is founded on faith in humanity—where play and recreation receive their just due—there lies Switzerland.

It doesn't matter what your favorite sport or pastime is, or what you are traveling for, you will find it at its best in Switzerland.

LAUSANNE-OUCHY, chief point on the Simplon line, facing the Savoy Alps, most convenient headquarters for excursions in all directions. All sports in perfection. An educational centre of repute.

GENEVA, with its classical lake, ever attractive and interesting as a resting place, combines beauty, wealth and intellect and is a world-renowned university town. Excursions to Mt. Blanc.

Then, beautiful MONTREUX, and the enchanting Simmen Valley to INTERLAKEN, the oldest and most celebrated climatic health resort and garden spot of the BERNESE OBERLAND—the focus point for all excursions in this wonderful region. Here the JUNGFRAU RAILWAY takes you up 13,750 feet to the "Top of The World." Far below and all about spreads a panorama of such inspiring grandeur and beauty that its memory must always remain a most treasured possession.

LUCERNE, the "Mecca" of all tourists—its loveliness proverbial, its variety of sports and amusements most interesting—the starting point for excursions in Central Switzerland.

Plan to go to Switzerland this summer—the only country in Europe unchanged. No taxes. No excessive rates. No profiteering on tourists. The same cordial welcome—greater and better accommodations for all, whatever your purse. Rates $2.00 a day up including meals.

Write for our new portfolio of Switzerland—No most attractive booklets descriptive of its wonderful scenery, cities, sports, life, beautifully illustrated. It is free.

Mandel Brothers' greatest of all furniture values are featured now—at the season of greatest furniture demand—when thousands of Chicago families require new furniture for new homes, or to make their present homes "look like new." Thorough planning, broad gauge buying, culminate in this record-breaking sale—affording wider choice of better furniture at lower prices than in any prior April offering here.

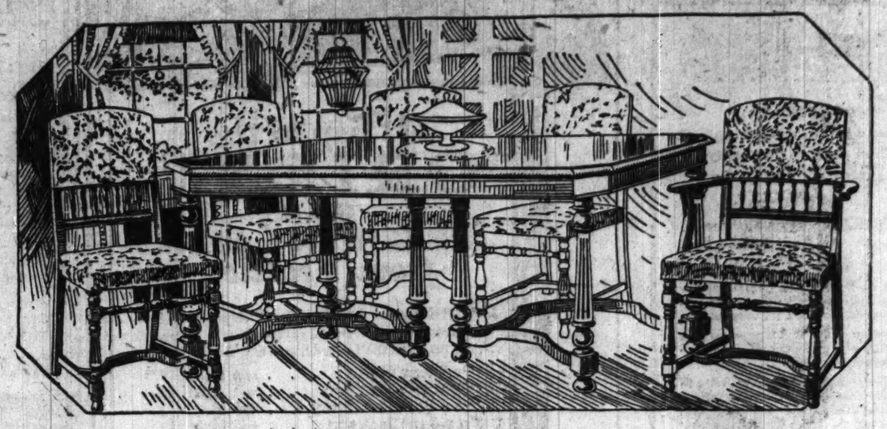
Solid walnut dining suite, 7 pieces for $100

The design is a beautiful example of the Italian style, with graceful lines and shapely, fluted legs. The suite is built of selected solid walnut, finished in a soft antique tone that will grow more rich and mellow with age. The table legs are bolted to the frame, and stayed at the base with heavy stretchers; heavy corner blocks glued and screwed to the box seats strengthen the chairs; stretchers reinforce the legs. 45x60 inch table, extending to 8 feet, arm chair and five side chairs with tapestry covered slip seats and wood backs, as illustrated above, seven pieces for $100.



Italian design dining suite, 7 pieces, $119

The suite is of genuine walnut, in a rich, soft, antique finish. Masterly cabinet work gives a solidity to the construction that assures lifetime service. The table is 45x60 inches and extends to 8 feet; the legs are bolted to the frame, and reinforced at the base with stretchers. The box-seat chairs have heavy corner blocks glued and screwed in, and the legs are braced with stretchers. Table, arm chair and five side chairs with tapestry covered seats and backs, as illustrated, 7 pieces for $119. Also several suites with two arm chairs and four side chairs at a slightly higher price.

Coxwell chairs, 33.50

Comfortable lounging and reading chairs, built to our specifications, maintaining Mandel quality throughout; all moss and cotton filling—no tow or excelsior; full web bottom; springs securely tied; well tailored coverings, tapestry and velour. Illustrated.

200 tea wagons at 15.95

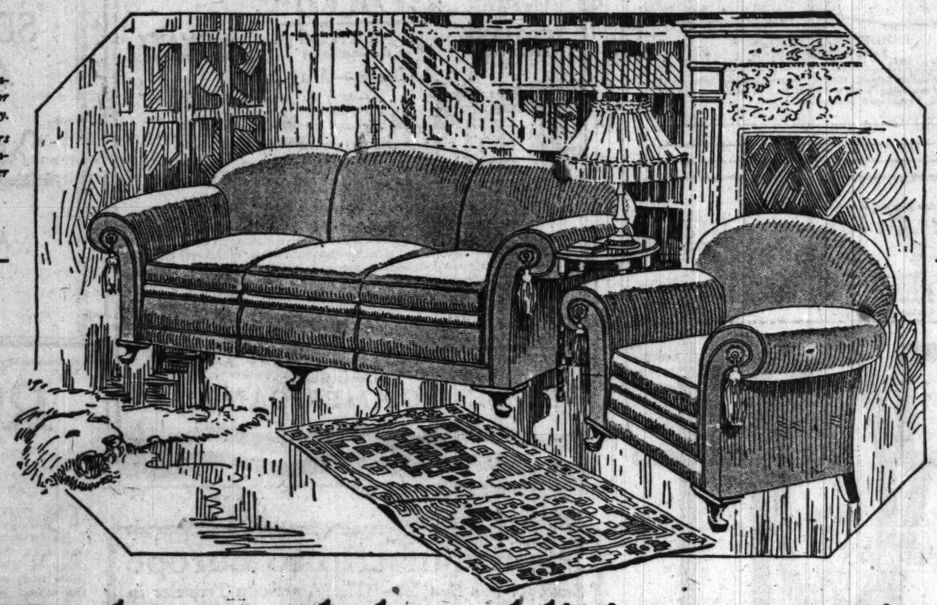
Well built tea wagons, with gracefully shaped drop leaves, and removable glass tray; large wheels; choice of walnut and mahogany finishes. Sketched above.

Fiber chair or rocker, 8.75

Comfortable chair or rocker of finely spun, closely woven fiber, in baronial finish; cretonne covered, spring filled seat cushion on spring base. Rocker pictured, 8.75. Chair to match, 8.75. Uncommon values.

These specials cannot be held for future delivery.

All C. O. D. orders must be accompanied by a 25 per cent deposit.



Because of the exceptional character of this sale, phone and mail orders for these furniture specials cannot be accepted.

100 elegant upholstered living room suites

Two-piece suites Monday only $198 Mohair-and-wool covered All hair filling

The massive, 84-inch davenport and the luxuriously comfortable chair constituting this suite are in a refined style with uncommonly graceful lines. The expert tailoring of the covers is typical of the superior craftsmanship that extends to the smallest detail of construction. The materials used are of correspondingly high quality. Fully to appreciate the values you must compare these suites with grades usually sold for nearly twice the sale price.

Consider the specifications of construction:

A—Entire frame of selected birch, thoroughly dried and seasoned before making up. See the sketch at right.

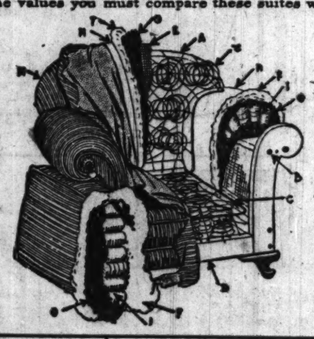
B—All frame joints doweled and glued; corners rigidly braced with heavy blocks glued and screwed to frame.

C—40 highly tempered coil springs in davenport base—12 in chair; resilient cushion springs in back. All springs tied nine times with Italian hemp twine.

D—Full L. M. C. web bottom stretched tight, double tacked.

E—Best quality burlap covering seat and back springs.

F—Thick layer of felted cotton covering hair filling to prevent hair working through covering.



They are found only in highest grade furniture

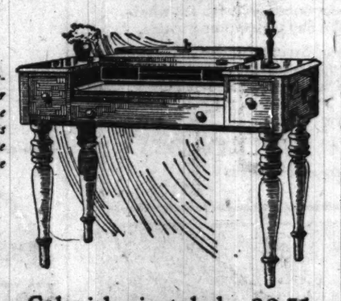
G—Black curled hair filling, best quality—no moss, tow or excelsior. Filling stitched to burlap base to prevent spreading. Note the illustration at left.

H—Suite covered in muslin before final covering is put on.

I—Highly tempered small coil springs, each enclosed in a separate muslin sack, used in loose seat cushions and specially constructed arms, springs of the Marshall type.

N—Mohair-and-wool covering; outside back of davenport covered in same material. Choice of plain taupe and walnut, and an attractive two-tone stripe. Davenport and chair have large tassels.

Seventh floor.

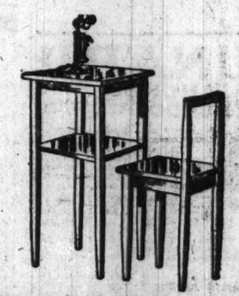


Colonial spinet desks, 39.75

Large desks, 22x45 inches with top closed; of combination mahogany, finished in brown; a full length drawer under the pull-out writing bed provides spacious storage facilities; also drawer at either end of desk, and ample pigeon hole space. Pictured.

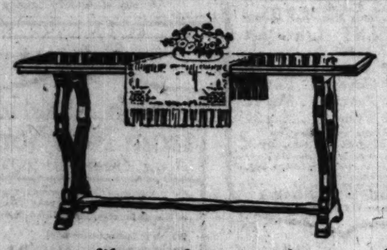
Davenport end tables, 3.95

Strongly built tables in a pleasing pattern; in soft, antique mahogany finish. Sketched.



Phone table and chair, 4.95

Designed in liberal proportions, and substantially made; in brown mahogany finish. The style is illustrated above.



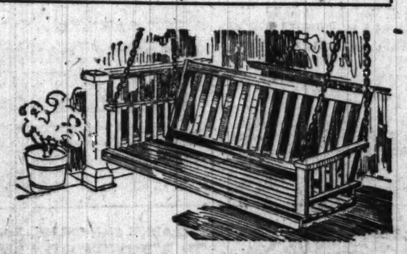
100 living room tables at 13.95

Tables in a graceful Italian design; strongly built of combination mahogany in rich brown finish; the top is 18 inches wide and 60 inches long. Sketched at the left.

Oak porch swings, 4-foot, at 2.98

Very substantial swings of oak in fumed finish; the joints are firmly bolted and screwed; slat seat and back; the style sketched at right. Complete with hooks and chains at the sale quotation—2.98.

Seventh floor.



Jardinieres, $1 —a timely special

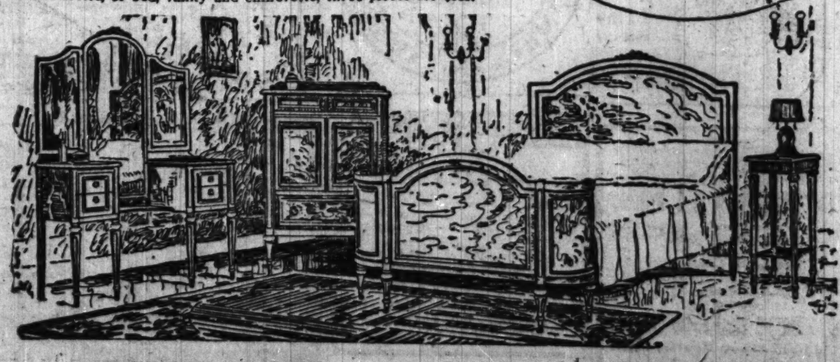
A pottery's discontinued line of jardinieres in mat green and old ivory finishes, and in a variety of shapes and sizes, priced much below usual.

Sixth floor.

100 fiber suites, 3 pieces for $45

Settee, chair and rocker

Regulation size chair and rocker, and 6-foot settee, strongly built of finely spun, closely woven fiber of best quality; finished in putty shade enamel. The frame is rigidly supported by wooden and metal braces; the loose, spring filled cushions rest on a resilient spring base; the backs are upholstered and covered in the same attractively patterned cretonne as the cushions. Sketched below.



Vanity, bed and chifforette $185 or dresser, bed and chifforette

Louis XVI. suite, built of combination walnut, and dustproof throughout; the drawers are dovetailed and have center guide that prevents binding and insures smooth, easy opening and closing. The rich, dull, rubbed finish permits the grain of the wood to show through. The suite illustrated below. Your choice of bed, dresser and chifforette, or bed, vanity and chifforette, three pieces for $185.

Dinner sets, 100 pieces

Imported dinner sets of transparent, thin china, with border decorations in several designs, one illustrated.

Reduced about ⅓ at 42.50

All the handles are done in rich, dull, coin gold. Monday only at 42.50. Sixth floor.

51-piece dinner sets at 8.95

Fine American semi-porcelain ware, decorated with three blue lines on each piece; reduced about one-fourth; Monday only at 8.95.

Boudoir lamps

The lamps are of metal, in artistic designs, and in antique ivory and Japanese bronze finishes. Sixth floor.

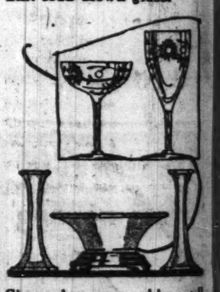
Lamp with shade 1.95

The metal shades are lined with paper parchment in various colors. Sketched.

Cut crystal tableware 18 pieces, 8.95

Gracefully shaped glasses, beautifully cut and polished; stems also richly cut; see the illustration; best thin flint lead blown glass.



Six each, water goblets, tall sherbets and ginger ale glasses. 8.95 is about one-fourth below regular.

Console sets, 4 pieces for 1.65

Iridescent amber colored glass bowl, 10-inch size, for fruit or flowers, mounted on black glass stand, and two candlesticks to match. Sketched. Sixth floor.

Panel curtains of tuscan net at 2.95

The curtains are 40 inches wide and 2½ yards long; in natural shade. The base is finished with bullion fringe. Choice of several styles at 2.95 each. Eighth floor.

FREE PIANO MOVING.
This amazing offer will save you the expense of moving your old piano to your new home. If you intend to purchase a new piano, player-piano, or phonograph this year, why not let us buy your old instrument?
We will give you a liberal credit for it, which may be applied at a future time on the purchase of a new piano, player-piano, or phonograph. No charge will be made for bringing in your old piano or delivering the new.
Our stock now is unusually large, with hundreds of splendid values in new, slightly used and demonstration instruments. If you desire to make your selection now we will store the piano (without expense to you) until you are ready to have it delivered.

Salesmen, or beginners. Do you think you can sell? Or would you like to try your hand at selling? If so, it will pay you to answer this ad. Something out of the ordinary. Not ordinary run of propositions advertised in these columns. This is a well known and highly established Chicago firm, doing nationwide business, who would like to find additional sales talent for an established and productive sales organization. The opportunities to make good is here. We have men earning from $500 to $1,000 per month. We pay our men on a commission basis. Beginners who show the proper spirit are given financial assistance. We believe there are any number of men in Chicago who can get in line to the retailer and make good in doing so. What we want is that spirit and ambition in a man is a little natural sales talent and a disposition to work. Every applicant will be given an interview. Investigate this educational counselor, and if selected you will be given every opportunity to learn the sales game and make good under the personal guidance of our manager and sales manager. REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—W. EST.

FOR SALE — TWO MOST DESIRABLE pieces of property in auburn on C. & N. W.; thirty-five minutes from Chicago, located two short blocks from suburban depot. Property will be sold together or separately. Consists of two modern homes, located on 6 fifty foot lots; plenty of yard and garden space. Servants' quarters in rear consisting of small cabin without improve- ments. A garage, small chicken yard, apple, cherry trees, strawberry bed, ample garden space, expensive shrubbery, in fact most desirable property in well known suburb. Especially desirable if one wishes to live in cabin and rent two houses for good income. Property also has only private heated win- ter sports coliseum in west, building 35x200, which may be made into bungalow at small expense or used as it was intended for winter exercise. This entire property is a positive bargain, to be sold because the owner is going south. Price $20,000. One price only to all. The environment, the landscape, mar- vellous trees, make it a perfect place to live. No chance for neighbors to crowd and yet located in the very heart of the suburb. Ad- dress F L 142, Tribune.

WHY WE HAVE THE PICK AND CREAM OF USED CARS TO SELL

The new radical Cole Merchandising Plan which was originated to eliminate the trade-in evil with its accompanying price inflations has resulted in creating a wonderful stock of used cars for us.

As never before it has put used car prices on a stable basis and for the first time in history enables you to get full measure for your dollar.

Operating under this new plan, we do not accept used cars in trade for our new ones.

Acting as broker between you and the man who consigns his car to us for sale we are placed in the position of arriving at a fair market value price which must necessarily prove satisfactory to both parties.

For instance: We have on consignment now the following used cars:

BUICKS, COLES (including rebuilts), JORDANS, CADILLACS, CHANDLERS, 3 AUBURNS in various models, HUDSONS, NASHES, and many others.

Each of these former owners bought a Cole on our new selling plan. We made no trade-in allowance on a single one of them. If we had done so, can't you see how we would have been compelled to get a bigger than market price for them and get back our trade-in allowance? New cars sold the old way must include a profit for the dealer.

The fact that these fine used cars are here ready for you to look over, subject to your approval as to price and condition, makes it important that you should look over our selection first. We serve the best interests of both buyer and seller, are in a better position to judge cars' values, mechanical condition, etc., than either party, and get a 10% brokerage from the former owner for our effort.

The new Cole Merchandising plan is a proven success. If it weren't we certainly would be first to know it. It is trebling our new business and consequently giving us a great variety of good used products.

Let us know what car you want—phone or write—and we will advise you the minute one comes in.

The usual good Cole terms can be arranged.

Remember, we are used car brokers—not used car dealers! Our profit is fixed and defined. We represent you and the other fellow in the deal. You simply name the car you want and the price—we'll take care of the rest.

7 Bargains

AT THE Peerless

FACTORY BRANCH.

PAIGE SEDAN SIX-66. This is the standard 7 passenger Sedan that is practically the same car as they are delivering new today. This particular one is way above the average in detail. Mechanically it will bear a most rigid examination and demonstration. Paint, tires and upholstery are exceptionally fine. This car can be purchased at a saving of considerably over $2,000 as compared with the price of a new one today. It is an automobile that should really be seen to be appreciated and represents a real bargain at our price of $1,350.

APPERSON SEDAN, 1922. We have just refinished this car from our Mechanical and Refinishing Department, and, from appearance and performance, you would think that it had just been taken from the new car sales floor. It is refinished in beautiful Gunmetal Gray. Mechanically it runs smoothly and quietly. Has an excellent set of cord tires, 5 extra, and as much other extra equipment. To duplicate it today it would cost you considerably over $4,000. Visualize, if you can, a 1922 7 passenger enclosed car that to duplicate you would have to spend almost three times the amount of money. You will have to act quickly if you would avail yourself of this bargain, because, at our price, it will sell very, very quickly. Price, $1,500.

OLDSMOBILE ROADSTER, 1920. A powerful yet light and economical 3 passenger Roadster that would make an ideal car for a salesman or any one who is looking for good, reliable transportation at a ridiculously low price. If you will compare this automobile, at the price, with other automobiles at like prices, you will find that this car is priced at least $200 under its present day market value. It is in exceptionally fine condition in every detail and is a bargain that we do not believe you can duplicate. See it and ride in it and be convinced. The price for this sale is only $275.

PEERLESS COUPE, 1922. We have not had a car of this type in for sale to the public for about 2 months and feel fortunate in being able to offer this one, because it is in wonderful condition. It is very interesting to fact it has not quite been driven 5,000 miles. The velour upholstery shows practically no wear. Tires are like new. Mechanically it will carry our standard warranty. An exceptional offering for today's sale in this high grade 4 passenger enclosed car. Price, $2,500.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 57 SUBURBAN SEDAN. This is the second car of this type that we have had in the last few days. The first one was sold very, very quickly because of its condition and the price that we had on it. This car is a duplicate of the last one and we would like the opportunity of showing it to any one who is interested in the purchase of a high grade 7 passenger enclosed car. It will carry a particularly strong appeal to the individual who is looking for an exceptionally fine Cadillac car at a price that is way below its present day market value. It is truly an exceptional bargain at our price of $1,250.

PEERLESS LIMOUSINE, 1920. This is what is commonly known as the Berline-type Limousine and is a car that will carry a strong appeal to any one who is looking for a high grade car for either private or livery work. It can be used as a limousine or sedan. Mechanically it is exceptionally fine. Has been refinished a Dark Blue and presents the appearance of new. You will have to see and ride in this car to fully appreciate the exceptional value that we are offering in it at our price of $1,400.

COLE 8 SEDAN, 1921. To duplicate this car today it would cost you considerably over $3,000. It has been privately owned and very carefully driven but a few thousand miles and its general appearance and performance would indicate that it had always received the very best of care and attention. The Fisher Class sat spent a great deal of time on it in the city and therefore the car has not had the average use. This car must be disposed of today to complete a deal and therefore we are sacrificing it at our price of $1,000.

CADILLAC 8 TOURING, MODEL 57, DOUBLE LETTER 1919. This car was turned in to us by an owner who has owned and driven Cadillacs for years. It had most wonderful attention mechanically and properly serviced at all times by theCadillac service station. We have checked the chassis mechanically and it is ready for instant use. Our paint shop has given it a burnoff paint job. Finish is Japanese blue. Equipment includes 6 excellent cord tires, 2 spotlights, automatic windshield cleaner, bumper, Deluxe motometer, rear vision mirror, clock locks, etc. An inspection and demonstration will more than impress you with this exceptional value at $1,000.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE TOURING. Here is a car that cannot be classed as the ordinary used car. The few miles that it has been driven have tended only to improve its mechanical condition. Everything about the car is first class and its original silky finish is like new. Equipped with disk wheels, original Royal cord tires, new spare, spring bumper, etc. We are offering it at a price that enables you to make a 25% saving; $2,000.

MARMON TOURING, 1920, MODEL 34. This car is identical in appearance with the Marmon car today. It shows exceptionally fine care. Looks like new. Painted dark maroon color. Mechanical condition above criticism. Motor is quiet. This car is guaranteed by us. Well equipped with 5 wire wheels, and cord tires. Biflex bumper, motometer, wing cap, heater, etc. Unusual value at $1,375.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE SPORT.

Low hung, with long sloping shroud and sweeping body lines, this touring is the type you would expect to find on a Wills Sainte Claire chassis.

The beauty, the distinctive character of this car won it national popularity instantly. It is an outstanding achievement among fine motor cars.

Painted a beautiful Kimball green, striped in deep red; all bright parts have been renickeled; car is equipped with 4 brand new cord tires.

We are giving the purchaser of this car a new car guarantee; mileage 8,000.

You cannot find a squeak or rattle, a dent or a scratch.

AND THE PRICE IS $1,675.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE ROADSTER, '22.

The present day trend towards simplicity of operation of a motor car is strikingly manifested in a Wills Sainte Claire runabout roadster.

There is also found a greater degree of permanent beauty.

For the first time in many weeks we are offering for resale a roadster, painted a silver gray with black fenders and striped in Alcazar red.

It is a very pleasing combination and has distinctive character.

This motor is thoroughly guaranteed and certified by us. You will find four brand new cord tires. The mileage is 7,500 miles.

AND THE PRICE IS $2,150.

KISSEL SEDAN, LATE '21.

Painted a beautiful Brewster green, with white hair line stripe around the body. The fenders are painted black and the wheels are painted red.

The coach condition and the upholstering have the appearance of being non-used. There are six practically new cord tires.

We guarantee the mechanical condition of this motor car. A thorough inspection by you will show you that the 7,000 miles that this car has been driven have really improved it.

It is really a very distinctive motor car.

AND THE PRICE IS $1,675.

ROLLS-ROYCE

Packard 3-35 Twin Six 7 Passenger Cabriolet. The chassis of this car is identical with the chassis being built today by the manufacturer. It is fitted with a beautiful custom built collapsible full cabriolet body by Fleetwood. The original finish has been carefully removed and the car refinished in Packard blue. The car is in fine shape mechanically, has good tire equipment, has also dual ignition, and would compare favorably in appearance with a new car of the same model. A smart town car at a low selling price. Cost originally $8,400. Our price, $2,500.

Lincoln 4-5 Passenger Enclosed Drive Cabriolet, equipped with famous Judkins custom built body. This is undoubtedly the finest model the Lincoln Company ever built for the owner who drives himself. This car has had so little use that it cannot be told from brand new. Painted a deep blue, with black superstructure and leather rear quarter. Upholstered in the finest Chase broadcloth with inlaid mahogany trimmings on the interior. It is equipped with silk laspeary slip linings and a complete line of accessories. The Lincoln manufacturer would charge almost as much for this body to order as we ask for the car. Mileage only 17,000. Equipped former owner $6,100. Our price, $4,750.

Cunningham 1920 7 Passenger Touring, newly finished in dark blue with contrasting crimson trimmings. An exceptional bargain at $2,000.

Ambassador, Latest 4 passenger sport model with special equipment. This car driven only 11,000 miles by a director of the company which manufactured it. A real bargain at $2,000.

Pierce-Arrow 1921 7 Passenger Touring. This car was driven only 14,000 miles; is in perfect mechanical condition throughout. The finish looks like new. Is completely equipped with special slip linings, tonneau wind shield, and other accessories. We found this car to be the finest Pierce-Arrow of this model on the market today. Our price, $3,250.

Detroit Electric, late model, double drive, with brand new seven-pass plate glass enclosed body; car has had excellent care and is a phenomenal value at $1,000.

PACKARD
3 MACK BUYS

7½ ton Bull Dog Dump Models.

We are fortunate to be able to offer to our customers such desirable dump trucks at such ridiculously low prices. One of these jobs has just come out of our repair shop and it is in condition that we consider first class. The other two are being overhauled and when completed will sell at similar prices. The one that is ready is repainted to look like new, has steel dump body, hoist tow hooks, and exceptionally good tires, etc. These are excellent values in a dependable make and offer thorough reliability and sturdy construction. Come in and look at this completed job; you will wonder how we can sell it at such an exceptional price; $3,500.

PACKARD MODEL E-D 3½ TON TRUCK. This is a practically new truck; has been used less than 4,000 miles and carries our standard new truck guarantee and service. It is equipped with square combination steel dump body, with 2 partitions, making it suitable for stake body dump. Included are hoist, generator, electric lights, cutout and complete set of tools. Through a fortunate combination of circumstances we are able to offer this nearly new truck at a saving of about $1,000, as compared with the price of a new one equipped as this is. Price $4,100.

OLD RELIABLE 1920 MODEL 5 TON NEW TYPE WORM DRIVE TRUCK. It is equipped with hoist and combination dump body, cab, etc. The general mechanical condition of this truck throughout is excellent; equipped with heavy caterpillar tires in rear and front tires are very good; price $2,500.

You can buy from us on very reasonable terms. We have many other exceptional truck values.

HUMAN FLY LAUGHS AT DEATH. Elmer Goss fell eight stories while climbing a Los Angeles building. An awning broke his fall and he was practically unhurt. Then he volunteered to climb the building again merely to show how the accident happened. Here he is climbing the blank wall once more just after his fall.

The coarse frozen food of the Eskimos keeps their glands active and their teeth protected from decay. Less than 2 Eskimos out of 100 have any signs of dental caries.

Today our soft cooked foods have allowed our glands to slow down. As a consequence 98 people out of 100 have decayed teeth.

Brushing will not remove the real causes of decay

Only the glands of the mouth, functioning properly, can protect the enamel

Brushing alone will not remove the real causes of tooth decay.

Even though you brush your teeth four or five times a day small food particles remain—enough to feed thousands of acid-forming bacteria.

Five minutes after you stop brushing your teeth, these insidious acids are slowly forming again—collecting all over your teeth—eating their way into the enamel.

The only real protection against these acids is the protection Nature provided—the glands of the mouth. These glands should pour out enough alkaline fluid to neutralize and wash away these acids as fast as they form.

In prehistoric man this was the case, and it is true today of the Eskimos and other uncivilized people. Tooth decay is almost unknown. The glands automatically protect the teeth.

Today our mouth glands are slowing down

Today our glands do not pour out enough fluids to neutralize these destructive acids. They have slowed down because they are not stimulated by constant chewing. The tough raw foods of early man kept the glands exercised and stimulated.

Chewing increases the action of the glands 20 times. Twenty times as much fluid pours over your teeth when you chew. This has been established through experiments with the sialometer, a new instrument physicians use to study the mouth glands.*

Today a scientific substitute for long chewing has been found. The glands can be made to protect the teeth by using Pebeco Tooth Paste.

Pebeco keeps the mouth glands active

In addition to the regular cleaning and polishing properties which all dentifrices have, Pebeco has a peculiar effect upon the salivary glands. As soon as it enters the mouth it causes the glands to flow copiously. This full normal flow continues for a long time.

Thus the teeth are cleaned and the conditions are established which Nature intended. The mouth cleans itself automatically. As fast as the acids form—the saliva washes them away.

Pebeco is neither acid nor alkaline. It does not attempt to change the quality of the saliva; that is best regulated by nature. It merely increases the flow to normal.

Pebeco is made of the finest ingredients. It cannot injure the enamel or the edges of the gums.

The regular use of Pebeco will keep the glands of the mouth active and your teeth clean and sound. 50c at all druggists. Manufactured only by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

COUNTESS TAKES TO DANCING for a livelihood. Shorn of their wealth by the soviet upheaval, many titled women of old Russia have gone on the stage. Countess Yurieva is making quite a reputation in Paris as a dancer. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

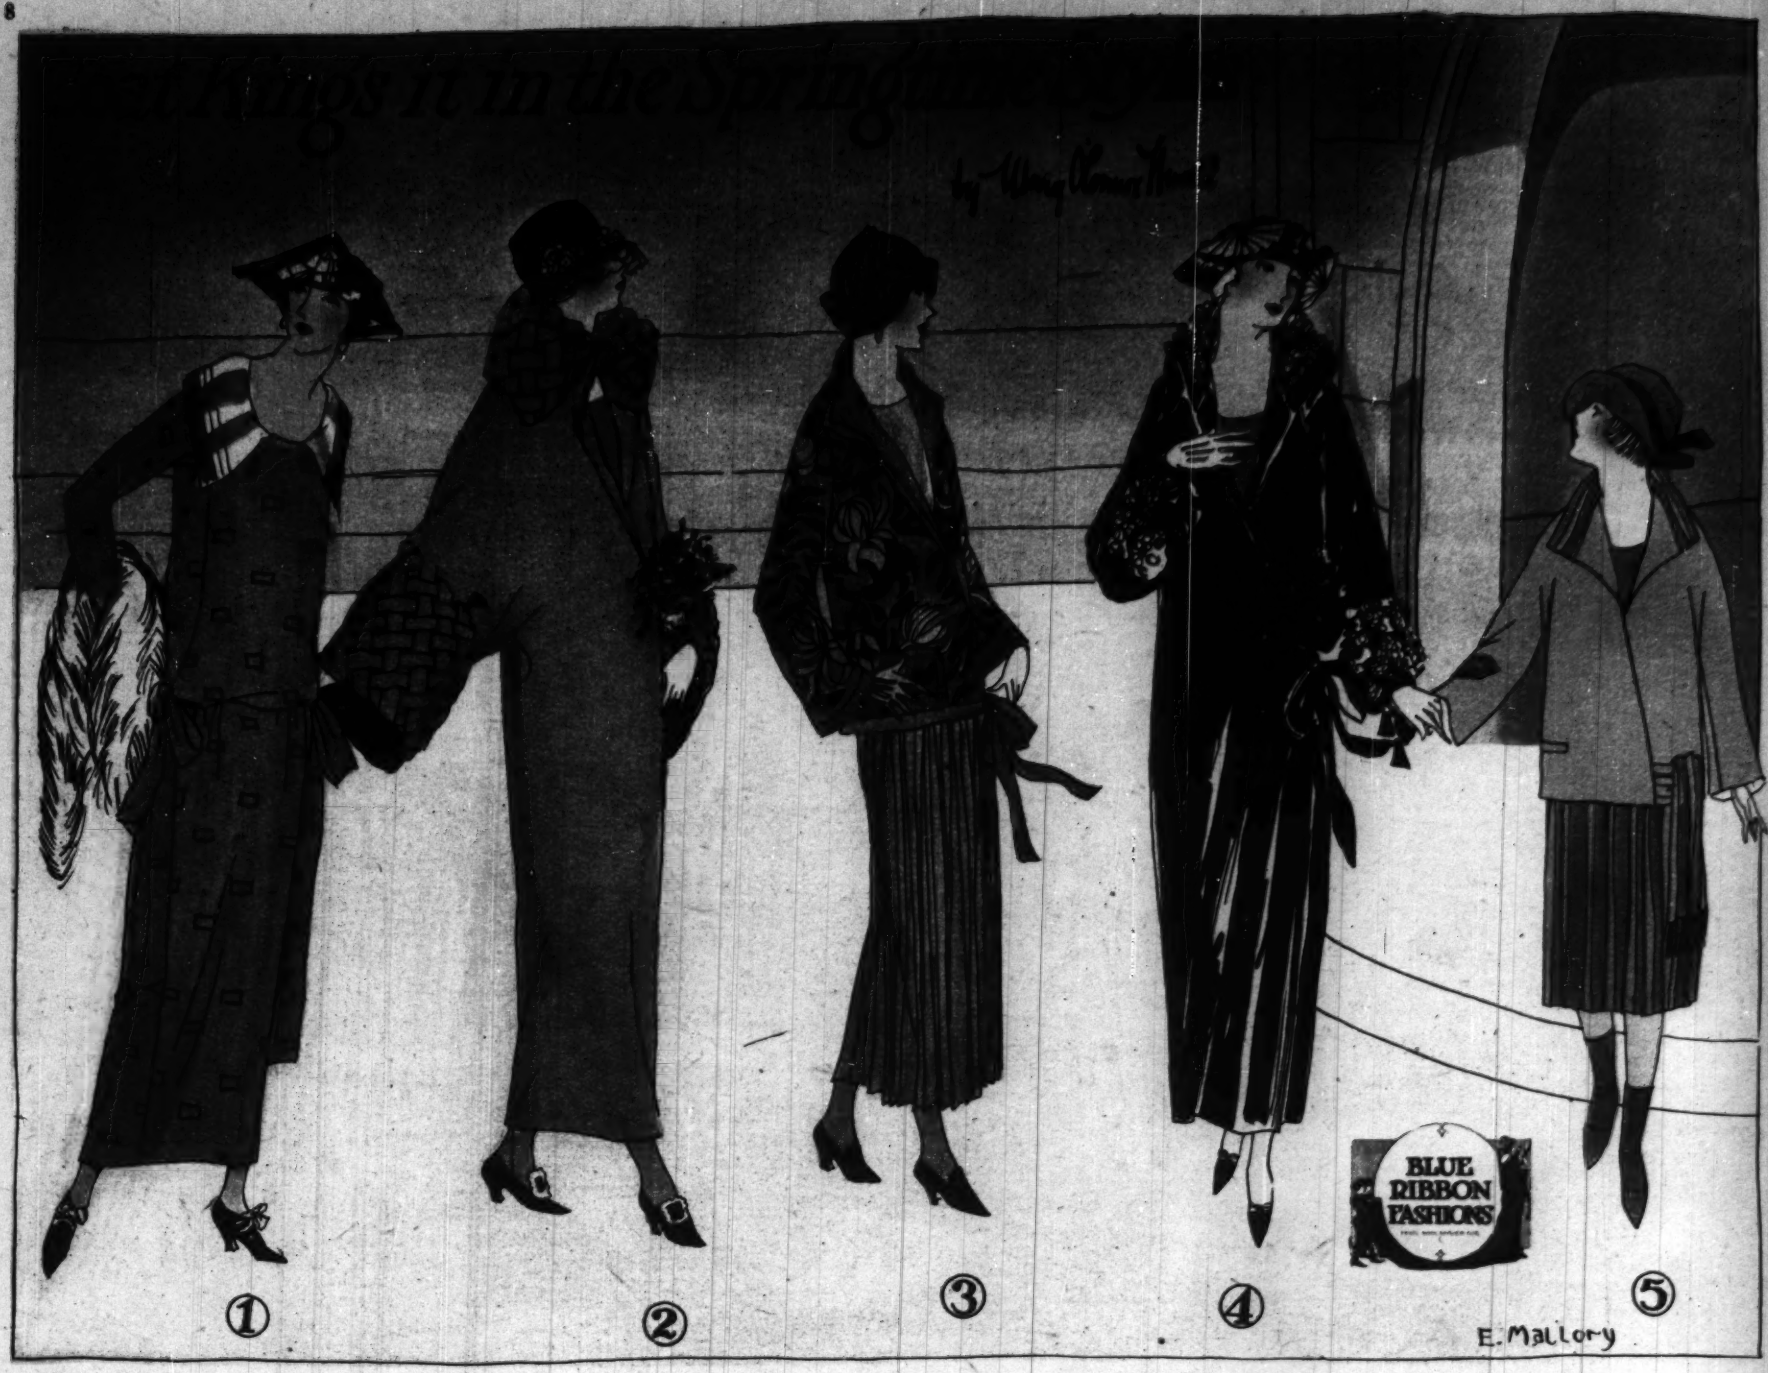
MOTHER AND CHILD always form a picture of sublime beauty. This one shows Mrs. Merle Lytle and baby of Washington, Ia. Mrs. Lytle recently won the $100 prize awarded each day in The Tribune's Tongue Twister contest. (Photograph from Graves.)



This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Gone is the day of the one and only seasonal coat. The planning of every new wardrobe enterprise now starts with the query, "What wrap?" Every street dress or skirt-and-blouse combination today has its wrap. Or looks with designing eye and intention to appropriate upon occasion the wrap of some other dress or skirt-and-blouse combination.

Hence the continuous spring murmur of two and three piece suits, and two piece dresses. It means starting with the wrap handicap every time. Even the blouse of the two piece dress is constructed on wrap lines.

We shall see capes in plenty as the weather permits. The reign of the short, gay jacket known as the paletot is assured. It is going to leave its box-line and flare saucily, they say. Hints of that are seen already. I illustrate in No. 3 its favored incarnation at this hour, though frequently it has a front button rather than tie closing. And—this from Paris—three-quarter length coats, flaring slightly, are to be permitted in costume suits for older women. The box cut now rules shorter coats.

Paris mentioned greater fullness of skirt. What appears out of ships so far is attained through plaitings, held closely, so that the silhouette to which we are accustomed remains unchanged. Length of skirt for street averages seven inches.

Fine twilled fabrics are having their day in spring suits. Preferably in tan, beige, gray, and variants of these colors. The old standby, navy blue serge, is seen sitting here and there in the seats of the mighty. Next to twills, and for dressier wear, soft faced materials in wool, crêpe de Chine and other crêpes, poplins, alpaca and moire appear.

All effort goes into handling and decorating. Either the fabric is so pleasing and ornamental in itself that it need only express itself within the accepted silhouette, as for example, in figure No. 3. Or it is subjected to a rigid system of embroidery or applique calisthenics, to strengthen its effectiveness. Bandings of self or of the same color in another material are much in vogue. Next come pipings and appliques. Leather is liked for these. In fact, coats of leather are seen frequently, or satin that looks like leather. Thread embroidery in tinsel, silk and wool, and ribbon embroidery, are rampant.

OTHER VIEWS OF TODAY'S DRAWINGS.

Run quickly over the styles illustrated, and see how true this is. Figure No. 1 is hand stitched in small oblongs. No. 2 illustrates the liking for worked over bands of self material as collars and cuffs of wrap coats, and No. 4 for bringing out the wrap coat's points with heavy silk embroidered designs. In the last illustration striped and plain material are contrasted by the self-trimming.

One thing is common to all coats this spring, short and long. The belt has been disfranchised. Traffic across the figure has been barred. The girdle fastening or tie sash halts at the side street, or goes out of business altogether.

As everybody goes somewhat or much coated this spring, it may surprise you to see figure No. 3 presented unboxed. The secret is a wonderful new white fox fur, and a warm spring sun. Fur neck pieces are good style, even if they do not lead the spring.

As a matter of record, this maiden black kasha, tiered in the back and trimmed with squares of black stitching, has a short coat at home to wear with this dress and others. It is of heavy stitched crêpe, banded with the kasha. Its rust colored lining matches the rust colored border of her white organdy collar and cuff set. Observe how smartly cut is her new milan chapeau with its four pointed, upturned satin brim, and moire loop ribbon trimming, matched by the moire ribbon ties of her modish shoes.

For sports use—occasions taking one away from city streets that has come to mean—the gayly patterned coatee with a simple monotone slip, or plaited skirt and one colored blouse, or simply skirt and gilet, holds the spring's closest attention. Built either with the side tie closing, or on straight box, single button front closing, its aliveness is magnetic.

It may be simply made of printed crêpe and such material, or come quilted like a coverlet, in satin or heavy cricket flannel like a table silencer. The sign by which you know it belongs to the costume suit category is its lining. The rule is to match that with the blouse.

Miss No. 3 appears with the gay jacket that will follow the younger set about this summer like Mary's lamb. The jacket of red and green cretonne on a brown ground side ties, it may change its mind and straight button in front with one button. Even leave the box line and flare a little. But its union with the plaited skirt will be hard to break. Here caramel flat crêpe was used, and green composed the blouse. A soft stitched suede hat accompanied, and suede shoes.

Two wrap coats, No. 2 of cocoa colored flat crêpe and No. 4 of a rich black cloth that looks like velvet, are included because every spring wardrobe must have its all enveloping coat for occasions. This spring is no exception. Mention has been made of braiding folds of the crêpe in No. 2 to make its only trimming in the shape of the high turnover collar deep cuffs. And in No. 4 heavy black silk embroidery in grape design, applied only to sleeves and collar, is important.

Flowers are much worn with coats this spring, both natural and artificial ones. And the little Chantilly nose veil of figure No. 2, worn with a picoted ribbon cloche, should be remarked, as a present style feature. Also the marquise hat of No. 4, with its white ribbon fan trimming.

Last, but equally indicative of fashion's trend, our 12 year old must be described, in a costume composed of rose and violet tweed. The skirt of striped material has its box plaits so laid as to bring out the violet. The striped goods trims the sleeves and collar of the box coat of plain mixture, and composes the fringed side tie sash.

SILLS' SUAVITY SCORES SUCCESS

MILTON SILLS has a suave manner that makes a great hit with folks. He's smooth as a villain and bland as a hero. The "rough stuff" he leaves for the other fellow to "pull." He does his manhandling with an "I-mean-it" eye that causes the feminine heart to flutter and the coeur masculine to quake. Women say: "O, I LIKE Milton Sills!" Men remark:

"If a girl's got to lose sleep over these movie fellows why doesn't she pick on a regular guy like—Milton Sills!" Then, he's nice and tall and good looking and wears his clothes well and knows how to enter a room.

All in all—small wonder that he's popular with casting directors.

BUYER'S RISK — By Octavus Roy Cohen

"Hello, Mary," he said. "How's Tim?"

Jim Hanvey, Nemesis and Friend of Crooks, Takes a Case for the Girl Who Outwitted Him in One of His Few Defeats, a Big Bank Job.

JIM HANVEY lolled upon a park bench his ample and ungainly figure entirely surrounded by landscape. The fingers of his right hand clutched the stump of a cigar which for downright meanness was in a class alone. His fat and florid face was wreathed in contentment and his fishy eyes were partially curtained by heavy lids from beneath which Jim stared amusedly at a group of small children who romped in shrill disdain of a sign which warned all and sundry that that particular grass was not to be trod upon.

The sun of early September was dropping slowly to rest behind the interminable line of apartment houses on the farther side of Central Park West. It sprinkled in golden radiance through the reddening leaves above Jim's uncovered head and mottled the rich green carpet beneath his enormous feet. Jim's eyes closed slowly as he luxuriously stretched his Gargantuan frame. Then the eyes opened to rest upon the trim figure of a little girl of six who stood regarding him with an expression of grave but frank interest.

"Hmm!" Jim pulled himself together. "Good evening."

The child made no answer. A spot near Jim's midsection held her undivided attention. The unwieldy detective matched the child's gravity with his own. She was a pretty little thing whose raiment, even to Jim's untutored eyes, bespoke extreme affluence. At length, with absolute ease of manner, she moved forward and touched with her forefinger the gold toothpick which hung suspended from the heavy watch chain spanning Jim's ill fitting vest.

"That's pretty," she commented abruptly.

Jim's face lighted with pleasure. It was seldom indeed that his pet bit of personal ornamentation received so genuine a compliment.

"Ain't it?"

"Yup. Awful pretty." Then doubtfully: "What is it?"

Jim touched a button and a wicked and glistening point appeared. "A toothpick," he explained.

"What's that?"

"It's—well, you see——" His face went blank. "Just a toothpick, that's all. Solid gold."

"O!" said the child. "I see."

Jim felt relieved. He fancied it might be difficult to explain a solid gold toothpick, and he thanked goodness for the youngster's erudition. She continued to finger the bauble approvingly, but, so far as she was concerned, the conversation was at an end.

The silence proved somewhat embarrassing to Jim. It was entirely too impersonal for his friendly nature. "What's you name?"

"Pauline."

"Pauline what?"

"Pauline Lathrop."

"That's a pretty name, Pauline. Where do you live?"

A touch of imitative snobbishness displayed itself in the answer of the little girl. "Riverside drive. My father is a rich man, and we have three automobiles."

"Wonderful! Astounding! And what is your father's name?"

"Mr. Nosh Lathrop. He's an emporter."

"An emporter, eh?" Remembrance came to the detective. "Sure. Sure enough he is. A joolry importer, isn't he?"

"Yup. An' we got three automobiles."

"That certainly is wonderful, Pauline. I'm awful glad to know about them automobiles. I guess your daddy's business must be awful good."

"No," confessed the child frankly. "Father says it's gone to hell."

Jim was a trifle nonplused. "That's too bad. I'm real sorry to hear it, Pauline."

Once again the wordless, contemplative stare of the child. "You're awful fat."

"So I've heard."

"And you look ugly," she finished. "But you ain't."

"That's a relief. I ain't no blue ribbon entry, at that."

"I like that gold thing," continued Pauline. "But I bet you ain't got three automobiles."

"No. I bet I ain't."

"My father has, and he says——"

"Pauline!" The voice of a woman came inquiringly through the soft air of a gradually gathering dusk. "O-o-h! Pauline."

"That's my nurse," she explained to Jim Hanvey. "She gets twenty dollars a week. Her name is Mary."

Jim's eyes turned slowly toward the trim little uniformed figure which was bearing down upon them. Faint stirrings of recollection occurred in the detective's brain. The figure—the face—the voice—— And now Mary had taken Pauline's hand.

"I told you not to run away from that summer house. I've been looking everywhere for you." She exhibited genuine concern—and relief. Pauline appeared not at all interested.

"This man has got a gold toothpick," she announced triumphantly. "But he ain't got three automobiles."

THE nurse turned toward the big man with a smile of quiet apology on her lips. Her eyes met the glassy orbs of the detective, and the smile congealed. The color receded from her cheeks and it was patent that she was struggling to recover a poise suddenly lost.

The detective blinked with maddening slowness. "Hello, Mary," he said. "How's Tim?"

The trim little woman in the nurse's uniform stood rigid for a moment. Then she turned to the child. "Run on and play with the other children a few minutes," she ordered. Pauline obeyed willingly enough. The nurse stood regarding Hanvey apprehensively, and eventually the mammoth detective punctured the silence.

"Why the disguise, Mary?"

She spoke in tones so low as to be scarcely audible. "It isn't a disguise, Jim."

"No-o? Last time I seen you——"

"Never mind that," she said nervously. "I'm runnin' straight now. Lay off."

"Goshamighty, Mary—I ain't aiming to do nothin' else. I'm just curious."

"I tell you everything's all right."

"Sure it is. But why the job? What you doin' nursin' a kid?"

He could discern the struggle which she was undergoing. And finally she seated herself beside him. "There ain't a thing wrong, Jim. Honest there ain't. I've just been workin' since they sent Tim up."

"He's in stir?"

"Didn't you know?"

"I heard somethin' about it—but the case wasn't exactly in my line as I remember. Gov'ment, wasn't it?"

She nodded. "Smuggling."

"Shuh!"

"They caught him with the goods. He pleaded guilty. He's doing a two year stretch in Atlanta. He left me flat—that's why I went to work. I got a nursing job because I naturally like kids. I had to do somethin'."

"Mm!" Jim's face betrayed no particular interest. If there was doubt of her in his mind he did not show it. "Funny—you workin' as a nursegirl while Tim is doing a stretch. Well—I sure hope you stay on the straight an' narrow. It don't pay awful good, but it's real safe."

She sighed with relief. "I'm not pulling anything, Jim. I'm on the level—anyway until Timmy gets out."

She summoned her youthful charge and they walked off together toward the Seventy-second street gate. Jim stared speculatively after them. He groped blindly for a match and relighted his cigar. Then, as he inhaled deeply, he gave vent to an expression of doubt:

"Wonder what she lied to me for?"

had appeared on the occasion of their last meeting—a bank job in Omaha, a successful bank job in which he knew that she had been the brains of the gang. Jim held a great admiration for that little woman; she was courageous and she was clever; she played her cards well and she played them boldly. That last case had been one of his few unsuccessful ones and he had been more than half glad of it. He had been out to get them, but, failing, he felt nothing of resentment—only a keen admiration for the brains which had outwitted him.

But a few minutes since he had seen Mary Lannigan flustered for the first time in the several years of their acquaintanceship. That discomfiture bespoke guilt. Hanvey's fat fingers groped for the gold toothpick so lately admired by Pauline Lathrop. That golden horror was of inestimable assistance to Hanvey in moments of mental stress. Mary working as a nursegirl. Hmph! There was something behind that—bound to be. Jim Hanvey was reputed to know intimately every worth while crook in the country, and he counted Tim and Mary Lannigan as among his best friends. Jim knew, for instance, that Tim had a young fortune salted away and that it was not at all necessary for his wife to work as a menial while he enjoyed the hospitality of the United States government. That being the case, Mary's present occupation was the cloak for something. He was sorry—darn shame Mary couldn't keep straight. Good kid. "An' doggone her—she's gone an' got me all interested."

AT first Jim determined to play hands off. He wasn't a policeman; it was no duty of his to make trouble for crooks who were not engaged in work which held his immediate attention. But there was something bizarre in the thought of this excessively clever little woman acting as nursemaid to a snippy little girl who boasted of her father's trio of motor cars. Two other facts paraded before him, demanding that he adduce something from their proximity to one another.

One of them was that the father of the girl whom Mary nursed was a jewelry importer.

The second fact had to do with Tim Lannigan's incarceration for smuggling. Smuggling was not in Tim's line.

That night Jim reluctantly omitted his regular picture show and did a little investigation. Information came readily to hand principally because Jim knew just where to turn. When he retired near midnight he knew considerably more about Mary Lannigan's job, but there were one or two blank spaces which had aroused his curiosity beyond measure.

One vital thing he had learned—and that was that the name of Noah Lathrop had been mentioned more than casually in the case which resulted in Tim's journey to Atlanta. Just what Lathrop had to do with it no one could adequately explain, but there was undeniably a sinister significance.

He was at the park again the following day, but Mary and the child did not appear. The next afternoon Jim was on Riverside drive at the hour he knew a nurse would naturally go walking. Pauline recognized him first, nor, in the eagerness with which she greeted him, did he lose sight of the apprehension which blanched the pretty face of Mary Lannigan.

"That," proclaimed the tactful Pauline, designating Jim's gold toothpick, "is vulgar."

"G'wan! Why?"

"Gentlemen," she explained, "do not use gold toothpicks."

Jim turned quizzically to Mary. "Ain't she the bright kid?" He grew serious then. "Come out of it, sister. I ain't gonna eat you."

He walked with them to Central park. In response to his unspoken command Mary sent Pauline to play with the other children and she and Jim sat together on the bench. It was Jim who spoke first, after he had lighted one of his offensively fragrant cigars.

"Get me straight, Mary—I don't want to cause you no trouble, but you've got my curiosity aroused something terrible."

For a moment she didn't answer. She sat staring at the path where her toe was etching aimlessly in the dust. And finally she faced him with a flash of her old-time spirit. "I want you to lay off, Jim. I'm not pulling anything crooked."

"If you're runnin' straight, I ain't got no choice, have I?"

"Yes—you have."

"How you make that?"

"You can queer things for me—and," earnestly, "I don't want 'em queered, Jim—I don't want 'em queered."

There was a little break in her voice which puzzled him. She was deeply moved—that, in itself, was a novelty. He took her hand gently between both of his enormous ones, and patted it as a father might have done.

"I ain't tryin' to butt in on your affairs, sister, but I'd like to get the lowdown on this. I'll say right off—wait a minute; I'll come clean with you before you spill anything. You got me curious night before last with that straight stuff an' all. I know—an' you know I know—that Tim has a pile salted away, which means that I didn't swallow your bunk about needin' the twenty-per-an'-cakes you're gettin' for nursing that kid which has a father who owns three automobiles.

"As I say, that sort of started me off an' I did a little checking up on my own hook. I learned, among other things, that Noah Lathrop's name sort of figured in the smugglin' case which sent Tim south—that indicatin' pretty clear that you ain't workin' in Lathrop's house for no reason which ought to make Lathrop comfortable. So knowin' what I know, if you want to loosen up—why, go right to it, sister, an' I'll be all ears, like any other jackass."

HER head was bowed and it was plain she was thinking intensively. On the grass nearby the children romped, their shrillings cutting through the balminess of the September evening. From Central Park West came the clanging of Eighth avenue cars and the occasional sirening of automobile traffic. A man and woman on horseback rode down the bridle path near them, and a park policeman strolled by and ostentatiously looked away as he, with considerable surprise, recognised the obese Hanvey.

At length she commenced speaking, her voice coming as though from a great distance. "It's important, Jim, first of all, that you understand I'm telling the truth. If there's anything I say that ain't true—it ain't because I think it ain't. I'm giving you the works as I know 'em. I'm telling you—well, first of all, because I want to get it off my chest. And, second, because you'd get wise anyway. And third, because—O! just because.

"I'll commence right at the beginnin', Jim. It started eight months ago when Tim went to Europe. You know he's a real gent, and every once in so often he works the card graft on the big steamers—not often enough for them to know him. Only when business is dull.

"Well, he was over there loafing around waiting for a certain party to sail for America again, this party being the grandest sucker which ever stood a couple of raises for the privilege of drawin' to an in-between straight. About that time Mr. Noah Lathrop was in Paris doing some jewelry buying. He goes over there once or twice every year. His firm is one of the biggest on Maiden Lane. And in Paris at the same time Lathrop and Tim were, was Walter Yeager."

"Yeager?" Hanvey exhibited keen interest. "In Paris?"

"Yeh. All set for a job. An' get this, Jim—I ain't tryin' to get Walt in bad. He's had a tough enough time already. But even if Walt does run foul of trouble I can't help it. I'm out to do what I can for Tim—that's all I'm thinking of."

Again that little catch in her voice. Jim closed his glassy eyes sleepily, and motioned for her to continue.

"To hold a long story down, Walt Yeager was on to something soft in Paris. He pulled the job and got away with it—about three hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of stones that are stones. It turned the Paris police inside out, and stood 'em on their ear. It was as nifty a piece of work as you've ever heard of, an' Walt got away with it in a way you'd be proud of if you knew the details.

"Well, there was Walt with the jewels and nothin' to do with 'em. The European markets had nine eyes peeled, an' Walt didn't dare bring 'em to this country, because when he came through the customs there'd be a stir and a talk—and flooie! So Walt, hearing that Lathrop was doin' his semi-annual buying, an' knowing that he wasn't more than ten miles above a shady transaction, went to him, confessed that he had stolen jewels, and asked him what they'd be worth in cash, delivered at Lathrop's New York office.

"LATHROP was interested, of course. It was a graft for him. He'd run no risk buying the stuff in New York, and since his house has a first class rep he knew he could slip 'em on the market one by one and the trade would never be no wiser. They dickered around for a while and agreed on one hundred and forty thousand dollars cash, f. o. b. Maiden Lane. And that's where Tim was pulled into the deal.

"Walt Yeager wasn't willing to declare those jewels at the customs, and he wasn't game to try and smuggle 'em. So he told Lathrop that in order to carry the deal through Lathrop must hire some one to do the smuggling. Yeager and Lathrop both inquired around and learned that Tim was over there—he bein' at that time in Bremen waiting for his sucker friend. He had gone there from Paris. Lathrop went to Germany, found Tim, and offered him five thousand dollars for the job of smuggling.

"Tim grabbed it. It seemed like a cinch. And that's where Lathrop done Tim dirt—because," she turned her blazing eyes on Jim Hanvey—"the dirty crook never told Tim that the jewels he was supposed to smuggle was stolen goods!"

Jim nodded heavily. "I see. Lathrop was dishonest. Even with Tim."

"Exactly. And he played safe seven different ways. He saw to it that Tim and Walt Yeager engaged passage on a French liner for New York, and he had it framed with Walt that he wasn't to say a word to Tim until they were pretty close to the customs, when all Walt was to do was to turn the stuff over to Tim, watch Tim smuggle it through, and then get it back from him and deliver it to Lathrop. Tim was to make the trip knowing that some one was going to slip him some jewels just before they got to customs. And as true as I'm telling you, Jim, he didn't know it was nothing more than a smuggling job. It never occurred to him that there might be something behind it.

"Lathrop never even come back on the same ship with them. He sailed a week ahead from Southampton. Tim and Walt came over together from Havre, and a couple days before they reached New York Walt slipped Tim the stuff.

"Well, there ain't any use botherin' you with details about how Tim tried to work it. It's enough to say that they nabbed him. Caught him dead to rights. Tim was sorry, but he wasn't really worried. He knew all he had to do was to get in touch with Lathrop on the Q. T. and a heap of influence would be used to get him a fine instead of a jail sentence and that Lathrop would pay the fine. But——" her hand went out and tightened grimly over Jim's flabby paw—"Lathrop welched. Welched like a dirty yeller dog. He said he didn't know Tim, hadn't never seen him before, and had nothing whatever to do with the case. Meanwhile Tim, feeling secure, had pleaded guilty to the smuggling charge.

"And it wasn't until after he pleaded guilty to that, Jim—and Walt Yeager had disappeared—that Tim learned how bad he was in. Because the jewels he had admitted smuggling were the ones which had been stolen in Paris and they were recognized instanter. That's where Tim was crossed up. It wasn't that they nabbed him for smuggling—he was guilty of that and willing to take his medicine. But he wasn't mixed up in the robbery.

"And here's the lay of the land now. Tim got two years in the federal prison for smuggling. He's been there seven months. The jewels have been returned to Paris. Yeager has disappeared. Noah Lathrop swears he don't know nothing about anything crooked. And when Tim gets through serving his smuggling time, Jim—they're going to send him back to Paris to stand trial for stealing them jewels."

Her voice trailed off. Jim blinked with maddening slowness and turned his apparently sightless eyes upon a pert little squirrel near by. But his voice was charged with keenest sympathy:

"They've got him dead to rights, sure enough, ain't they, Mary?"

"Yes," with fierce bitterness, "they have. He hasn't a leg to stand on. It's twenty or twenty-five years in a French prison for him. He was in Paris when the robbery occurred—no chance to prove an alibi. He tried to smuggle the stones. He was caught red handed. He confessed to the smuggling. Lathrop was in the clear—what's Tim's word against his? And I—well, I don't mind the two years Tim is doing: he went into that with his eyes open; but, Jim—I'm out to save Tim from doing a twenty year stretch for something he never even knew about. That's what I'm doing, Jim. Now do you understand?"

Jim nodded a ponderous affirmative. "I sure do, Mary. I sure do. But I still don't quite savvy this nurse stuff."

Her voice came crisply now in response to the warm friendliness of the detective's tone. "Any man who will do what Noah Lathrop did is the dirtiest kind of a crook. He's poison mean and low down and rotten. You never knew a first class crook who would welch like that, did you?"

"No-o. Not no decent crook."

"Neither did I. And I figured out if Lathrop was that crooked—it wasn't the first time. He's a prominent man and he's proud. He must have slipped before. It's a certainty that some time in his life he's done something just as rotten as the trick he pulled on Tim. O! I wouldn't be kicking if he'd come clean with Tim in the first place and told him it was stolen stuff. It was the double-crossing and then the welching that hurt. And the fact that Tim is innocent. A crook has a hard enough life serving time for what he really does, let alone what he don't do.

"That's why I worked around and got this job as nurse girl in Lathrop's home. I've got a room on the place, and I'm watching, Jim—I'm watching close. I'm learning a heap about that bird. He's rotten all the way through—a cheap, piking, safety first crook. Smug and self-satisfied and so stuck on himself I want to kill him sometimes. Of course, he don't dream I know Tim Lannigan or that I'm anything except what I seem.

"And some day, Jim, I'm gonna get something on Noah Lathrop—something that he'd rather die than see come out. And when I do I'm gonna make him sing. I'm gonna make him come out in the clear and save Tim from doing that stretch in France." She threw her arms wide in an unconsciously dramatic gesture—"That's why I'm working as a nurse girl in his house, Jim—that's why."

PAULINE LATHROP appeared and demanded two cents with which to purchase an apple on a stick. She accepted the money from Jim, but again expressed her disdain for the vulgar toothpick. "And your cigars smell terrible."

Jim sighed. "I reckon they do. But I like 'em."

"You're a funny man," said the child.

Pauline departed joyously to purchase her confection. Jim turned friendly eyes upon the tiny, indomitable figure of the little woman by his side. He tchk'd once or twice and mopped his forehead with a lavendar handkerchief.

"You'll lay off me, won't you, Jim?"

"Huh?"

"You'll give me a free hand in this matter, won't you? Let me play it my own way?"

He thought for a moment before replying. And then, slowly and deliberately he shook his head. "Nope."

He saw her figure stiffen, watched the delicate hands ball into tiny fists. "Jim!" There was horror and unbelief in her tone.

"Nope, Mary—I ain't gonna play hands off in this little game of yours. Not for a minute. I can't." He, with difficulty, crossed one enormous leg over the other. "But I tell you what I will do," he volunteered conversationally.

"What?"

His voice was toneless.

"I'll help you."

For a second she did not move. "You—you'll help?" she choked.

"Sure."

"H-h-help me to clear Tim?"

"Sure."

She faced him then, her face flushed and radiant, the light of happiness flaming from her fine eyes. "Jim Hanvey!" she said, "I love you for that!"

He fidgeted in embarrassment. "It is kinder funny—a detective workin' for a crook. But it's something I've always wanted to do. Of course, I mightn't be of any help——"

"You will, Jim. You will. O! it's wonderful. I've been so alone——"

"Aw! dry up, sister. It's my job to nab the whole bunch of you when you've done something to be nabbed for. But I like you —every one of you—and I'm damned if I can sit back and see you go up for something you didn't do. Specially when you've been double crossed by an honest man."

And long after she and little Pauline had disappeared beyond the traffic of Central Park West, long after gray dusk had merged gently into velvet night, long after the shrill playcalls of children had been superseded by the low toned dialogue of occasional passing couples and the insistent, rhythmic k-chnk, k-chnk of oarlocks from the adjacent lake—long after all of that Jim Hanvey sat upon his park bench and mused upon the vagaries of circumstance.

JIM HANVEY had experienced a long, a colorful, a varied career. Now, for the first time, he found himself embarked upon a professional enterprise on behalf of a criminal, the object of his attack being a person in that class of society for which men such as Jim Hanvey serve as bulwark.

The situation was bizarre—rather outrageously so—but it held an irresistible appeal to Jim. He was a lonely man who counted his friends among those whom he professionally hunted. The better class of criminals knew Jim and liked him. They outwitted him if they could—but they played straight with him, just as he did with them. To most of them it was a source of wonderment that he had not long since joined their ranks. In answer to their frank questionings he invariably returned an answer astounding in its simple logic:

"A feller is either born crooked or straight. I was born straight—that's all. You can't blame me for that any more than I can blame you for bein' crooked."

But now he was to attain the unspoken ambition of many years: he was to expend his talents in an effort to free one of his criminal friends from an unjust charge. Let Tim Lannigan serve his time for smuggling—he was guilty. But Jim had checked up on Mary's story and knew that she had spoken the truth. That being the case, it behooved him to see that Tim served a sentence for what he had done and was extricated from the predicament into which he had blundered.

That he had undertaken a task of no mean proportions was plain to him. In this particular matter the position of Noah Lathrop was impregnable. There was no possible proof that Lathrop had connived with Walter Yeager to purchase the stolen gems. There was even less proof that Noah had hired Tim to do the smuggling. Certainly there was no chance to enlist the services of Walt Yeager. It wasn't Walt's fault, anyway. He had played fair with both Tim and Lathrop by the tenets of the criminal code. It was unfortunate that Lathrop had betrayed Tim—but it was too much to expect that Walt would do anything so absurdly Quixotic as to confess to the robbery in order to save Lannigan. And there wasn't even an outside chance to convict Yeager of the original theft.

Mary Lannigan had the correct idea. A man as crooked as Lathrop had shown himself to be in this instance had been crooked before. He would be crooked again. He had indicated that he was molded of conscienceless stuff. Somewhere in his past there must be a skeleton which he would not care to have displayed. And in order to prevent that display he might even be willing to confess his guilt as a smuggling accessory. In that way—and in that way alone—Tim Lannigan could be saved from facing trial—and certain conviction—for the crime which he had not committed.

Jim first of all boarded the Southern for Atlanta, where he had two long and earnest conversations with Tim Lannigan. Tim's story verified that of Mary in every way. The big, handsome, red headed crook was pitifully embarrassed at the knowledge that Jim was working for him. Too, he made no attempt to conceal his emotion at tidings of Mary's activity in his behalf. Jim found him bitter against Lathrop and not at all so against Walt Yeager. "Poor Walt! He was crossed up pretty near as bad as I was. And he's flat now. Gosh! To think of getting away with a job like that and then having a fall down. It's tough!"

"Sure is," agreed Jim.

Acquainting himself with Noah Lathrop's personality without meeting that gentleman was a more difficult undertaking. He made occasion to be near him two or three times when Lathrop was unconscious of the sleepy eyed surveillance. Jim found Lathrop a rather undersized, slender man of obtrusive pomposity and disagreeable manner. He spoke in a loud, nasal voice which carried unpleasantly a considerable distance, and his utterances were all dogmatic. Jim found his Great-I-Am attitude annoying and at the same time amusing. There was a laughable similarity between father and daughter. Jim could well fancy the boast of the man——

"I pay four thousand a year for my apartment on the drive and I maintain three cars." Jim's big fingers fumbled with the gold toothpick. Somehow, it seemed a little less vulgar than Pauline had led him to believe.

Jim held frequent conferences with Mary Lannigan. She had nothing to report, but there was no lessening of confidence or determination. He was amused by her grim defiance—the indomitable will power behind the masklike manners and pretty, girlish face. No wonder the smugly complacent Noah Lathrop was unsuspicious of the dynamite within his house; to all appearances Mary was merely an innocuously pretty young woman temporarily engaged in the nursing profession—against the day when she would be carried off to wife by some six foot truck driver.

"I KNOW I'm right, Jim. The man's rotten all the way through—and he handled this affair in a way which proves that it ain't the first time he's pulled something. Sometimes when I watch him I get mad enough to scream—I can imagine him chuckling to himself about his cleverness. Not a thought for the man who he thinks is going to do the long stretch in France. Her teeth clicked suddenly. "O! what's the use of letting myself get all worked up? I guess my game is to lay low and keep grinning."

"You said it, sister. And when you get something on him—talk it over with me. We'll make him dance a hornpipe."

She looked up gratefully into his expressionless eyes. "You can do that, Jim. Until you promised to help I was only a crook without a chance. I didn't know what I was going to do when I found what I was hunting."

Jim shrugged. "It's you who's got to do the discoverin', Mary. Just keep those bright eyes wide open——"

"I sure ain't gonna do nothing else."

"—And let me know every least little thing that goes on. Listen in on his dining room conversation all you can. A feller as stuck on himself as that bimbo—an' as crazy about hearin' himself talk—is certain to blab something around the house." Jim lighted a cigar. "He may even have some interestin' papers lyin' around."

"No," she said with perfect candor, "I've searched everything. Even the safe."

"Good." He rose heavily to his feet. "Keep it up, sis. We've got all the time in the world, plus—an' the best thing we can do is to use it. By the way, how's my little friend Pauline?"

The girl made a wry face. "Ugh! Nasty little minx."

"Huh!" grinned Jim, "think what she'll be like at forty."

A fortnight dragged by. Jim busied himself with routine matters, without, however, allowing the main focus of his attention to waver from the Lannigan matter. Occasionally he made it a point to meet Mary in the park. She had nothing to tell him and he talked things over with her only for her own sake—to keep her courage and optimism keyed to the proper pitch. There was something heroic in her doggedness. He shook his head in wonderment at the thought that until recently she had been playing a lone hand—just as grim, just as determined—"I reckon," he mused, "that she sort of might be what you'd call kinder crazy about that Tim Lannigan."

It was not until another week had passed that anything happened. It was early October and the air was chill with the portent of coming winter. Jim Hanvey was sprawled on the lounge in the untidy living room of his apartment reading the pugilistic news in a current sporting weekly. The air was fetid with the odor of his vile cigar, his stockinged feet were cocked upon the table and he had allowed his flowered suspenders to drop comfortably about his tremendous waist. It was a considerable effort to answer the summons of the telephone and his voice was none too gentle——

"Hey! Hello! What you ringin' so much about?"

"Jim? This is Mary."

His expression altered like magic. He caught the nuance of excitement in her carefully modulated tones.

"Yes?"

"Are you alone?"

"Entirely."

"Can I come up—now?"

"You tell 'em. I'll fix it with the telephone boy so's he won't start no scandal."

A half hour later she was with him. She threw open the window despite his protest. His eyes were fixed steadily upon the attractive vividity of her face. Then he yawned and appeared to sink into an indifferent lethargic doze. It was only when she had drawn up a chair and placed her hands on his arm that the sleepy eyes uncurtained with an indication of interest.

"A'right, sister—shoot."

SHE found difficulty in selecting a starting point, and when she did eventually speak it was with an incoherence which was rather unusual: "He's slipping, Jim—and I'm watching."

"You don't say!"

"Yes—I do. I knew it would come if I just watched close enough. Of course, I've had to keep pretty much out of the way and I haven't learned all that I might, but——"

"At that," interjected Jim dryly, "you learned a heap more an' a heap faster than I am now."

She laughed—a semi-hysterical little quaver—and pulled herself together. "Jim, Noah Lathrop is up to something."

Jim nodded in satisfaction. "Good."

"He's had a visitor at the house for the last two evenings. Who do you think it is?"

"How many guesses do I get?"

Her eyes burned into his, her voice trembled. "Teddy Nelson!"

Jim nodded ponderously and, although his expression lost none of its impassivity, his tone indicated a lively interest. "Teddy Nelson, eh?"

"Yes—Teddy. And they're talking turkey."

"Teddy usually does."

The girl sat back and inspected the bovine face of the detective. "You got any recent suspicions of Teddy?"

Jim's head inclined. "Have you?"

"Yes."

"What?"

Unconsciously she lowered her tone. "He's got the Rawlings pearls."

Jim yawned with his eyes. "Right the first time, sis. You take the head of the class."

"You knew?"

"Sure. An' I ain't the only dick which does. They've been watchin' Teddy ever since them pearls were stolen. The only reason they didn't nab him long ago was because they didn't know where he had 'em cached—it wasn't gonna do 'em a bit of good to grab Teddy unless they got the pearls, too."

She shook her head slowly. "I didn't know they suspected Teddy of that job."

"There ain't but a half dozen men in the country could of done it," explained Jim, "an' Teddy was the only one with a perfect alibi, so they knew it was him. But it ain't Teddy they're after—it's the stuff."

"So-o. And you think he's trying to sell 'em to Lathrop?"

"It's a cinch. He can't sell 'em nowhere's else. There ain't a fence would dare handle 'em, and the easiest way they could be put on the market would be through a first class wholesale jewelry house. Yeh—I reckon Mr. Noah Lathrop is just about aiming to slip his head into a noose."

The girl rose to her feet and paced the room. "It's the first thing I've discovered. I wish I thought he'd dare buy those things. I wish we could catch him with the goods."

Jim's toneless voice came as though from another room. "You keep those eyes of your'n peeled, Mary. If he's gone this far with the deal the chances are he'll go through. An' if you can get wise to the hour when they pull it I'll be on hand."

"You think they'll do it at home?"

"Surest thing you know. A guy as keen as Lathrop ain't riskin' a deal like that in his office; he wouldn't even let Teddy come there if he knew what he was comin' for. Yeh, sis, I reckon they'll put it through at home. So all you got to do is watch an' keep me posted."

"And what will you do?"

"My durndest—that's all I can promise."

"Mr. Hanvey, this is indeed a pleasure."

"That's more than enough, Jim—a heap more than enough."

Jim flushed slightly. "Don't you go countin' on me too strong. You can remember at least one case where I fell down something awful, an' there ain't no certainty I won't flop this one."

Mary had the grace to blush. "I'm sorry about that, Jim."

"Aw, gwan! I ain't. It was a pleasure to have you put it over me. Say, listen—some day I want the lowdown on that, Mary."

THE girl departed, and then for three days he heard nothing from her. On the fourth day she telephoned him to meet her in Central park.

"Teddy was there again last night."

"Sure enough?"

"Yes—for three hours. And this morning I heard Mr. Lathrop breaking a dinner engagement he had for tonight."

"So you sort of reckon maybe tonight's the night?"

"Yes. I'm pretty sure it's an attempt to sell Lathrop the Rawlings pearls. I did a bit of listening last night and I heard something of what they were saying—about having the cash there. I guess poor Teddy is glad to get them off his hands at any price."

"Yeh—I reckon he is. They ain't nothin' now but a li'bility. Hmm! Reckon I better stick around this evenin'."

They put their heads together then in an earnest discussion of details. And when Jim rose heavily to his feet a half hour later and waddled away through the trees the girl looked after him with an expression which would have brought a warm glow to the sentimental heart of the big detective had he glimpsed it. Somehow the sun seemed to shine with unusual friendliness that afternoon upon the slim figure of the girl in the nurse's uniform, and she felt suddenly close to her big, handsome husband in the Atlanta prison.

She had never quite recovered from her amazement at Jim's position in this case She had always liked Jim, but the idea that he might some day assist her—a professional criminal—in a matter involving the possible freeing of her criminal husband—had been beyond the realm of possibility.

True, thus far Jim had done little and that little with his customary unobtrusiveness. His chief aid had been in moral support, in a willingness to talk things over. What had really been accomplished had been the result of her own unremitting vigilance, but the hour was approaching when Jim was to play a leading rôle. At the moment of denouement she would have been sadly handicapped without him—and she knew it, for there was no possible chance of publicity without an airing of her own unsavory reputation.

With Jim as an ally all was different. The knowledge that he was helping her imparted a strength and a courage far beyond anything she had theretofore experienced. And he had promised to be watching from across the street that night—to be awaiting her signal.

DARKNESS settled early over the drive, a deep, cloudy darkness punctured by the faint twinkling of lights from the Jersey shore, the sparkle of apartment house windows, glaring arrows of brilliance from the head lamps of speeding automobiles and lumbering busses. From a window in the Lathrop apartment Mary Lannigan fancied she could discern the overlarge figure of Jim Hanvey bulking in the gloom across the way. She returned to her own little cubbyhole of a room and waited—waited, it seemed, for an eternity.

And eventually there came the ringing of a telephone and Lathrop himself answered. She heard his voice bidding the operator to send the gentleman up. A few minutes later Lathrop opened the door of his apartment, and then Mary heard footsteps in the hallway and she opened her door in time to see Lathrop and Teddy Nelson disappear into the library.

Jaw firm and eyes steady, Mary Lannigan proceeded with meticulous care. Fortunately, Mrs. Lathrop was out that evening—"Gadding about like she always does"—and the butler was attending to affairs of his own. Mary had been left in charge of the complacently sleeping Pauline. She crept to the door of the library and applied an ear to the keyhole.

From inside came the well nigh unintelligible murmur of voices. Occasionally one or the other of the men would become argumentative. It was plain they were bargaining. Mary fancied that she could see the long sought for string of Rawlings pearls through the keyhole, and once she fancied she heard the rustle of new paper money.

It was then that she went to a front window and, using an electric torch, flashed to Jim Hanvey the agreed signal. She tiptoed into Pauline's room and assured herself that the child was sleeping soundly. Then into the hallway again to resume her vigil.

After an interminable wait there came a light tapping on the door. She opened it softly and admitted the mammoth detective.

"Goshamighty," he whispered, "that boy downstairs didn't want to let me come up." He patted her shoulder reassuringly. "How's tricks?"

She detailed developments in a voice barely above a whisper. He nodded ponderous approval. "Fine stuff. Here's where ol' sleuth gits in his dirty work, ain't it?"

She designated the library door. "What'll I do, Jim?"

"Just stick around to look after the remains—if any."

"You're not expecting anything rough?"

"Naw. Teddy ain't that kind unless he's changed a lot. But I'm gonna stage an awful play just to see whether a feller which owns three automobiles can turn green."

She led him to the door and then withdrew into the shadows of an adjacent room. Jim patted down the ill fitting coat which hung so grotesquely around his girthful figure and rapped once upon the door.

For a dramatic instant he stood motionless, then flung open the door and entered—blinking like a monster owl in the brilliant light.

Before him was an interesting tableau. Lathrop, motionless, was bending across the table inspecting a string of magnificent matched pearls. Beside him was a pile of crisp, new one hundred dollar bills. His lean, rather saturnine, face still reflected the avarice of a moment since, although an expression of stark terror was now slowly robbing him of his naturally aggressive unpleasantness.

Opposite sat Teddy Nelson—suave, dapper, perfectly at ease. Nelson's experienced eyes rested briefly upon the intruder and a close observer could have noticed the visible effort with which he pulled himself together. Too, it was Nelson who broke the portentous silence. That insouciant criminal rose to his feet, bowed with exaggerated politeness, and spoke in a quietly conversational tone—

"Mr. Hanvey—this is indeed a pleasure."

Jim was enjoying himself thoroughly. He produced a pink silk handkerchief and mopped his forehead. "'Lo, Teddy."

Nelson waved a comprehensive hand toward Lathrop, the pearls, and the money. As yet the astounded jewelry importer had not moved; he sat staring in bewilderment from one to the other.

"You will notice, Jim," said Nelson, "that you have nothing on me. My host is in possession of the money and also of the pearls which I presume you are seeking."

Hanvey grinned. "You're a hard egg, Teddy."

"You are hunting for some pearls, are you not, Jim?"

"I are."

"Well—in all probability you have them. I am willing to explain, Jim, that I never saw those pearls before—I'm as positive of that as I am that I shall never see them again." He made a rueful little grimace. "Business is pretty rotten these days."

LATHROP was getting a grip on himself. He rose unsteadily and addressed the detective. "Who are you?"

The suggestion of a sneer wreathed Nelson's lips. "You're a pretty good little staller yourself, Lathrop."

"What are you talking about?"

All sign of amusement departed from Teddy Nelson's face. He whirled furiously upon Lathrop. "You know damn good and well what I'm talking about. You trapped me into your apartment and brought a dick here—all right, so much for that. You thought you'd have me with the goods and you'd get the glory of having nabbed me. Why, you poor fish, they've been after me for six months for this little job. They've laid off because they didn't know where the pearls were. They've got 'em now—but, by God! they didn't catch 'em on me. They're in your hands. You've got the money. I'm broke. There ain't a piece of evidence against me. And Jim Hanvey is square. I'm asking him to make you prove that you didn't steal those jewels."

Lathrop stammered. He stared first at Nelson, then at the lethargic Hanvey. "A—a detective?" he muttered.

"Uh-huh." It was Jim who answered. "A regular, honest to Gawd detective." He flashed his badge and strode over to the table. He inspected the pearls briefly. "It's that Rawlings stuff, ain't it, Teddy?"

Nelson shook his head. "You can't prove anything by me, Jim. Say, listen!" He became earnest. "Did this half size imitation of a cigar clerk double cross me?"

Jim shook his head slowly. "No-o. Not hardly. Because when you stop to consider things—that would have been a bum play for him. Y'see, Teddy, we've been watchin' this bird a long time—he was sort of mixed up in that Tim Lannigan affair and we figured he was worth lookin' after. An' we knew you had the Rawlings stuff. So when you and him got together we figured that two and two was pullin' their usual act. Y'see, we've got you, Teddy, for the Rawlings job—while all we send Lathrop to jail for is receivin' stolen goods."

Lathrop tried to speak—and could not. His mouth opened and closed—then opened and closed again. His Adam's apple bobbed alarmingly. His voice, when it did come, was shrill with hysteria.

"It's a lie—a lie! I don't know anything about this man. I don't know anything about Lannigan. What he said I did was true—I was trying to prove that he stole these jewels."

"The dirty liar."

"Lay off, Teddy," advised Jim. Then, to Lathrop: "You might as well come clear, buddy. I know how much money there is in that little pile and I know what bank you drew it from and at what time this morning. I know, too, that this ain't the first time you've pulled a stunt like this—but I know it's gonna be the last. Now, Teddy, if you come clean I'll see that things are made light for you—light as I can have 'em made. Give me the lowdown on the job."

Nelson eyed the detective levelly. "Straight, Jim?"

"Here's my hand on it. No promises—only the best I can do for you."

"Well," Nelson cleared his throat, "in that case I'd better come clean. There ain't no use confessing that I stole them pearls off old man Rawlings about a year ago. You know that an' the insurance company detectives know it. They knew it so well that there wasn't a chance for me to dispose of them through the regular channels, so when I heard that Lathrop was inclined to use his position as an honorable man to get away with an occasional dirty little job I went to him and offered to sell and sell cheap——"

"No! It isn't true." Lathrop's face was pitiful. "Nelson, please! This will all be used against you."

"Sure—sure. And it'll be used against you, too," explained Jim casually.

Lathrop cowered as Nelson continued the story of their negotiations. When he finished Hanvey returned his attention to the figure of the terrified jeweler.

"My family—my child—my business——"

"You're a fine slice of limburger," complimented Jim. "I suppose you've been weeping your eyes out thinking about Tim Lannigan, haven't you?"

"Lannigan?"

"Yes—Lannigan, the lad you double crossed—got him to try an' smuggle in stuff that he didn't know was stolen. Well, you're clear of the Lannigan case, but we'll make you sweat for this. Ten years maybe."

"Please—for God's sake—anything but that——"

JIM regarded him steadily. "Tim Lannigan is a good friend of mine, Lathrop. One of the best friends I have. It just occurs to me that we might make a little deal. Interested?"

"Yes. Yes. Go on."

"Well—all we've been after in this Rawlings affair is the stuff. We don't care particularly about sending Teddy Nelson up. And since we've got the pearls, how about this: You sit down there and sign a confession that you hired Tim Lannigan to smuggle in those jewels. You can say that you didn't know they were stolen—that it was simply a job on your part to beat the customs. That'll be proof enough that Tim didn't know they were stolen—and, of course, proof that he wasn't mixed up in the original robbery which'll keep him from serving twenty years or so in a French prison for something he didn't do."

Jim paused. He fancied that he could hear the rustling of skirts in the hallway. Lathrop looked up pleadingly—

"What can they do to me for that?"

"They can give you two years in the federal prison—same as they did Lannigan. But they probably won't. They did that to Lannigan because he was known as a professional crook. You'll most likely get off with a heavy fine—and it'll clear Tim of that French stuff."

BUYER'S RISK

"Are you telling me the truth?" Teddy Nelson broke in, somewhat explosively: "Hell! Jim Hanvey ain't no liar."

"You can choose," explained Jim easily, "between that and a certain long stretch for this Rawlings affair."

Lathrop looked up piteously. "I'll do it," he said at length. "Tell me what to write."

Hanvey dictated slowly and carefully, and when he was finished he summoned Mary Lannigan, to whom he read the confession. Then, with Mary as a witness, Noah Lathrop signed.

The following day Jim accompanied Mary Lannigan to the Pennsylvania station, whence she departed for Atlanta to break the gladsome news to her husband. She was tearfully grateful—"Aw! stow it, sister. I didn't do a darn thing except have a little fun."

FROM the train he went to an unpretentious hotel in the West Fifties, where, a few moments later, he found himself alone with Teddy Nelson.

Teddy was much at ease. He waved his hand airily. "Have a seat, Jim. Make yourself comfortable." Then, defensively, "But leave that nickel plated cigar case in your pocket. I don't mind talking to a detective, but I'm not willing to smell his cigars."

Jim ignored the request. And as the first horrid blast of cigar smoke assailed Teddy, Jim vouchsafed a bit of information.

"I fixed it for you, Teddy. Saw Simpson and Clarke this morning—gave 'em the pearls. They were so tickled it was a cinch getting them to promise to lay off you."

Nelson sighed relievedly. "Great stuff, Jim. I've been hanging on to those things for a year—knowing I didn't have a chance to get rid of 'em, and hating to heave 'em in the river. Now they're safely gone and I've helped a pal. Gee!" he smiled—"I'll bet Tim is gonna be happy when he hears the news."

"You tell 'em, Teddy. But not near as happy as Mary was when things come out all right. She sure done wonders for Tim—"

Wonders, me eye. It was you who did it all, Jim. Wasn't it you who came to me in the first place and suggested that I approach Lathrop on this deal? Didn't you wise me up to the whole works and show me how it'd be a better thing for everybody—me included? Mary did her part, all right, Jim—but the whole idea of my selling those pearls to Noah Lathrop was yours—and any thanks that Tim Lannigan is handing out is due you. And I'm going to tell him so."

Jim regarded him gravely. "You're gonna keep your mouth shut, Teddy. Shut tight. One yawp out of you to either Tim or Mary about that and, by Gosh! I'll turn you and Lathrop both up. Which might not be so hard on you, Teddy—but would be hell on Lathrop—him owning three automobiles."

The Thousandth Chance

BY Kerry Kent

TABLOID SHORT STORIES

He Faced Insanity, Then Death; She Faced Starvation or Worse--and Fate Brought Them Together.

THE air in the room was lifeless and sticky. Willat Kerby moved jerkily from one place to another, each time returning to take nervous gulps from the tall, thin glass on the tray. He was forty—probably; slim, gray eyed, straight lipped, powerful.

"Willat, do sit down. It's hard enough to breathe on a day of this sort without having you pace around emoting depression."

Kerby drained the glass, then turned and deliberately inspected the woman opposite. Ann Hamilton rose—stately, aloof, frigidly charming.

"Perhaps," she conceded, "the pain in your head is annoying—though I do feel that you take it too seriously."

"I wish to God," Kerby said, "that I had taken it seriously five months ago."

"I just saw Burton," he continued. "He gives me three months, at the outside—and a thousandth chance. The latter was, I imagine, a sop to his professional conscience, because a thousandth chance of the absorption of a brain tumor doesn't exist."

Kerby's shoulders lifted spasmodically, but his voice carried monotonously on. "The worst thing, however, is a period of insanity which precedes the end."

"Insanity—Willat, not that—surely——" Ann's voice was merely a whisper. Her annoyance had changed to alarm, which gave way to terror, and, finally, to absolute panic.

"So he assures me."

"But, Willat, you can't expect me—O, I can't go on! Willat, have pity. I can't marry you—with that ahead. I can't!"

Willat Kerby's shoulders sagged, and for an instant he hesitated; then, without looking at the girl, he walked slowly to the door. At the threshold he turned. His voice was thick.

"Of course not, Ann. Good-bye."

And the staring, unseeing gaze of the woman followed him through the portal; and, quite without cause, he laughed.

Two hours later Willat Kerby rose from a solitary dinner, instructed his man to pack a bag for a two weeks' trip and ordered the roadster for eight o'clock.

Down the dim hall between portraits of generations of Kerbys the last of their line walked slowly. He'd always wondered just how it would feel to die, and, to be candid, he'd always been rather afraid that he'd funk the thing. But it really wasn't bad, now that his decision had been made.

Stopping before the library, he looked down the great hall for the last time, then entered the room and quietly closed the door. The pain in his head was unbearable. He raised his arms.

"It isn't the pain, but madness. I can't wait for that! If some one cared to face it with me . . . but alone . . ."

THE chimes of the clock rang eight. Mechanically Willat felt in his pocket for the tiny bottle he had hidden there. A knock sounded, and at the door Jeff stood waiting with his bag.

"Take good care of yo'self, Mistah Willat."

"Same, Jeff."

He steered his car into the silent street. For the first time in days the iron grip on his head relaxed. There was no pain now, only relaxation and the deadening purr of the engine.

Where the Mississippi swings in a long crescent so that New Orleans may have a splendid harbor he turned toward the river's edge. The car bumped and swayed over cobblestones, and out there over the water the riding lights of the silent freighters danced grotesquely and bobbed unceremonious greetings to the noisy, stubby tugs.

Willat remembered that Layton, his friend, was in port aboard the Kemmer, outward bound for Capetown. Rapidly the lights dropped away; smooth turf replaced the worn stones, and the swish and wash of the lazy "Father of Waters" sounded invitingly close. A hot wind made the sleepy palms irritable, and they rustled stiffly and complainingly. Somewhere in the distance a Negro dance was in full swing.

Willat pulled his car far out to the side of the highway, then quite deliberately walked toward the river, which swept by in a mighty expanse, yellow, hungry, sullen. By jove—he should have ordered flowers for Ann! Too bad, really. Ann was a good sort.

Absently the man took the poison from his pocket, and slowly, hesitatingly pulled the cork, stopping to hurl it far out into the river. He lifted the liquid to his lips.

"O, DON'T—please wait! I'm afraid to go alone."

Kerby whirled; crouched close beside him was a woman whose drawn, white face was distinct, even through the darkness. Obediently he lowered the bottle.

"I'm afraid," the girl shivered.

"Why?"

"Life has been relentless, and now—look—even death seems relentless. And it's a coward's way out at best."

"Then I guess I'll be classified as yellow," Kerby said, and added, quizzically, "By the way, if one may inquire, what are you quitting for if you feel that it isn't exactly the courageous thing to do?"

"On account of one very thin dime."

Willat Kerby dropped to the grass beside her. The river lapped impatiently at their feet, and somewhere in the distance came the staccato calls of a Negro dance.

"Since we're both outward bound, perhaps you wouldn't mind telling me about it."

"It's commonplace." The girl's voice broke, and as the minutes passed she struggled pathetically to control it.

"I taught school here. Last year my health broke, and in my futile, frantic efforts to regain it my savings went. Then I was forced to resign. I have no one who cares in the least, and when a woman reaches her last coin she makes a choice, doesn't she? The river—or something worse. And you?"

The man reached out and put his hand over the girl's. Painfully he told his story—the doctor's verdict, his fear of madness. Under her silent sympathy the calm—the utter detachment with which he had made his decision—cracked, and sobs which forced themselves through his clenched teeth shook his body.

"But, dear man, you have that thousandth chance. Pull yourself together and, at least, put up a fight. You've so much ahead," and she laughed a bit hysterically. "Why, you just can't quit."

Far down the river a tug barked and was answered by a bass voiced freighter. Willat Kerby stood up and assisted the girl to rise.

"What is your name?"

"Jean Marseau."

"Then, Jean Marseau, listen. Down in the harbor the Kemmer, outbound for Capetown, leaves early in the morning. The captain is a friend of mine, and he'll take us aboard. My name is Willat Kerby. Once out of the river the captain can marry us, and out there we'll make our fight together." His voice broke. "I still have that slim hope."

The river swung majestically on, and, far down, the tug called impatiently.

"Then throw that bottle 'way out," said Jean, "and we'll play for that thousandth chance together."

INDIAN BLOOD?

BY Robert E. Pinkerton

THE STORY SO FAR.

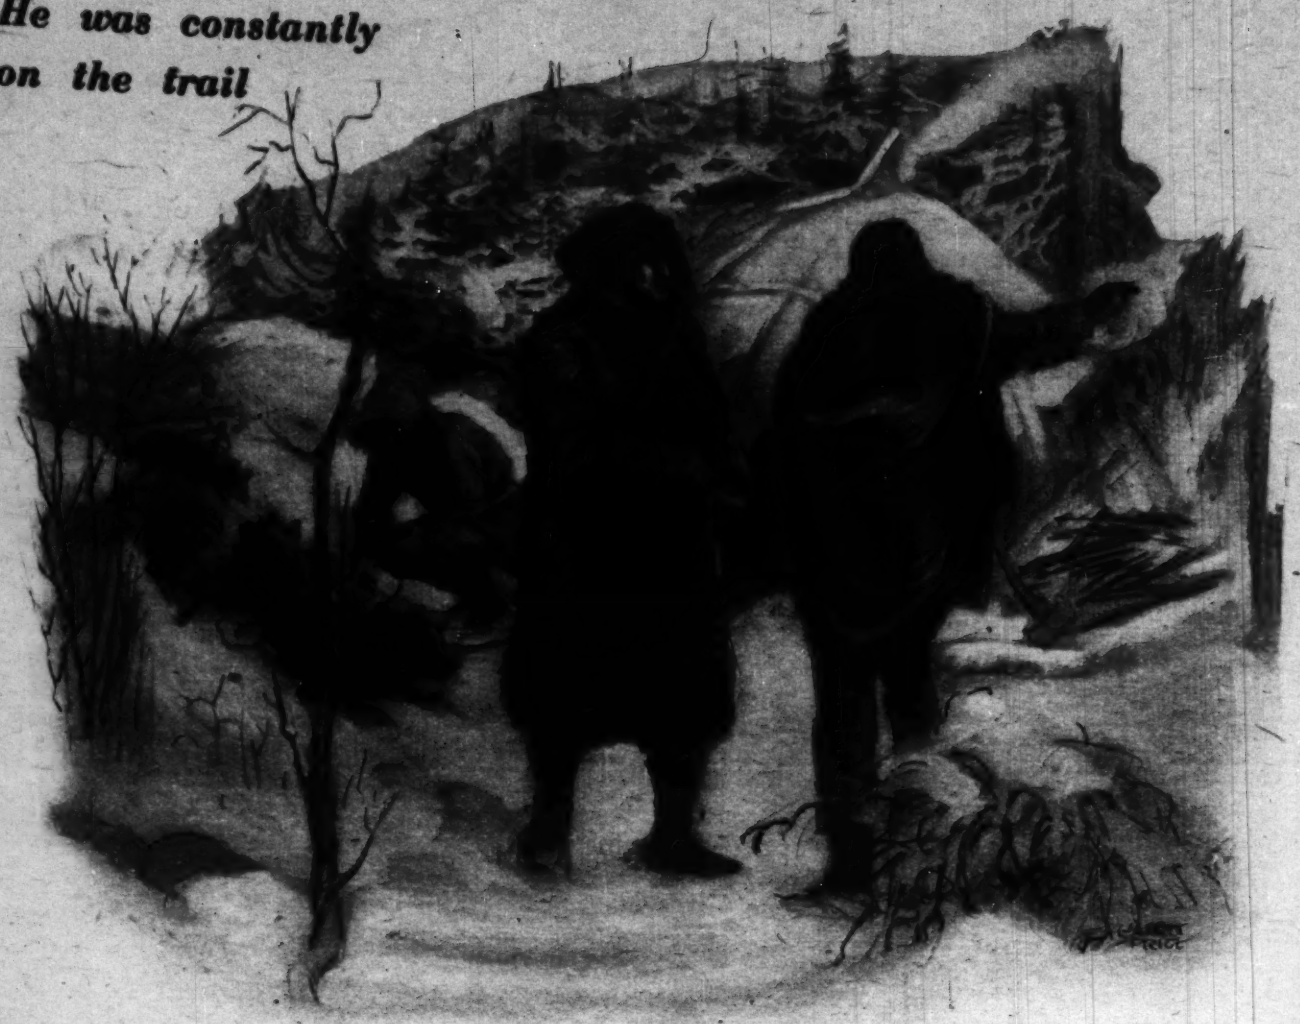
FOR thirteen years Wen-dah-ban is kept hidden in the forests by Nee-tah-wee-gan, wife of Potah-bo. The boy is the son of a white man and believes himself all white, but never will the Indian woman name his father. Merton Layard, Hudson's Bay company manager, takes the boy into his home and Mrs. Layard names him Donald Norton, after her father. Donald becomes the playmate of Layards' daughter, Janet. Donald wins command of a small post, then is promoted to Whitefish Lake post. Philip Collinge, manager of the rival company there, likes Donald and helps educate him. Donald visits England and then is promoted to Fort James, his company's largest post. After seven years he again meets Mrs. Layard and Janet. He falls in love with Janet. He has a rival in Dale Millington, new manager at Whitefish Lake.

Millington raids Donald's post and the latter's fur receipts fall short. The general manager, Mactivish, dies, and his place is taken by John Corrigal, who has no faith in half breeds. Millington influences Mrs. Layard to make Donald understand he cannot hope to win Janet. Corrigal visits the post. At Fort James he is snowed in for three days with Donald, and learns to respect the young man's learning. Millington again raids Donald's district. But Donald sets a trap, and Millington's man buys a marked fur.

At headquarters Corrigal takes Donald's post from him and orders him to Winnipeg. Enraged, Donald accuses Corrigal of being his father. Donald and Millington fight and Donald batters the Englishman terribly. Mrs. Layard suddenly suspects Corrigal is Donald's father, and says he must leave her home if that is true.

Donald disappears. Nee-tah-wee-gan accuses Corrigal before the whole post of being Donald's father. To the Layards Corrigal denies this, but refuses to recall Donald. He leaves their home when Janet tells him she doesn't believe him. Layard proves Millington raided Donald's post, still Corrigal keeps Millington in the service. To the other post managers Millington boasts he has known for a long time Corrigal is Donald's father. From Winnipeg comes news that Donald has collected his salary and savings and vanished.

He was constantly on the trail



EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

Love—and Love stifled.

IN the long months that passed after his departure from Fort Bruce, Donald Norton won through to a greater dominance in the hearts of its people than he had gained while there. The world at large thinks of the Hudson's Bay only as a great, greedly monopoly—a giant machine that throttles the north—and of its people as hardened, ruthless minions, wholly subservient to the dividend-grasping stockholders in London. It grants them only a colorful, adventurous life.

But vast though the scope of the company's operations are, monopolistic though it may have been for two centuries, governed as it has been through a semi-military form of organization, the minds and hearts of its servants have never ceased to be human. Rather the isolation, the loneliness and the sense of camaraderie developed have accentuated the human qualities and have produced an independence of thought and action that falls short of being mutiny only because of a deeply underlying loyalty to an idea, not to a thing.

In the first year of the great war the London office, in the grip of panic, issued orders that no "debt" was to be given the hunters—that the method of trading to which the Indians had become accustomed through generations was to end. And every post manager in more than two hundred stations scattered through four thousand miles of wilderness stuffed the order into a pigeon hole in his desk and conducted the business of his trade shop as he always had. They saw that the Hudson's Bay must stand as a buffer between the hunters and economic conditions to which they could not adapt themselves if it were to maintain its spiritual integrity.

Thus Donald Norton, though he had disappeared from the north and was no longer employed by the company, was still considered a Hudson's Bay man. He was respected the more for his action, and the question of his parentage was never brought near the scales of judgment.

In the Layard home there was another factor that made of the whole incident a tragedy. Neither Merton nor Evelyn could remain unaware of what had happened to Janet, and there was the added weight in Evelyn's case of self-condemnation. Her first reaction had been normal and she had succumbed to an age-old prejudice. But when Janet had denounced Corrigal and she herself had been confronted with a realization of the true situation and all its consequences, the warm heart that had opened to the wigwam-bred child again responded to the silent plea of the man she had helped form.

Even before Janet was driven to self-revealment when Corrigal told his story, Evelyn had glimpsed what was in her heart. The day of Donald's arrival, immediately after that one strained visit and just before the departure of the picnic party, Janet had gone to her mother.

"What is the matter with Donald?" she began abruptly.

Evelyn was startled, and as her quick glance searched her daughter's face the girl continued:

"Last year when he was here, the day before he left for Fort James, he was the same way. He changed over night. He never wrote to us all winter long."

She was looking steadily at her mother, and Evelyn's eyes wavered slightly.

"I think I understand," Janet said quietly. "He came to see you a year ago and talked to you alone."

Evelyn could not force herself to meet her daughter's accusing glance. Janet stared at her for a moment and then burst forth in impassioned accusation.

"You had no right!" she cried. "I would not have failed him. Now he thinks I am like the others."

IN the days that followed Evelyn tried repeatedly to go to her daughter and talk of Donald, but she never was able even to open the subject. She knew the girl had walled off a corner of her heart and had retreated within it.

The first week in January, six months after Donald had disappeared from the north country, Merton came home from the district office one afternoon.

"Corrigal has heard from Donald," he began at once, when he found Evelyn alone in the living room.

"Heard from him!" she repeated as she sprang to her feet.

"Heard of him, I should say. He's working for the Keewatin company and has started a post at Kenogami. Sandy Hay's winter packet has just arrived, and from what Corrigal said I gathered that Donald is raising Ned out there. And Sandy wrote us privately that the situation is really more serious than he has written Corrigal—that Donald, because he knows every Indian in the district, is liable to get half the fur this winter."

Layard had made no attempt to disguise his elation, and when Evelyn gathered the import of what he was saying her quick mind leaped past to the true significance of the report that had come from Kenogami.

"It's terrible, Merton," she said. "After all these years."

"What do you mean?"

"That Donald should be driven to such a thing. All his life he has never known anything except the Hudson's Bay. He has worshiped the company."

"The Hudson's Bay isn't what it used to be."

"You mean Corrigal?"

"Of course. Every man who left Fort Bruce last summer had a bad taste in his mouth. It's hard to be loyal when a man like Corrigal is about all the company you come in contact with."

"But it was a passion with Donald."

"I know," Merton said, "but I think he is moved by a greater passion now."

"Hatred?"

"Can you blame him? It was a case of pure injustice. And Donald could have remained in the service and have won back a large part of what he lost here. He has it in him, and if he had gone to another district he would have established himself in two or three years.

"Instead he went straight to Winnipeg, resigned, and then, from the speed with which he worked, he must have gone at once to the Keewatin company with a plan for a post at Kenogami. With his knowledge of conditions there he would be a valuable man for the opposition, and the Keewatin people took immediate advantage of it."

"But he is bound to lose in the end," Evelyn protested. "He may have a brief success, but he can't win out that way. The Hudson's Bay is too big for any one man to fight it."

"Donald is fighting Corrigal, not the Hudson's Bay. Nothing could hurt Corrigal more than to have Donald establish a post, where the opposition has never gained a foothold before, and Donald can do that at Kenogami."

In the following month they discussed the matter several times, but while Merton was certain Donald could gain his point, that he could go on to a success sufficient to compel the Hudson's Bay to recognize Corrigal's mistake and take him back into the service,

INDIAN BLOOD?

Being a woman, she knew Donald far better than did Merton. In the early days of the boy's struggle to shed the odor of the wigwam she had been permitted many glimpses of his soul. The passion, the longing, the fierce endeavor, the intentness of purpose, and always the courage—these she had seen, and sometimes they had awed her. And from the beginning she had watched the development of a love for the Hudson's Bay until it had become part of life itself.

Without family, without religion, without even a sense of patriotism or of country, Donald had found in the Hudson's Bay the sole outlet for that natural enthusiasm and romance and yearning of all boys. He knew nothing else, had heard of nothing else. So far as he could comprehend the great company was the universe itself, and since infancy he had heard it called only "that to which we owe thanks."

As the years passed, as he won his first position, as a more mature viewpoint permitted him to see the vast scope of Hudson's Bay activities and influence, his devotion grew until, when he gained complete acceptance at Fort Bruce in the days of Duncan Mactavish's benign leadership, it became the ruling factor in his life.

Evelyn Layard had seen this from the beginning. She had watched that devotion to the great company develop in Scotch and English youths, she had seen it gain complete dominance in the lives of many men, and she knew with what anguish of spirit Donald must accept employment with the hated and scorned opposition. Reared in fur land, ignorant of the great world outside, trained from the first for the gathering of pelts, there was nothing for him to do but accept the ignominy.

BUT a month later Evelyn's convictions received a shock. Word came from Fort James that Donald had appeared there when the Indians gathered at New Year's, and that he had made terrific inroads upon Millington. Corrigal left Fort Bruce at once to handle the situation himself, but he had been gone only a day when a special packet from the new manager at Whitefish Lake told of Donald's arrival in that territory and of his unusual activity. Not content with remaining at the post with Collinge, he had taken to the trails with a tripper's outfit, visiting distant wigwams and sending back load after load of fur.

Each bit of news caused a fresh sensation at Fort Bruce.

"Donald is general manager for the Keewatin company," Merton told Evelyn when he reported the arrival of the latest packet. "He only started that new post for them at Kenogami and then jumped over to Fort James and on to Whitefish Lake"

"And he'll be at Whitefish Lake when Corrigal stops there on his way to Fort James," Evelyn said, her mind leaping at once to the possibilities for human drama in this new situation.

"Won't Corrigal be wild," Merton chuckled.

"Merton! And you a Hudson's Bay man!"

"I don't care. Corrigal has earned this. Just think what Donald can do. He was reared at Kenogami. He was at Whitefish Lake six years, and at Fort James two. He knows every hunter trading at the three posts—knows how many children he has, how he gets along with his wife, how dependable he is—knows everything necessary to get the fur."

"But he can't make much headway against the Hudson's Bay."

"You're worse than an old trader," Merton laughed. "It takes a woman to become blind in her devotion."

"It wasn't that at all. I was thinking how impossible it is for one man with the backing of a small company like the Keewatin to affect so gigantic an enterprise as the Hudson's Bay."

"Oh, he'll not put the company out of business, but he will make a big dent in the fur receipts of this district, and Corrigal is responsible to the commissioner for a good showing."

"You still think Donald is doing this solely because he hates Corrigal?" Evelyn said.

"What else could it be? He has every reason. He believes Corrigal is his father, and therefore twice responsible for what has happened. And it looks as if he would get his revenge. Corrigal won't last long if this continues."

"It's something else," Evelyn protested—"something bigger than revenge."

Merton laughed. He was still exuberant over the news that had come to Fort Bruce that winter. Donald's motive was of comparatively slight importance to him. He was interested chiefly in the fact that Donald was making good, that he was stinging Corrigal in his most tender spot, humbling the pride of this hard, ruthless executive who had come out of the west and disrupted the morale of an entire district.

Merton was no less loyal to the Hudson's Bay because he was willing to see it lose money and prestige if only the success of his young friend were advanced. The attitude of those men who have spent a lifetime in the service of the great company is a peculiar thing. All-pervading though the spirit of that service may be, lonely men must find something by which they may personify it, and because of the very camaraderie of isolation they have chosen each other and their immediate superiors.

It has always been true. The history of the company is filled with incidents of revolt—not against the company itself but against executives. Grievances have been carried through to the directors themselves in far-away London, and always the men have stuck together. There is the one classic incident of the inspector who was discharged by the chief factors because he had reported adversely on a popular man's methods of conducting his post.

And all the Fort Bruce district felt as did Merton Layard. From the first Donald had been popular and the fight with Millington had cemented the allegiance of his fellow post managers. Now they saw him only as the victim of a tyranny wholly out of place in fur land, and of injustice which they themselves might feel in turn.

No one was negligent in his duty that Donald might have a better opportunity for success. Their peculiar code forbade that, but they retained the right to wish him well, and with the exception of Millington every post manager in the district was secretly exultant over the successful manner in which Donald had begun his attack.

When Donald prodded them they chuckled. They did not consider that it meant a financial loss to the company. They only knew that with each prod Corrigal squirmed.

BUT if Corrigal squirmed no one saw him do so. He was constantly on the trail between Whitefish Lake, Fort James, and Kenogami. Since he had arrived at Fort Bruce the post managers had known him as a cold, hard, relentless superior, driving, scheming, urging, and always, they believed, covertly threatening.

With the first report of Donald's activities he became a different man. He was more grim, more relentless, and he drove harder than before, but with fire and feeling. Once he had been a general far back of the lines, issuing orders, planning campaigns. Now he burst through the front rank and led the charge, and the very manner in which he did it began to counteract the effect of sympathy for Donald. Before the winter was over he had galvanized the entire district, and every resource of the great company was concentrated in the battle.

Spring came. Rotting trails cut off Fort Bruce from its world. For all that Corrigal could do the battle was ended. In June hundreds of Indians would arrive at distant posts with the larger part of their winter's hunt. What share of their fur went to the Keewatin company and what to the Hudson's Bay would not be known until the arrival of the brigades in July. Corrigal could do nothing except depend upon post managers to end the fight as best they could.

The district superintendent was confident. He knew Donald had made serious inroads, yet he had no doubt that it was only a flare. For several generations the Indians had known only the Hudson's Bay and its protecting influence. The main bulk of them had always remained unaffected by the puny efforts of free traders for crooked dealing, and a calousness toward the hunters' welfare had convinced the natives that in the long run they fared far better if they were loyal to the old company.

Corrigal also believed in the success of his own efforts. He controlled a gigantic machine and he had directed every ounce of its strength toward crushing Donald. He knew that in the beginning he had not succeeded, but at the end of three months on the trails he felt that he had turned the tide.

Since he had left the dwelling house nine months before he had never mentioned Donald to any of the Layards. He seldom saw Evelyn or Janet. Merton he talked to often, but always on matters of business, and even after Donald's sudden reappearance the young man's name was not brought up.

Yet in the long wait for the fur brigades, when each was eager for news and none could be had, it was inevitable that the subject should crop out.

"It wouldn't surprise me at all if we had opposition here next year," Merton said when he handed in his April report. "We ought to get ready for it now."

"Opposition here," Corrigal replied. "What do you mean?"

Fort Bruce, though comparatively easy of access to civilization, had always conducted a successful defense, and for many years no attempt had been made there by a free trader.

"You don't imagine for a moment that after his success this winter Donald is going to leave Fort Bruce alone?" Merton demanded.

"I have thought of that," Corrigal answered slowly, "but I don't think he'll do it. He's too wise to extend himself so rapidly. It would be suicide."

Merton stared in amazement. He had pictured Corrigal's wrath if Donald's name were mentioned.

"Then you'll admit he is a good fur trader?" he asked.

"There's no doubt about it," was the ready reply. "He's more than that. He's an exceptional man."

"And you let him go—drove him to this!"

The exclamation was involuntary, but Merton did not regret it.

"And I would do it again," Corrigal answered coldly. "Norton has shown how little the company meant to him—has proved the point I made. The Indian in him has come out. Don't you suppose I understand? It's revenge he wants. He hates me. Nee-tah-wee-gan has told him I am his father. He holds me responsible not only for his having been born but for removing him from Fort James."

That had been Merton's view at the beginning of the winter, but Evelyn's ideas and his own more sober reflection had weakened his faith in it. Corrigal's statement was all that was needed to convert him.

"Did it ever occur to you that he might be only trying to prove that you were wrong, that you made a mistake?" he demanded. "It is not revenge. Donald hasn't that sort of thing in him. Believing what he does, he has only contempt for you. He couldn't hate any one for whom he has no respect."

"I've seen too many half-breeds react to just such a situation," Corrigal answered calmly. "Norton is only running true to form. He'd rather stick a knife in a man's back than meet him face to face. He thinks he's doing that to me now."

Merton leaped to his feet and strode to the door. He was too angry to speak for a moment, and when at last the words did come he cast all restraint to the winds.

"Ask Millington if he's afraid to stand up to a man!" he shouted. "There's no fairness or justice in you. If there were you would have been proud of the record he has made. Even Philip Collinge, the man you despise, has done better by his sons. At least he has never denied their parentage."

Corrigal's face became white and he moistened his lips before he spoke.

"I'll overlook that this time, Layard, because I know what Norton has meant to you," he said slowly and with a most evident effort at self-control. "But I don't expect to have to listen to it again. I've not denied anything that was true and I will not allow you or any one else to repeat this charge against me. I can pardon Norton. It is natural that he should believe what his mother told him. I objected only to the way he tried to use it."

JUNE came, and with the opening of navigation from the south a new bombshell exploded at Fort Bruce. Men with building materials arrived from Winnipeg and began the erection of warehouses, a dwelling house and office less than a mile down the shore from the Hudson's Bay. Before the first boat was unloaded everyone knew the Keewatin company was establishing headquarters there, and Donald Norton's activities took on a new significance.

Donald himself did not appear until after all the fur brigades had arrived, but though he immediately took up quarters in the new buildings at Fort Bruce, the Hudson's Bay people never saw him. They knew he was there. The fur land telegraph relayed quickly a report of his daily habits, but that was all.

In that first week after his arrival his status in fur land changed completely. A year before he had left Fort Bruce with the sympathy of practically every one in the district. In mid-winter he had burst upon them like a meteor, and in secret every one was behind him in his fierce attack upon Corrigal, as his activities had been construed.

But with the coming of the fur brigades in July and the knowledge that the Keewatin company, always a weak, despised opposition that had merely furnished a little zest in the battle for pelts, had made serious inroads upon the Hudson's Bay, the servants of the great company suddenly wakened to the fact that they had a real fight on their hands. The little group of buildings down the shore aroused suspicion and not a little fear.

When Millington, Sandy Hay and MacKar, who had been shifted back to Whitefish Lake, compared notes there was even more consternation than had followed Corrigal's bitter tirade after the final reports were in.

"Near as I can make out, the lad's been at two places at once most of the winter," Sandy declared. "He must fly from one post to another."

"I don't mind that," MacKar said, "but there's something more. Collinge was down and out. Millington had about finished him. And then Donald comes along and shoots something into his veins that makes a new man of him."

INDIAN BLOOD?

"The explanation is easy," Millington declared. "Norton has been in all three posts where the Keewatin company suddenly came to life. He knows every Indian and all about him."

"And you can bet they know him, too!" Sandy interrupted. "And any Indian who ever knew Donald is his friend. But that's not the whole explanation. He's a fur trader, that lad is, such a one as hasn't been in this district in many a long day."

"He's done the work of three men this last winter," Nicol said, "and Corrigal's going to hear from the commissioner before the summer's over."

"Corrigal!" Sandy snorted. "It's the rest of us that will have to be on the watch as well. Donald isn't sitting down there in his new office just watching the waves out on the lake. He's hatching something worse than ever for next winter."

SANDY'S opinion became that of Fort Bruce. Whenever a post manager walked across the great enclosure his eyes turned down the shore to the Keewatin buildings and he wondered just what was happening there. They knew Corrigal was not idle—that spies were at work, that the underground ways of fur land were trod by busy feet, but the very fact that so little information was forthcoming only added to the suspense.

As the days passed the silent, lonely figure down the lake shore became all-dominant in Fort Bruce. Tons and tons of supplies arrived from the south and were loaded in York boats and sent away. Canoes came and went, bearing messages and reports. Half a hundred Fort Bruce Indians labored with the freight. Collinge came from Whitefish Lake, remained two days and departed. The new Kenogami manager arrived and the man from Fort James, and they, too, left after a brief stay.

But these were facts easily observed or learned. They were significant of the coming winter, and they meant much, but they aroused little interest or comment. Above all else that men wanted to know was what might be going on in the mind of the lonely man down the lake shore.

They believed they understood that mind. They pictured it as a high-geared, efficient machine, but one motivated by violent hatred and by a consuming desire for revenge. They ascribed to it qualities unknown in fur land—qualities engendered in the heat of bitter human drama.

The success Donald had achieved in his first year of opposition strengthened their view. They felt that no cold business campaign could have achieved what he did, that only in the fervor of a crusade or in the venom of hatred was to be found an actuating impulse for so destructive an onslaught.

Corrigal, they believed, was the object of attack, and yet they saw themselves being drawn into the vortex by the very power and ruthlessness of Donald's bitter warfare. He became a dread thing rather than a personality. The mere fact that they never saw him strengthened this view and added to their apprehension. Sympathy cooled, for no one believed he needed it.

Only two people seemed unmindful of his presence. One was Corrigal, the other Janet Layard. Corrigal continued his driving, ruthless sway. If anything he was a little softer. The somberness faded from his eyes and often they lighted with the fire of battle. His post managers began to see that he was deriving a certain satisfaction from the conflict.

Janet never spoke of Donald even after his arrival at Fort Bruce. For all Evelyn could see she did not know he was there. It had been Evelyn's intention to go to Donald at the first opportunity and tell him frankly that her first instinctive reaction no longer held sway, but as the days passed and she watched her daughter closely the doubts came. The real Janet had never come out from that walled-in corner of her heart, and the mother began to wonder just how deeply the tragedy had struck.

One night when Janet had gone to her room Evelyn was driven to discussing her problem with Merton, never dreaming that at that moment the girl was hurrying down the dark shore to the Keewatin buildings.

It was not the first time she had done so. Soon after Donald's arrival she had stolen away one night and crept close to a lighted window in the new office building. For several minutes she had watched the young man at the desk. He was bent over a ledger, and for a time she could not see his face. Then he looked up, and after one glimpse the girl had turned and fled in the darkness.

THIS night she stopped for only a moment outside the window. When she saw Donald was alone she went at once to the door and knocked. Without waiting she lifted the latch and entered.

Once inside she hesitated. On that previous night she had been shocked by what she believed were his drawn, weary features. Now she saw that distance and the light had deceived her. He still appeared drawn and weary, but there were other lines, hard and determined, and his eyes glowed with a fierce light that frightened her.

So much a part of him had this expression become, and she saw this, too, that he stared at her for several moments before there was any change whatever. Even when he softened she could not escape the impression of hardness. Yet the situation was such that neither of them could escape its significance or resort to subterfuge.

"Donald," she began at once, "why haven't you come to see me?"

"I couldn't."

"Corrigal doesn't govern me!" she exclaimed fiercely.

"I don't mean Corrigal. I was thinking only of myself."

"But what about me?"

He studied her for a moment in amazement.

"Janet!"

She came toward him. Her lips were parted slightly, her face was flushed and her eyes told more plainly than any words what was in her heart. Never had he seen her more adorable. Two years of abnegation, of struggle against desire, of longing, and of bitterness—all vanished. He was conscious only that she had come to him, that she was there, his—that her own love was so great it had scorned custom and public opinion, had risked defeat and ignominy, had driven her past everything to lay bare her heart before him.

The very glory and courage of it was blinding. Slowly he arose from his chair to meet her.

"I never knew, never dreamed——" he whispered.

"I knew you didn't," she answered softly. "You thought I had turned against you like all the rest, that what they said made a difference with me. It was only fair that I should come and tell you."

She was close to him now, and he stood facing her. A sweep of his arms and——. But that meant nothing to Donald. He had always worshiped from a distance, and now the moment was too great to permit thought of taking her hands in his.

And then he suddenly sank back into his chair.

"Janet," he whispered, "you are wonderful—to come here like this. But—but we've got to understand each other."

"Understand!" she cried. "We do!"

"Only so far. I didn't understand you until just now. You—oh, you're so much finer, so much more wonderful than I had dreamed!"

"It was the only way—to come and tell you."

He ignored her remark.

"All the time I had been confident that you didn't care, that it made no difference to you, and I was glad."

"Glad!" she interrupted.

Again he did not seem to hear, and Janet realized that he was driving himself to say what was in his mind.

"That was the only thing I was thankful for," he continued painfully. "You were unhurt. Your life was free. And now! Don't you see? It can't be! It can't! It can't!"

For a moment his anguish blinded her to the import of his words. She had never seen such misery in human eyes, and with a little cry of pity she started forward.

"Don't!" he begged as he leaned back. "It can't be, Janet. I'm not—not all——."

"I don't care who your father or mother were!" she cried. "It is you that I know, that I care about, and no one else!"

"But don't you see?" he protested. "Oh,

TABLOID SHORT STORIES

IT was after the tenth dance that the debutantes repaired to the dressing room to repowder, repaint, and repine.

"My feet are ruined!" moaned Phyllis Hazzard, patting her little gold slippers tenderly. "I had the tenth with the T. W. and he raced me all over the floor, keeping an eye on some new crush. I wish her joy of the mean thing!"

"Must have been Klea," said smart little Jane De Nufrio, busily brushing her sleek, flat hair yet sleeker and flatter. "She's the only girl in our set he hasn't met sixty times, because she just came home. I don't care to dance with the T. W. myself. It makes me mad just to see him. How wonderful he could be—and how horrid he is! The mean thing!"

"He is!" Five other girls began to clamor in a vivacious chorus, denouncing the T. W. Of course, he was attractive in a way—but that kind of a man, my dear!

"Awful racket in here," remarked a new and slightly older girl, entering and blandly sweeping the debs away from the mirror, with a single calm movement of her powdered arms, as if she were swimming.

Jane fell upon her affectionately, and screamed louder than the rest: "We put in ten minutes of every dance panning the T. W. It's a rite."

"Meaning what? Tank Willie?"

"No—tightwad, of course."

"Every ballroom is cluttered with them, my child."

"O, but Klea, this Daily Morgan is a millionaire, and a perfectly wonderful fellow in lots of other ways. My dear, at first we were all crazy about him. But he holds a nickel more precious than his right eye. Never has parted with a penny to the knowledge of man. The mean thing!"

"He asked to call on me, ages ago, and I nearly went out of my mind with joy," contributed Dolores Dorsey, the most beautiful deb of the season. "Mother was delighted, of course. We didn't know his failing then. I went down almost as soon as he was announced, all dolled up, and asked where we would go. It must have been an awful shock to him! He took me to the theater, but it must have nearly killed him, for he never came again!"

"I coaxed him to call, too," confessed Jane frankly, "though I knew he was a T. W. I made up my mind to humor him, because he's mighty eligible with all that money! I thought I would cure him and then marry him. Joke! My dear, I never hinted at going out. I gave him candy and accidentally let fall that Morris brought me the box—Mr. Morgan didn't bring any—and I let him enjoy some roses that I pretended Mr. Chester sent—but he didn't seem to get the idea! He didn't produce—and he didn't call again."

"He has called on most of us about once," put in a homely little deb, hoping thereby to convey an untrue impression of herself to the renowned Klea Doubet, "but he has never taken any girl anywhere. I'd love to see you get him going south! And then throw him down hard! O, joy!"

"You could always get any of the fellows' fraternity pins," encouraged Phyllis. "You are a perfect whiz at getting what you want, Klea. Got to it! Entice the T. W. He's such a mean old thing!"

Klea Doubet laughed. There was a dimple at each side of her wide mouth, which gave her smile a confiding, innocent expression, in engaging contrast to her manner of sophistication. She was one of those slim, clever girls, with an extreme gown, and her hair done in the new way, no matter how outre. Did you ever see a little girl with big eyes and a tiny nose and a big red mouth who didn't automatically attract men and women and even debs? They are so sweet that they fool us into thinking them pretty.

"ENTICE him yourself," said Klea. "If a man isn't sufficiently impressed with me to make an effort to please me, I have no use for him." She broke off, and laughed. "I'm staying in here to get a man out there crazy. He is the handsomest person! Wonderful profile! Such shoulders! I let him catch my eye fixed admiringly on him about six times in the first three dances, and then naturally he started pursuing me around the room to get introduced. Now I'm eluding him, because I'm crazy to get him crazy about me."

The girls looked solemnly at her.

"Well, who is he? The best looking man out there? With the most wonderful grey eyes?"

"Daily Morgan."

"You mean the dreadful T. K.?" in sincere grief. "Darn it! Isn't that a mean shame? Well, I don't give a kitty who the hip-hip he is. I'll take him in hand. He looks so adorable. Come on out with me, Jane. He will be hanging on the door knob. Cheer up, kids! Klea will l'arn him to spend."

A big young man caught Jane by the arm as the two girls appeared in the dressing room door, commanding fiercely, "Introduce me!"

A minute later Jane watched Klea swing away in his arms.

"He's done for!" she said joyfully to Dolores Dorsey. "Just give Klea two dances to flatter him unobtrusively, and he'll be gone—a total loss!"

"He won't call more than once," predicted Dolores. "I bet he will be all over it by Saturday at the most. We will see if he takes her to the country club dinner dance."

He did. His infatuation was delightfully evident to the debs. Jane twittered with excitement until she managed to get a few words with Klea alone, after dinner.

"Isn't he wonderful?" breathed Klea. "I never was so hopelessly crazy about any other living human being! My dear, he has called every night! I've ditched every engagement to see him, and everybody is furious with me."

"What has he brought you?" asked Jane, sweetly.

Klea looked troubled.

"Don't be catty, Jane! Not a thing, if you must know. But he talks awfully well, you know, and has read everything. Father is crazy about him, too, and he has stayed so late each night mother was really annoyed."

"I can't understand you," said Jane. "You of all people entertaining a chair warmer!"

"I know," murmured Klea, and an unexpected little tear appeared in one sweet blue eye. "And yet I love him all the same. I suppose his wife will have to beg for every cent she needs."

"His wife! Has it come to this? You weak, weak girl!" Jane expressed her profound surprise and disgust. "So you didn't get him going south at all! He's got you! Are you going to see him tomorrow?"

"Yes, I am," replied Klea, flinching. "We are going to vespers, and then he is going to have supper with us. I dare you to say anything!"

Jane dared.

"My dear," very sweetly, "out of regard for you I will never refer to Daily Morgan again as the T. W. I now dub him Klea's Sponge!"

BUT, despite her daring, she felt it was best to retreat rapidly during her last sentence. All day Sunday the little deb felt something nudging her mind to regret her sneer—she was not sure if it was her conscience, or her heart, or her social sense! On Monday she called to atone.

Jane was ushered into the library to wait for Klea. Her eye was caught by the nature of the objects on the polished table—a tower of great roses, a box of expensive cigars, and a huge affair of wicker and ribbon which suggested candy. As she thoughtfully gased, Klea came rushing in, radiant faced, and flung both arms violently around her friend, laughing and screaming with delight.

"I'm so glad to see you, darling!" she cried. "I'm engaged! See my ring! I had lunch with Daily this noon, and we picked it out afterward. Isn't it gorgeous? Congratulate me!"

The speechless Jane kissed her.

"See the roses he sent to mother this morning! And he sent cigars for father and chocolates for me. Wasn't that a funny thing to do? But he said he just had to let my folks know how happy he is because I accepted him as soon as he asked me last night. He is going to give mother a new electric for her birthday, if she will consent to let me be married soon!

Jane sat down abruptly, and her eyes pleaded for mercy. Klea took her hands and spoke very gently.

"Daily says so many girls just like a man for what they can get out of him, and he knows now that I don't. He says that years ago he got sick to death of everybody stinging him, just because they knew he was rich! He says he has always hoped some girl would love him, and not his check book! And he says he will spend everything he has gladly, and do anything else in the world for those he loves!"

INDIAN BLOOD?

Janet! You are making this so hard for me."

"You mean my mother!" she exclaimed with sudden understanding "I know you went to her two years ago."

Deliberately he turned away and stared at the wall. For a moment she stood there waiting, and then as she was about to break forth in passionate protest he spoke.

His voice was hard and yet hollow and dreary and dead, and it was the voice of a man who exerts every ounce of will power to force out each word.

"I wasn't thinking of your mother," he began, "but of mine. Nee-tah-wee-gan is my mother and I am part Indian. That is one fact we can't get around. I am part Indian, and because I am I alone know what it means.

"I thought I was white. As a boy I believed I could make myself so. I worked for nothing else. I believed I had succeeded. And then I discovered I never could succeed. No one can."

He paused a moment and leaned forward, still staring away from her.

"Corrigal did this to me," he continued. "Not last summer, but thirty years ago—before I was born. I can imagine no worse crime than he committed then."

"But you are making him pay!" Janet cried fiercely. "You can make him, Donald. You are going to drive him out of the district."

"Pay," he repeated dully. "That's not the question. I haven't cared to try. And it would be so futile. You can't make a murderer pay by sticking a pin in him. All I can do is to avoid the same crime."

"Same crime!"

He wheeled to face her.

"Don't you see that I can never marry? That I can never have children? That I can never do to another what he did to me? Don't you see that I can't drag you down to ostracism with me? Oh, Janet! It's all so hopeless. There isn't any escape. We've got to face it, you and I, and I had believed it was only my fight."

"Donald, you're mad! It's different. It's not the same question."

"There is no difference," he answered. "Nee-tah-wee-gan is my mother. She would be the grandmother of my children, and they would have Indian blood in their veins. They would be damned from the beginning, forever, as I have been."

Suddenly he had become cold and hard, and Janet sensed that his purpose was unalterable. Despair seized her, but even as she struggled against it he arose from his chair, stepped past her and opened the door.

"We are only making it harder," he said as he stood aside.

Something in his voice, so broken and so hopeless, so pleading, galvanized her to a last stand. And then she looked at him. His head was bowed and he was trembling as if from a fever. Broken and beaten, crushed and twisted, his suffering stabbed her.

And yet the very picture he presented was the strongest proof he offered, not only of the case he had advanced but of his unalterable purpose. If he could continue to fight through that, nothing could move him.

Still she would not give up. She stood there, white and rigid. For a time neither moved. Then Donald spoke, and still he did not look at her.

"Good-by," he said, and there was a slight, pleading inclination of his head toward the door.

Blinded now by the hot tears, trembling in sudden weakness, she swayed past him. Even when she sobbed he did not move. After she had stumbled out into the darkness he closed the door quickly, but softly, reverently, and with a moan.

THE DAYS THAT ARE NO MORE

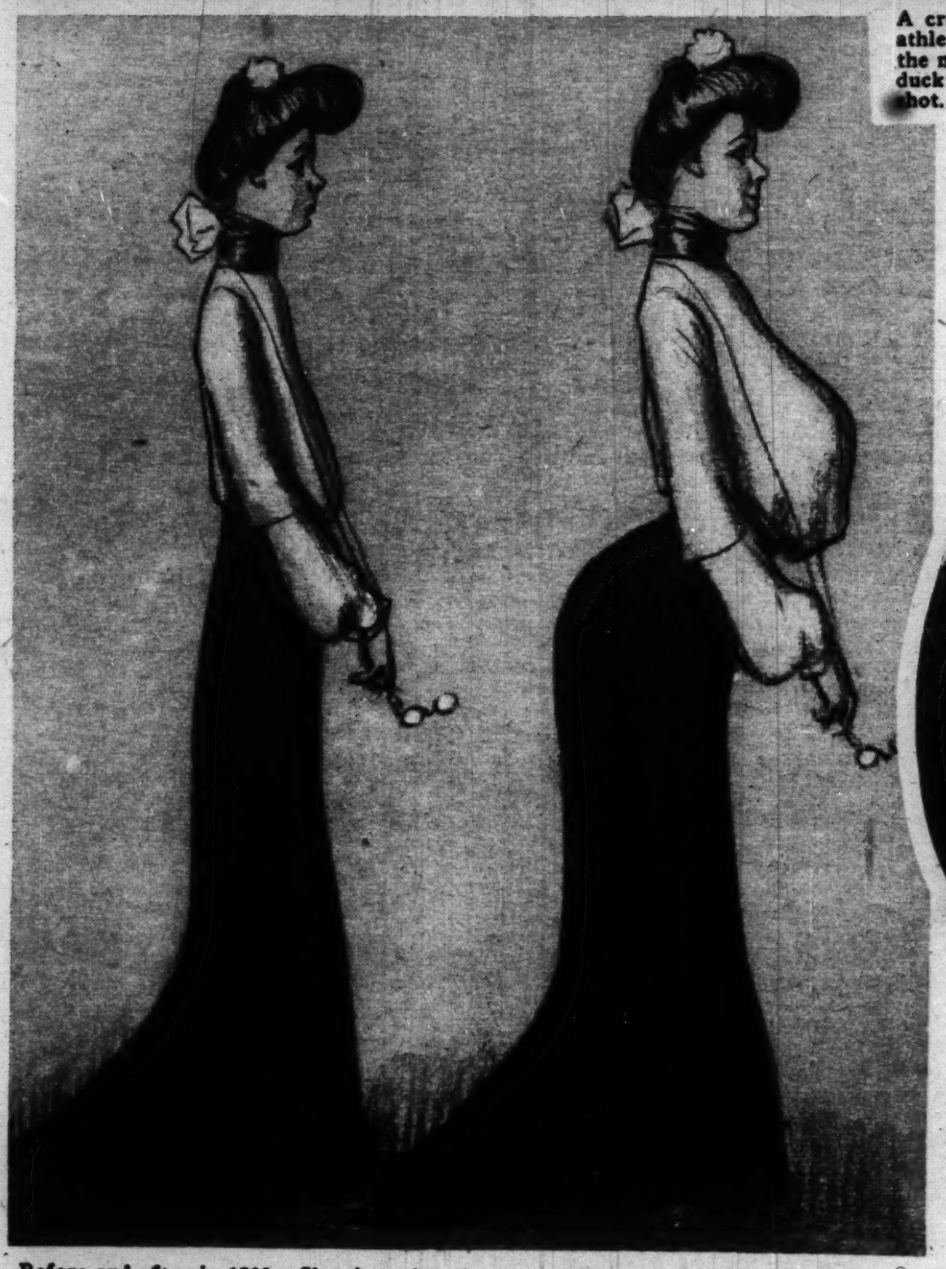
A croquet tournament in 1902. The athletic girl from Wellesley—she in the nifty little red tam and the white duck skirt—is about to make a crack shot.

The very last word in sartorial splendor was the shirtwaist man in the oxblood striped shirt and the wash tie, to say nothing of the watch fob and the crash pants.



Before and after in 1900. Showing what the advertising pages threatened to accomplish for any lady who dared take a chance with pneumatic shape accessories. Or were they made of wire?

Sunday evening, in the year nineteen hundred and three was a time of dulcet tones and the closest of harmony. "The Message of the Violet," "The Congo Love Song," and "Bedelia" were prime favorites with the young men who came a-wooing.

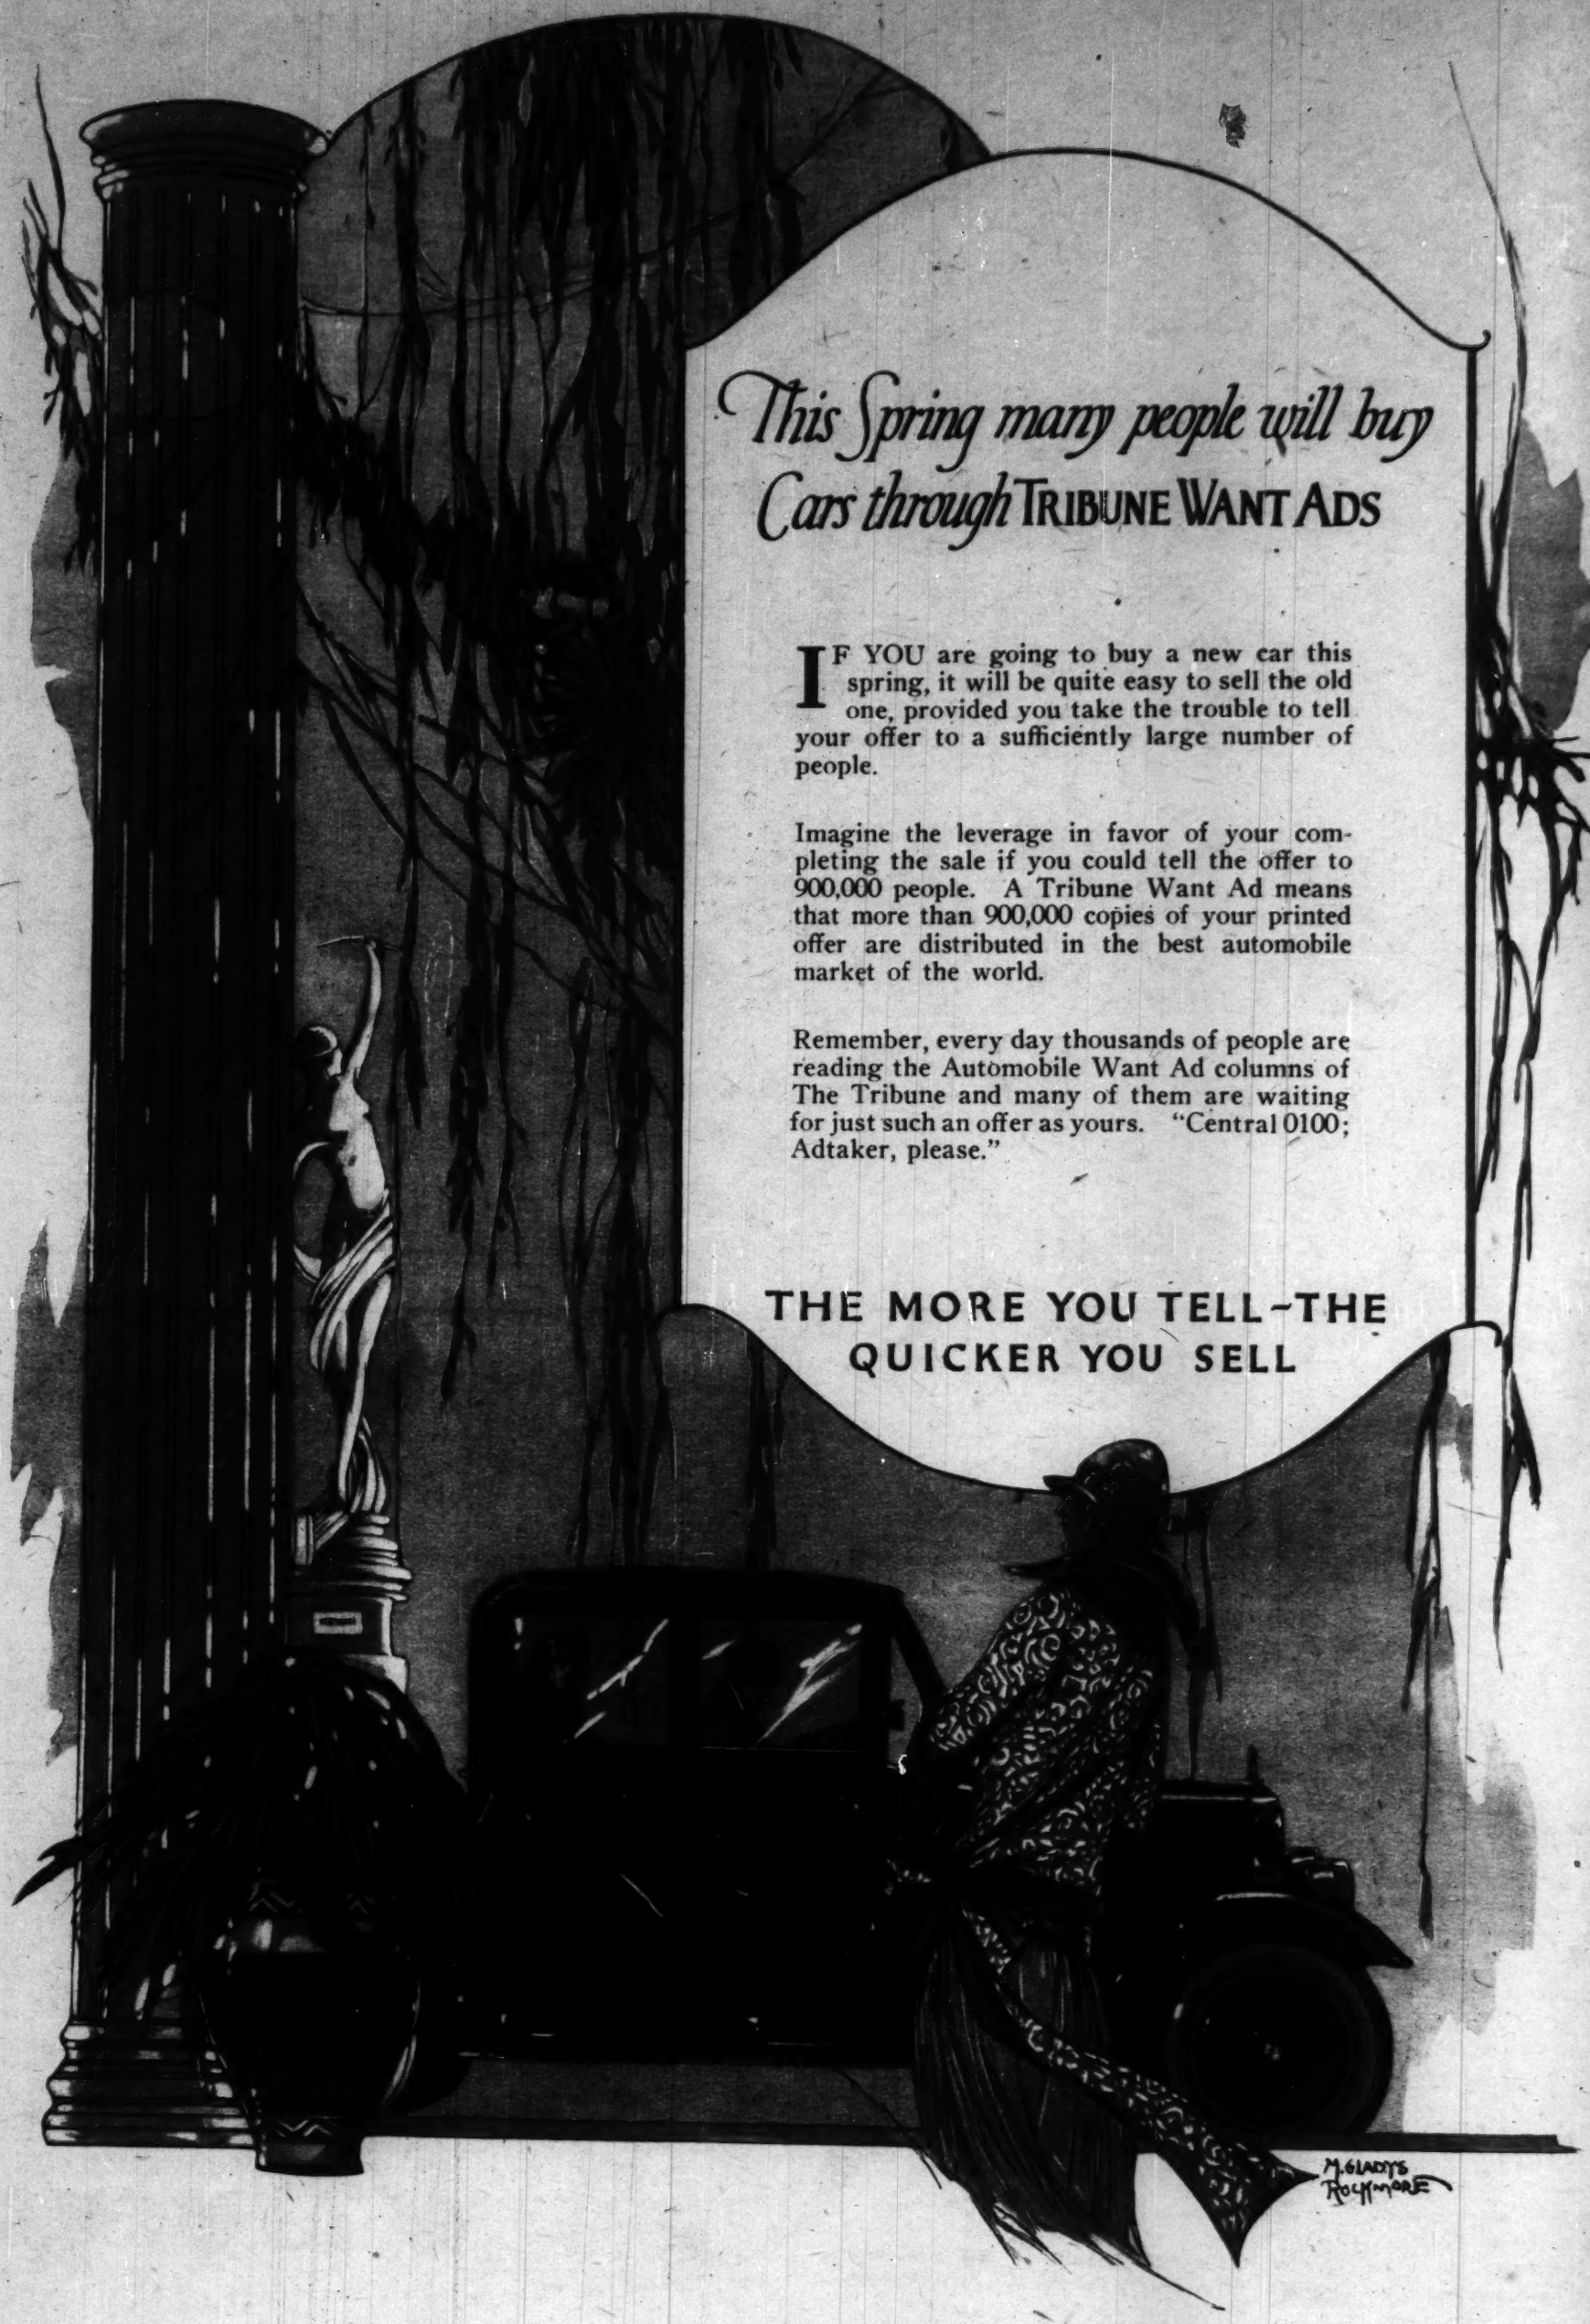
"Really, I don't see what the young people are coming to—staying out till after 10 o'clock at night on straw rides! And only three chaperons!" Even in those days the older generation was upset about the younger generation.

"Pardon me, but does my hat annoy you?" Whether it did or didn't made not the slightest difference to any male in the seat behind, overcome as he must have been by such a vision of beauty.

No masquerade party in 1898 was complete without one masker who came as the yellow kid.

The sub-debs of the early nineteen hundreds, although these were the days before the Chauve-Souris had begun to color amateur shows, made a pretty snappy showing, all rigged out in crepe paper dresses for the beauty chorus of "The Brownies in Fairyland."

A lady very much negligee twenty odd years ago was a different proposition from her sisters today. The decorous Mother Hubbard is no more, and the silk knickers have arrived. Likewise the complexion cream has given way to the liquid mud massage.



This Spring many people will buy Cars through TRIBUNE WANT ADS

IF YOU are going to buy a new car this spring, it will be quite easy to sell the old one, provided you take the trouble to tell your offer to a sufficiently large number of people.

Imagine the leverage in favor of your completing the sale if you could tell the offer to 900,000 people. A Tribune Want Ad means that more than 900,000 copies of your printed offer are distributed in the best automobile market of the world.

Remember, every day thousands of people are reading the Automobile Want Ad columns of The Tribune and many of them are waiting for just such an offer as yours. "Central 0100; Adtaker, please."

THE HAUNTED EGG.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

OF course, the Teenie Weenies had made arrangements for an Easter egg. The General had ordered it days ago from an old hen who lived near by. To make sure she would not forget, for the old hen was terribly forgetful, the General had tied a string around the middle toe of her left foot. Easter was a great day for the little folks—it was the one day they were allowed to eat their fill of egg. They usually cut a hole in the shell, and then the Cook would scoop out what he needed to fill the orders. Some of the Teenie Weenies liked their egg fried, some poached or baked, and once in a long time they boiled it whole, but that was such a great task it was seldom done.

"Do you know, General," said the Lady of Fashion the day before Easter, "I think it would be lovely to have a sort of picnic dinner tomorrow. We could have the egg brought over to that big bush by the creek, and we could take out some bread and cake and things——"

"Plenty of cake!" shouted the Dunce, who was carving a gun for one of the twins out of a toothpick.

"Yes, lots of cake and a few cooking things so we could build a fire and cook the egg," continued the Lady of Fashion.

"I'm for it," cried the Clown. "I am, too." "And me." "And me," chorused the rest of the little people, that is, all but Grandpa, who grumbled something about the "damp ground."

Anyhow, it was decided to have the picnic, and the little women set to work at once baking cakes, cookies, and other dainties for the party.

On Easter morning the Cowboy, the Chinaman, Paddy Pinn, and the Dunce were sent after the egg, while the rest of the Teenie Weenies carried the baskets of food, cooking things, and dishes over to the bank of the creek. The men gathered dried sticks and the Cook soon built a great fire, while the rest of the little folks waited for the arrival of the egg. They waited and waited for the longest time, but still no egg appeared, and finally the General sent the Indian off down the creek in his pea pod canoe in search of the men who had been sent after it.

Presently loud shouts in the distance announced the coming of the egg, and soon the little men came dragging it on a sledge.

"Oh, what a lovely egg!" cried the Lady of Fashion, as the little folks gathered about the sledge. "Let's boil it. It would be such fun to boil it whole, right in its shell."

Then the strangest thing happened—the Teenie Weenies almost stopped breathing and their eyes nearly popped out of their heads, for out of the egg came a voice—a faint voice but plenty loud enough for all to hear: "I—I—I don't want to be boiled."

"LAWSY," gasped Miss Jackson, the colored nurse, who was holding the Guff baby in her arms. "What dat?"

"A HANTED EGG," gurgled Gogo.

There was a crackling of shell, and the next instant the Dunce, pale with fright, popped his head out of the egg.

"What in the name of sense does this mean?" asked the astonished General.

"It's a joke, General. Just a joke," answered the Cowboy, laughing so hard he could scarcely talk. "We found this empty egg shell on the way back, and we thought it would be fun to have you break open the shell and find the Dunce inside."

"Well, I wasn't gona be boiled!" shouted the Dunce.

"We put the Dunce inside the shell and then cemented it up," continued the Cowboy. "The other egg is hidden back in the woods and we'll get it now."

How the little people laughed! They laughed until their tiny sides were sore. The other egg was soon brought up, and the Cook set to work cooking for the hungry Teenie Weenies. He cooked for nearly an hour and the little people ate their fill of Easter egg, stopping every now and then to laugh, whenever they thought of the frightened Dunce bursting out of the egg shell.

This natural fresh food is freeing thousands from all the ills of constipation

IN place of drugs which upset digestion and actually increase the trouble—instead of cathartics which have to be taken in larger and larger doses—

Physicians and hospitals today are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast! It is not a medicine, but a fresh corrective food which simply assists nature to restore normal, healthy conditions.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which help to increase the bulk of our concentrated modern diet, and stimulate the intestinal muscles to act regularly and naturally.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of treating constipation by gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to act for themselves.

Hundreds of thousands of men and women are being freed from all the evils of constipation by the regular eating of Fleischmann's Yeast. It is in no sense a purgative, and produces no sudden violent action. It must be eaten regularly to achieve results. Eat two or three cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night.

If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

"Assured perfect regularity"

"Since I was eleven years old," a New Yorker wrote us recently, "I had used everything that could be suggested for constipation—without a cure. Three operations had been necessary. And then three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day for a period of one month not only assured perfect regularity, but brought me back to my normal weight."

DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN----

CHICAGO'S GREAT AMERICAN DERBY was revived at Hawthorne in 1916? It wasn't like the golden days when the American Derby at Washington park was America's greatest race. But it stirred wonderful memories. Now the Illinois Jockey club plans to reopen racing at Hawthorne. Perhaps, some day, the old Derby will be back to Chicago with all its ancient pomp and thrill and glory.

What a Little Care of the Skin Will Do

By Mme. Jeannette

Once I asked a friend why she bought so many hats. I couldn't help it, for each time I saw her she wore a new one.

"Because I am tired of my face," she said, "and since I can't change it, I can at least wear something above it that is pretty, and cheers me up to look at."

No wonder she was tired of her face. There were weary lines about her eyes and mouth; her skin was marred by dark patches, where dust had collected in the pores; and her whole face looked uncared for and unwholesome.

"How much time do you spend in a month buying hats?" I asked. She could not say exactly, but admitted she was constantly shopping for them.

"And how much time do you give to the care of your skin?"

She shook her head in an annoyed way, and said, "Why bother with a face like mine?"

I saw that she was thoroughly discouraged with her appearance, and although I was sorry for her, I was angry too. For her eyes and brows were lovely, and her features, though not beautiful, had the winning charm that irregularity often gives.

It was the tired lines and poor complexion that prevented her from being a very pretty woman.

"If you would spend just a tiny fraction of the time you give to buying hats on caring for your complexion," I told her, "you would save a lot of money, and be a far happier woman."

I told her to bathe her face with warm water (not hot) and then to cover it with Pompeian Night Cream, patting in gently with the tips of the fingers. The pores, made receptive by the warm water, drink in eagerly this good pure cream. Then with absorbent cotton softly remove the cream. All dust particles that may have collected during the day will be taken away and the pores allowed to breathe freely through the night.

I made my friend promise that she would devote a short time every day to the care of her skin and let me know how she liked it.

Yesterday I saw her again — and what a change! The lines were noticeably fewer and fainter, all the dark patches had disappeared, and, best of all, I saw a happy smiling light in her lovely eyes!

"Well," I said, "I think I've seen that hat before. Haven't you bought a new one lately?"

"I haven't bought a new hat this month," she laughed. "And I'll tell you what you did for me—you taught me that I had a dirtier face than any little schoolgirl. I would not have believed that my skin could ever be so white and smooth again. I've done just what you told me to do with Pompeian Night Cream, and I'm so interested in my improved looks now that I've forgotten all about new hats."

If your skin is of the oily type you should not use a greasy cream by day, confining your use of such preparation to retiring time.

At the end of the dance

FROM the ballroom floated the strains of a waltz, and from out beyond came the sleepy night-sounds —the late call of a bird, the faint whispering of leaves in the summer breeze.

The man watched the woman before him in the mellow glow of the lanterns, drinking in her loveliness with eyes that could not leave her face.

"What is it?" she asked softly. "You look as if you were in a dream."

"I think this is a dream, and you a dream woman," he answered; "for I never saw anyone so lovely! There is something that makes you stand entirely alone, in a delicate, glowing radiance. I think the greatest charm of all is your wonderful coloring."

The last notes of the waltz were quivering into silence. "That is the end," she said, and smiled up at him. "I think it is the beginning," he answered, still watching her.

"Don't Envy Beauty—Use Pompeian"

When you use the Pompeian Beauty Trio you can feel assured that your skin is always fresh and glowing, and that it will remain so almost indefinitely.

Pompeian Day Cream is a vanishing cream that is absorbed by the skin, protecting it from dust, wind and sun. The delicate film that remains on the surface after the Day Cream has disappeared holds powder and rouge so well that constant repowdering is unnecessary.

Pompeian Beauty Powder is of so soft and fine a texture that it goes on smoothly and evenly. A light coating will last a long time; for this powder has, to a remarkable degree, the quality of adhering.

The Bloom is a rouge that is absolutely harmless. It comes in the desired shades—light, medium, dark, and orange tint.

Use the Pompeian Trio together for Instant Beauty; for great care has been taken that all Pompeian Preparations blend perfectly.

Remember, first the Day Cream, next the Beauty Powder, then a touch of Bloom, and over all another light coating of the Powder.

Pompeian Day Cream (vanishing)	60c per jar
Pompeian Beauty Powder	60c per box
Pompeian Bloom (the rouge)	60c per box
Pompeian Lip Stick	25c each
Pompeian Fragrance	30c a can
Pompeian Night Cream	50c per jar

CANAL SAFET DEPENDS ON B GUNS, AIR FLE

Maneuvers Indic Defense Needs

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENN

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribu

PANAMA CITY, April 1.—Afte pling the Panama canal on th tic side theoretically by an a tack in the recent navy mane the Black (or "enemy") fleet w its way into a sheltered positi hind unfortified Taboga isla the Pacific side, and there yond the range of the land gu stroyed in theory the Miraflores draining Miraflores lake and co ing the "destruction" of the can

This feat called renewed attent the project, which congress so fa failed to appropriate for, of addit teen-inch guns with a range of yards to the Atlantic and Pacif trances to the canal. The guns a ready available, being those pro for the battleships scrapped unde naval armament treaty.

At comparatively small cost the tional land defense could be pro For example, the cost of the works, and gun installation at T island would not exceed $7,000,000 at the Atlantic end less than $5,00 it is estimated.

Canal Guns Outranged.

The fourteen-inch guns now mo at the canal approaches have a of 25,000 yards on the Pacific, on the Atlantic side. Both the J and Japanese navies have battl mounting sixteen-inch guns w range of 40,000 yards.

The land defense project, whic hoped congress will approve next session, calls for four sixte guns on Taboga island and two o ico island as the outer line of p tion on the Pacific side and fou teen-inch guns on the Atlantic With such guns no navy of ex strength would be able to get w gun range of the canal.

With Taboga unfortified and t inch guns on the Pacific side ca of shooting only 25,000 yards, an e with a range of 40,000 yards pick off our ships debouching fro canal, raking them one by one fo aft. The enemy would be out of not only of the 14 inch land gun the 12 inch mortar batteries firing piercing shells from Flamenco and of the 16 inch gun we have isthmus at present. This gun, mo on Perico island, has been fir many times that its range is only yards.

Problem of Air Control.

Some naval officers, like A Pratt of the general board, t that with the development of ai fare it would be a useless expe place any more big guns on isthmus. If we control the air say, we can prevent any navy making a frontal attack on the If we do not control the air we prevent the destruction of the in any event. The problem of ing the canal is purely an air pr say these officers.

Admiral Pratt thinks that a n of traveling guns might profita placed on the isthmus and a netw good roads constructed to enab land forces to beat off land landed from a fleet to carry out attack on the canal, the only attack in the future, he believe adequate air defense is provi guard against a frontal attack fr sea.

The army is opposed to any sive construction of military holding that such avenues wo the enemy as much as the d Numerous bridges are needed. could be destroyed before an att force, but otherwise the jung army officers, should be left to an army. Gen. Clarence Edwa pedition demonstrated that a lan could cut its way through the at the rate of six miles a day, army thinks the rate of p should be made no easier by re struction.

Mosquitoes to Fight.

"In the case of a land atta mosquitoes out there in the jun be fighting on our side," dryly o one army officer.

Although 17,000 troops ough maintained in the Canal Zone t times, the quarters provided ar quate for the present force of 7, are fast becoming unin through the deterioration pro the tropical climate.

"Unless congress provides rebuilding of our barracks w have to send home what army here," said a quartermaster o

Congress at the last session all the appropriations asked $30,000 for ammunition and $2 fire control. There is not ev quate shelter for supplies. As several million dollars' worth sent here spoiled during the ra son.
